Vol. 138, No. 1 January 6, 1940

PERCENTAGE

THE dawn of 1940 finds this desk littered with the reports of assays and autopsies on the pictures of '39, by several and many critics, critical organizations, experts variously competent and incompetent.

By the sharp clear January light that floods into the upper peaks along Rockefeller canyon it is to be discovered that all the opinions and lists of "bests" pertain to the art of the motion picture, not the business.

In the whole lot of them there is not one report on the most profitable motion picture, or pictures.

Such a report most likely would be found to coincide in several instances with the critical opinion as to pictures and probably more closely with the judgment of personalities recorded in the "Moneymakers of 1939" poll. But to arrive at the most profitable pictures would require more combined accounting than the motion picture industry is likely ever to do.

It would be illuminating, indeed, if we could know, across the whole field of production, the answer to "what price success?"

WERE that kind of accounting possible, it might be that Mickey Mouse would be high among the box-office bargains, on a calculation of dollars spent and paid against admission dollars drawn. No such analysis is possible. It would in retrospect seem probable that in the days of 1916-7 a series of shorts, the two-reel Chaplins of Lone Star, sold first run at fifty dollars, and no protection, came near to delivering the maximum in profits, the widest spread between studio costs and box-office receipts. It was just that which took Mr. Chaplin out of shorts into feature-length production, with much gain to his pocket and none for his art.

We could now be entertained and probably considerably informed if there could be had a column of figures reduced to percentages by an impersonal calculating machine responsive to nothing but the dollar facts.

Just for a guess, the winning picture, with the highest return per dollar invested, might turn out to be about the third of the Hardy family series—a piece of homespun not to be found in any of the catalogues of glory issued at year's end. There was an item with film rental returns in the region of ten or twelve times negative cost, and box office in proportion. To dally with tablecloth figures a moment, an equivalent investment success for the contemporary "biggest" picture would call for a return of about fifty millions of dollars, rental, not box-office gross.

The citations, Oscars and medals go always to glory and fame, not efficiency. Emotions make spendthrifts.

It is futile to dispute the way of the multitudes or the inevitable exultations, fireworks and euphemisms of showmanship, so essential to the merchandising of tinted shadows and fleeting sounds. But it would be nice if somewhere at intermission backstage, or maybe in a deep-carpeted board room, there could be each year a modest lapel button for the picture maker, be he producer, director, writer or actor, whose efforts transmuted the production dollar into the most profits. That would be about the business.

RISING peak costs, and swelling inventories, accompanying hectic pursuit of the bigger and bigger, remind one of the fervours of the old steamboat races on the Mississippi when in the fury of rivalry they sat a darky on the safety valve and tore up the decks for fuel. To be sure someone always won the race, and glory. Maybe the kudos brought fares and freights to pay off—but not for the boat that lost.

Speaking of steamboats, there's always to be remembered that one that Lincoln liked to tell about. It had a ten-horse boiler and a twenty-horse whistle. Every time they blew the whistle they had to stop the boat. That allegorically reminds one of the time when the "Ten Commandments" got so big that they shut down the studio to get their financial breath. However, they got it.

Now we have a picture so big that it took three directors and two corporations to make it.

Maybe there's important progress in the fact that, apparently, Mr. David Selznick had less trouble getting those millions for "The Wind" than Mr. David Wark Griffith had raising a hundred thousand dollars for "The Birth".

It chanced that Mr. Griffith's effort gave extraordinary returns to his madly daring investors, but the larger returns were to the whole industry, by the creation of a new motion-picture public, enriching all box offices. If basic accounting could be done, it would be found that Mr. Adolph Zukor's Famous Players, the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company, Triangle Pictures Corporation, V.L.S.E., and in lesser degree many another, were important beneficiaries of "The Birth of a Nation".

No equivalent opportunity of exploration of audience appears for Mr. Selznick's opus, but service of the same nature can be rendered.

As every showman knows, and never admits for publication, to put it in the words of an able circuit operator: "It has been amazing through '39 what a significant capacity the customers have had for going away from us, and staying away."

If, now, the potential consumer can be convinced of the continued, or renewed, ascendancy of the screen by a hurricane approach of "The Wind", there will be a blowing of good to the whole of the business, as a business.

There is no speculation in the assumption that "Gone With the Wind" has brought the motion picture into a degree of public attention rarely attained before, and probably never before to so large a public in sheer numbers. This can smooth the path of box-office merchandising for many another product of no relevancy whatever save that it is on the screen.

FOR sheer sweep of attention an inevitable coincidence of titles of show product comes to mind: "Uncle Tom's Cabin", "The Birth of a Nation" and now "Gone With the Wind". As to their basic materials, the three novels are somewhat of a piece, and curiously close together as third-class fiction by the canons of the art of writing. Clearly enough

Brewing

A BATTLE, in court, and probably in public statements, loomed this week, between United Artists on the one side, and Samuel Goldwyn, and possibly Warner Brothers on the other.

Warner Brothers Monday announced in Hollywood they would distribute Mr. Goldwyn's new "The Westerner." This arrangement has been consummated despite Mr. Goldwyn's contract with UA, now under dispute, which calls for exclusive distribution by them of his pictures. Neither Warner Brothers, nor Mr. Goldwyn, nor his attorney, Max Steuer, would comment, which was to be expected. However, UA did, through its attorney, Charles Schwartz, in New York, who said the firm would battle in the courts to prevent Mr. Goldwyn releasing pictures through any company other than UA.

The Warner-Goldwyn "deal" came as a general surprise. It had been rumored Mr. Goldwyn was negotiating with other distribution companies; but Warner had not been mentioned.

Mr. Goldwyn's suit to break his contract with UA, on the grounds that it had been violated by arrangements and by company formations by other UA partners, was thrown out of court in Wilmington, Delaware, last week, on the grounds that the action failed to properly join defendants.

UA officials are reputed to be willing to release Mr. Goldwyn from his contract, if he will give up his shares of stock in the company.

Warner sales officials, including Gradwell Sears, H. M. and Jack Warner, and H. B. Wallis, were conferring in Hollywood this week on future plans, not necessarily on Mr. Goldwyn.

Mr. Goldwyn was scheduled in New York this Sunday, to receive the award of the New York Film Critics for his picture, "Wuthering Heights."

United Artists late Wednesday quite unexpectedly announced from Hollywood the signing of James Roosevelt to its roster of independent producers on a long term sales and distribution contract.

Mr. Roosevelt recently organized his own Globe Productions Company, and he will first produce "The Bat," for UA release.

In the past year he had been vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions and he recently became president of Goldwyn Studios. His pictures will be produced at the Goldwyn studio.

the maximum emotional impact, and that at the box office, too, is to be had by expression—not too much refined by sharp discriminating skills, not too much controlled by tastes sharpened by the cultures of scholarship and experience.

Assuming acutely competent readership, or audience, any of the three stories could be told in ten thousand words, narrated on the screen in four reels, or less—but there would be no profit in seeking to serve that small and diffused public, through any cinema channel existing today.

THE New York Film Critics, reaching their decision after thirteen ballots over "The Wind," "Mr. Smith" and "Wuthering Heights," Samuel Goldwyn production, came to a tenable critics' decision on a picture for critics. There will be little debate, either, over the critics' "best actress" decision for Miss Vivien Leigh in the role of "Scarlett O'Hara." Her vehicle was tremendous opportunity, tremendous support, against which any faltering would have been magnified into failure.

Incidentally, Mr. Frank Nugent of the New York Times keeps insisting that "The Wind" is a vast mural, whereas examination of its antecedents will reveal that it is in fact a cyclorama, being thereby ever so much more dynamic than ever a mural can be. Murals hold the eyes, but this kinetic cyclorama takes them along with it.

Echoes

"SAM" KAPLAN has "come back."

"Sam," who has been a New York motion picture supply dealer for several years—but who was deposed in 1932 from stewardship of the country's strongest projectionists' union, the New York Local 306—last week was elected to that unit's executive board, after a bitter campaign, and despite newspaper articles which reopened old dossiers and hinted a renewed attack upon him.

Mr. Kaplan appears to control Local 306 again because a majority of the ten board members elected last Wednesday, are regarded as "Kaplan men."

James Petrillo, head of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, who says he doesn't like John L. Lewis, nor his CIO, and who forced elision of the Lewis name from several Chicago theatres two weeks ago, this week visited New York, and explained himself. He was no "censor," he said; he "just won't stand for any publicity for Lewis."

Neely Arrives!

SENATOR MATTHEW NEELY, sponsoring federal anti-block film selling legislation, arrived bright and early Wednesday at Washington for the opening of the new Congress with a public statement expressing the hope that the House would act quickly on his bill, passed by the Senate last July. Within a few days, the Senator said, he expects to receive definite information as to the action to be taken by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, which did not act on the measure at the last session.

On the House side of the Capitol, members pointed out at Wednesday's opening that its Committee has not yet had an opportunity to meet to develop its program for the session, and belief was expressed that the block booking bill would be taken up when reached in due time rather than be put at the head of the Committee's agenda.

The subject meanwhile was the topic of much discussion during the week, among distributor and exhibitor leaders, at a Hotel Astor "mass meeting" in New York, at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, and elsewhere. See page 20.

Imposition of new taxes to finance the national defense program was asked of Congress at the opening of the session Wednesday by President Roosevelt.

Discussing "the paramount necessity" of an adequate military and economic defense, the President, in his annual message, disclosed that the budget for the coming fiscal year will show reductions in expenditures planned for practically all other activities of the government. Expressing the hope that improving the economic prosperity will permit a reduction of the federal deficit, Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress for only "sufficient additional taxes to meet the emergency spending for national defense." He did not make any recommendations as to the form the new taxes should take.

President Roosevelt also asked Congress for extension of his authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with foreign governments, due to expire this year, calling such pacts "an indispensable part of the foundation of any stable and enduring peace." Motion picture provisions may be included in the reciprocal trade agreements that would be made or extended with several European and South American Governments.

Devoted almost exclusively to a discussion of the national defense program, the message touched only briefly upon other parts of the administration program, such as relief for the unemployed, the improvement of health and education and the extension of social security to larger groups.

To the Audience

GORDON GREENE, manager of the Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis, is "propagandizing"; but only to his patrons. Mr. Greene uses his screen, to tell them, at each performance, why they are able to see only the product of two "independents," Republic and Monogram. By special trailers, Mr. Greene has been telling his public that the Minnesota Amusement Company, controlled by Paramount, gets the other companies' product.

Mr. Greene's trailer statement blames his theatre competitors for the situation. It also details the cost of operating his theatre, a 4,300 seater, and the amount of money spent locally by the management.

Paramount home office executives commented that the Minnesota, formerly operated by the Minnesota Amusement Company, a Paramount partner, had been relinquished only after years of experimentation with all varieties of policies and with that product available which Mr. Greene now says would assure the theatre's success.

"The Minnesota always has been a problem child," one Paramount theatre official said. "We abandoned it only after trying every policy known to first run operators. It had its pick of all the product under contract to Minnesota Amusement and lost money. It had good stage shows added and couldn't be made to pay for them. It had stage shows made up of local talent and it didn't draw. It was closed for long periods at a time before our lease expired and when we were unable to negotiate more favorable lease terms, we did not renew."

Radio 95% Pure

LESS THAN five per cent of the radio-advertising continuities submitted to the Federal Trade Commission by broadcasting stations, networks and transcription companies during the year contained questionable representations, it was to be disclosed by the Commission Friday, in its annual report to Congress, which convenes next Wednesday.

The Commission read and marked 643,796 continuities, from which 29,143 were marked for further study as containing representations that might be false or misleading, not in compliance with actions, stipulations and orders of the Commission, or a basis for prospective cases which may not previously have been set aside for investigation.

An analysis of all advertising on the air studied by the Commission during the year shows that 42.4 per cent involved drugs and remedies, 10.4 per cent cosmetics and toiletries, 7.8 per cent food products and beverages, 6.8 per cent promotion plans and 5.3 per cent automobiles.

Product

WHETHER because of an extra heavy inventory of productions completed and "in the can," or because of the international situation's economic "pressures" making liquidation advisable, deponents sayeth not, but the fact remains that the ten large distributors this week had advance release dates pegged for 96 features, the largest number to be set beyond January 1st in many a year, running well into early summer in some instances, and comparing with the 60 advance dates in 1938, and 73 the year before.

A guide for showmen seeking advance dating information starts on page 13.

Eastward Ho!

THE PROGRESS of Mayor Fiorello La Guardia's "campaign" to take production from Hollywood for "his New York," has been chronicled from week to week. The Mayor of New York has seen many individuals who hold various positions in or related to the industry. The new Commissioner of Commerce or head of the New York Chamber of Commerce, Clendenin J. Ryan, Jr., has been quietly pushing the campaign. Florida and Arizona have lodged protests that if any moving is done it should be to their states and not to New York. But still LaGuardia continues to push his own production program. As yet it is not quite clear if everyone is serious in the matter, for no reasons other than the Broadway stage is handy and the production center used to be in New York, have been advanced in favor of eastern filming. A number of reasons, both good and bad, that might be suggested have not even been advanced.

Whether Mayor LaGuardia is serious or not, there is no doubt that the French are, for word reaches New York this week from Paris that the French industry regards the campaign to move the center of U. S. production from Hollywood to New York as one of the effects on the American industry resulting from the European War. It looks like the French are one up on the Mayor

Air Cartoon

THE MOTION PICTURE industry played Santa Claus to the radio again this year and was as bountiful as ever. One motion picture-radio holiday program that helped to keep America at the fireside—and out of the theatres—over the holiday was a presentation of "Pinocchio" on Christmas night. A cartoon on the air presents special difficulties, if not contradictions. In fact the answer to when is Walt Disney not Walt Disney might be when his characters are on the radio. The screen voices played "Pinocchio" on the Cecil B. DeMille "Lux Radio Theatre" and the story was that of the film, and of the Collodi classic, but Disney pictures must be seen and not merely heard to be appreciated. By radio program standards, the show was a success; but it did not measure up to the standards Disney has created in the medium he has chosen, film.

The Latins would ask "Cui bono?"—which might be rendered here as "Who gets what out of motion pictures on the radio?"

Television, 1940

BIG SCREEN TELEVISION, improved and of a size adequate for the theatre, is promised for 1940 by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, most active to date in regular daily telecasting, through its National Broadcasting Company.

This is the first definite promise of theatre-size television to come from any of the large telecasters, and was made by Mr. Sarnoff in a year end statement. He also promised television relay stations for 1940, using frequencies of 500 megacycles and upwards, described by Mr. Sarnoff as an important step towards a television network, and which has been the subject of discussion in connection with some recent RCA experiments with General Electric's telecasting in upstate New York.

The birthday of broadcasting in the U. S., he reminded, is generally regarded as Election Day, 1920, when the returns of the Harding-Cox election were broadcast.

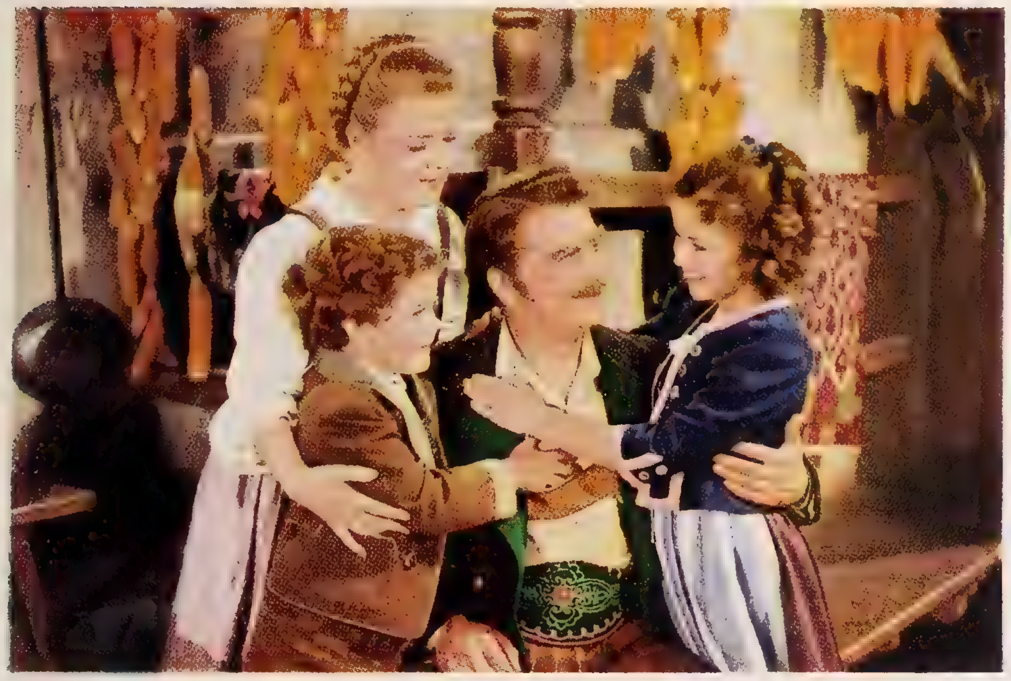
NEW YEAR'S PARTY for the trade, left. Joseph Bernhard and Herbert Yates, guests, and Nate Blumberg, host, at a year end cocktail party at the Astor in New York. The reception, an annual, was inaugurated by Mr. Blumberg two years ago when he became president of Universal.

OFF TO THE WARS, or at least as much war as can be found in England, are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montgomery and Ben Goetz, right, leaving New York this week for London to resume work on "Busman's Honeymoon" for MGM, Mr. Montgomery to star, Mr. Goetz to assume charge of production as managing director for MGM in England. The picture was interrupted in September.

"THE BLUE BIRD," Maurice Maeterlinck's classic fantasy, has been translated to the screen by Darryl Zanuck and 20th Century-Fox as the newest vehicle for Shirley Temple. In the scenes from the lavish Technicolor production at right and below Miss Temple as Mytyl and Russell Hicks as Tyltyl are shown being introduced to the wonders of easy living by Mr. and Mrs. Luxury, and with their family after their strange adventures in search of the Blue Bird. The picture will open January 19 at the Hollywood theatre, New York, on a two-a-day policy at advanced prices.



WALT DISNEY with the figurines of characters in "Pinocchio," his second full length feature cartoon which will be ready for RKO release in February. The picture was two years in the making.

FIRST ESSAY by the screen at the translation of John Steinbeck's sociological novels to motion picture usage is Hal Roach's "Of Mice and Men," a study in degeneracy. Left to right, Leigh Whipper as Crooks; Oscar O'Shea as Jackson; Roman Bohnen as Candy and Burgess Meredith and Betty Field as George and Mae.

HARRY EDINGTON, left, has been named executive producer for RKO in charge of all high budget production at the studios in Hollywood. Mr. Edington, a former MGM producer, last year organized Famous Productions.

96 RELEASE DATES SET FOR NEXT SIX MONTHS

Inventories at New Highs, Giving Exhibitors Opporunity to Date New Product Far Into the New Year

Paramount, Fox, RKO Product Leads in Advance Release List

Release dates of feature pictures pegged beyond January 1*st for three years compare as follows:*

	1940	1939	1938
COLUMBIA	5	6	6
METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER	8	7	12
MONOGRAM	6	14	4
PARAMOUNT	22	6	3
REPUBLIC	..	1	5
RKO RADIO	19	4	10
TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX	21	12	13
UNIVERSAL	9	6	6
UNITED ARTISTS	2	1	7
WARNER BROTHERS	4	3	7
	96	60	73

With a film inventory running into new highs, the ten large companies entered the New Year, Monday, with an unprecedented number of feature release dates pegged beyond January 1st, giving exhibitors a long-range opportunity to date and plan new product unusually far ahead.

Exactly 96 feature release dates beyond January 1st, some of them running well into the summer, had been set as of New Year's Day, running well ahead of other years, as best shown by a comparison of the 60 release dates set beyond and as of January 1st, 1939, and the 73 set beyond and as of January 1st, 1938.

For buying, booking and advance planning and exploitation purposes, the record of advance release dates, as herein combined, company by company, can serve as a basic showman's guide.

Motion Picture Herald, on December 2nd, reported that 223 of the 500 1939-40 features promised were already "in the can." Almost 100 of that number were completed for release in 1940. Forty-four per cent of the production promised for 1939-40 was completed in the first four months of the year. Slightly less than a quarter was delivered.

22 for Paramount

Paramount leads the list of feature releases dated beyond January 1st, 22 dates having been set for every release up until June. The pictures have already been completed. Twentieth Century-Fox is a very close second, with a total of 21 dates listed. That schedule is complete through April and the release dates of one picture in May, two in June and two in July are definitely established. Third on the list, and also close behind the leaders, is RKO Radio with 19 feature release dates for the new year determined. These three companies are mainly responsible for the unusual number of features pegged for definite release so far in advance.

At the corresponding period in 1938 and 1939 on releases dated beyond January 1st for the respective years, Paramount had only announced release dates for one or two months. At present the dates for the next five months have been announced. A comparison with previous years shows that Twentieth Century-Fox had been accustomed to list release dates at the New Year's for about three months. This year the list is almost doubled in time. A year ago RKO had only the release dates for the current month; this year the dates are set for almost four months.

Some of the other companies are keeping their usual policy of announcing the release dates of features for one or two months in advance. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's release dates have been established for two months and Universal has set its schedule for a similar period. Columbia and Warner Brothers are keeping to the period of about a month to six weeks ahead in release dates. Monogram's and United Artists' dates cover the present month. Republic has not set any definite release dates in advance.

No Shortage Possible

The threat of a shortage is definitely not in the immediate future. The 1939 part of the 1939-40 season showed no indication of a production curtailment but, if anything, that production in that period was pitched at a high rate.

Following are the release dates, titles and stars of pictures pegged beyond January 1st, under 1939-40 contract commitments:

Columbia

January 4th—Two Fisted Rangers, with Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith

January 10th—Music in My Heart, Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth

January 18th—His Girl Friday, Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell

January 26th—The Lone Wolf Strikes, Warren William, Joan Perry

January 31st—Convicted Woman, Rochelle Hudson, Glenn Ford

In addition, Columbia has nine titles selected with no release date assigned. These include: "Blazing Six Shooters," "Blondie on a Budget," "Bullets for Rustlers," "Criminal Cargo," "Five Little Peppers at Home," "I Married Adventure," "Pioneer of the Frontier," "Texas Express" and "Too Many Husbands."

REDS IMPOSE NEW NEWS CENSORSHIP

Censorship of all outgoing press dispatches was reimposed by Russia last Friday. After the revolution of 1917 a strict censorship was placed on foreign correspondents. The regulation was relaxed last May when correspondents were given permission to send messages freely being subject to immediate expulsion from the Soviet Union if the dispatches were "hostile."

The newsreel companies were not affected by the "relaxing" of the regulations eight months ago and the restoration of absolute censorship does not change the situation with the respect to motion pictures. Since the Reds went into power in Russia every bit of film for newsreels has been photographed by the Russian government. From time to time special U. S. expeditions have been given permission to photograph on their own but in these cases all film had to be developed and approved by the Red government. The newsreel companies get their material through the Soviet agency, Amkino, in New York. No material has been furnished since the war began.

President Getulio Vargas of Rio de Janeiro has established a Department of Press and Propaganda. Certain modifications are made in the rules governing outgoing dispatches and national propaganda is regulated. The new department also will act as censor for the theatre, motion picture, radio, literature of all kinds and travel promotion.

NATIONAL SCREEN SETS CENTRALIZED ACCESSORY SELLING, SIGNING THREE

RKO Pathe, Universal and Paramount Contract with Advertising Accessories, Inc., for Manufacture, Sale, Handling

Motion picture distribution-exhibition this week finally saw the beginning of the "streamlining" of the manufacturing and merchandising of advertising materials and accessories used by exhibitors to sell their programs to the public.

National Screen Starts Service

It came through the establishment of a national system of centralized selling and distribution of ad items by Advertising Accessories, Inc., as set up by Herman Robbins' National Screen Service, after many attempts had been made for a similar structure down through the years, the most notable of which was made by Elmer Pearson, a decade ago.

Contracts to cover the exclusive manufacture, sale and physical handling of both accessories and trailers for RKO Pathe and Universal were announced Tuesday in New York by Charles Casanave, vice-president of Advertising Accessories, following last week's signing of a similar contract with Paramount Pictures, the deals making National's new affiliate the sole future source of accessory supply for the 9,000 to 10,000 theatre customers, overlapping and otherwise, serviced with film by the three distributors.

The new project is cited as being the first specialization of this branch of merchandising in distribution-exhibition as now constituted, the first authorized sale and distribution of ad accessories by any organization other than the distributor's own, and declared by its sponsors to be "the beginning of a new phase in advertising a picture by an exhibitor."

Other Deals Awaited

From indications of either pending or contemplated negotiations, it appears likely that similar arrangements will soon be made with other distributors. National Screen Service for years has produced and distributed the film trailers of Columbia, Monogram, Republic and Twentieth Century-Fox, besides the three distributors just signed to the combination trailer-accessory arrangement. National also provides trailers for most independent and imported product. It does not, however, distribute the trailers of either Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer or Warner Brothers, which handle their own, but whether this would preclude their consummating a deal for the centralization of their accessories remains to be seen.

The field centralization will be effected, first, through the present National Screen branches in Atlanta, Boston, Charlotte, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Memphis, Minneapolis, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, San Francisco, Seattle, Washington, D. C. In the remaining key cities, where no National branch exists, space will be rented in the branches of Paramount Pictures: in Albany, at 1044 Broadway; Buffalo, 464 Franklin Street; Cincinnati, 1214 Central Parkway; Indianapolis, 116 West Michigan Street; Milwaukee, 1121 North Eighth Street; New Haven, 82 State Street; Pittsburgh, 1727 Boulevard of the Allies; Portland, Ore., 909 Northwest 19th Street, and Salt Lake City, at 200 East First Street South. Portland and Seattle later may be combined.

'TWAS A BIG YEAR FOR FILM EXTRAS

Motion picture extras received in 1939 more than $400,000 more than in 1938. The total salary to extras was $3,167,896. Atmosphere jobs placed by the Central Casting Bureau rose to 294,688, against 256,426 in 1938 and 296,107 in 1937.

Actual selling will be done by National's present 80 trailer salesmen in the 20-odd places where they have branches, and by men to be taken on for both trailer and accessory selling in the nine cities where headquarters are to be set up in Paramount branches.

The company was unable this week to estimate present or eventual savings to exhibitors through the new centralization, because of the many present forms of selling ad material and accessories, some now selling outright, as with RKO and Universal, others renting with a deposit, as is Paramount.

All exhibitors will be signed on a straight rental basis, exclusive servicing contracts for material required on pictures of companies participating in the plan. Rental charges to the exhibitor will be on a weekly payment basis, the same as with National's present trailer service arrangements. No rental deposits will be required. Every item under the plan will be rented, nothing will be sold.

Contracts for One Year

The service will be available to exhibitors on and after February 1st, and contracts will run one year.

Advertising Accessories' contracts with distributors are for five years, also starting February 1st.

Because the distributors give Advertising Accessories the exclusive right to manufacture and sell its advertising and accessory material, the distributors' exhibitor customers have no alternative but to purchase the service, and because they, too, sign with Advertising Accessories for exclusive servicing, Advertising Accessories sees the immediate curtailment, and eventual elimination of "bootlegging" of copyrighted advertising material by unauthorized poster exchanges. Distributors have for years been attempting to stamp out the unauthorized re-selling of their advertising material, posters, stills, lithographs and such under copyrights claimed by them. Their exhibitor customers purchased material, sold it, after usage, to unauthorized poster exchanges, which, in turn, sold it over and over, inexpensively, to subsequent runs.

Further advantages, besides price, anticipated to accrue to exhibitors from the centralization are the convenience of shopping for all types of advertising matter and accessories, both standard and special, at one place, and a modernization of this form of material, as promised by the new company.

Royalty Percentage

The distributors, many of whose accessory departments are understood to have been operated at a loss, will receive an undisclosed royalty percentage from Advertising Accessories from the sale of materials on their pictures. Furthermore, according to the sponsors, sales are anticipated to be greater than in the past, because the system will have a nationwide concentration of specialized sales effort in actual contact with exhibitors, the same as film salesmen, as against the present distributor method of having ad sales handled through ad clerks or others in their exchanges. "Ad Sales and Accessory Drives" by distributors have been frequent, of necessity, to "pep up" selling.

The sponsors anticipate setting up one of the largest art departments in the commercial field, and to its own staff, and to outside acquisitions, will absorb many of the discontinued art and accessory department workers of the home offices of distributors participating in the centralization, as it has already done in the case of Paramount. Don Velde, head of Paramount ad sales, and Vincent Trotta, head of its art department, have already been acquired. In some cases, the distributors are to absorb workers.

Insisting that there will be no "stereotyping" or "standardizing" of ad and accessory material by Advertising Accessories, Mr. Casanave Wednesday disclosed that original layouts, ideas, visuals and the like will continue to originate with the individual companies' advertising managers and their staffs and these, when approved by the companies, will be sent on to Advertising Accessories for development and manufacture.

Special Accessories

Special accessories will continue to be manufactured by the five-year-old National Screen Accessories, parent of the new Advertising Accessories, and subsidiary of National Screen Trailers. These include novelties, oil painting processes, "Hollywood Specials," photo enlargements of all kinds, banners and the like.

All standard accessories formerly handled by the distributors, such as posters, lithographs, stills, ad mats, and such, will continue to be manufactured, for the present, by the lithographers and other manufacturers now employed by the respective distributors, because, in most instances, term contracts are in force. At the expiration of these contracts, new blanket contracts will probably be effected by Advertising Accessories, with one or another of the lithographers.

With the inception of the centralization on February 1st, Advertising Accessories will take over all of the standard size paper now on hand in each of the exchanges of the present three contracting distributors, to sell and distribute through the new system.

Physical distribution by Advertising Accessories will continue through the standard media: local film delivery trucks, air express, parcel post, pickup, and the like. There will be no changes in the present standard sizes of ad and display items.

Headquarters of Advertising Accessories will be in the same "Film Row" building which houses both National Screen and National Screen Accessories, at 630 Ninth Avenue, New York.

Officers of Advertising Accessories are the same as National Screen Accessories: Herman Robbins, president; Charles L. Casanave, vice-president and general manager; Toby Gruen, treasurer, and George Dembow, general sales manager. Mr. Robbins is also president, and Mr. Gruen is vice-president of National Screen Trailers.

None of the distributor contractors have any corporate or, so far as is known, any contributing financial participation in the system.

It brought immediate favorable response from organized exhibitor groups which usually are at odds over most trade practices, from the Abram Myers and Ed Kuykendalls, to the Max Cohens and Harry Brandts.

FILM AS "AMERICAN WAY" DISCUSSED ON THE AIR BY HAYS AND QUIGLEY

Herald's Moneymaker Poll Is Text of Radio Attentions to Screen as Only True Democracy Among the Arts

WILL H. HAYS AND MARTIN QUIGLEY AT THE CBS MICROPHONE

The motion picture as an expression of democracy, an art and an industry of "the American way," of, for and by the people, was discussed before the audience of the nationwide network of the Columbia Broadcasting System last Thursday by Will H. Hays and Martin Quigley.

The "news peg" of the occasion was Mr. Quigley's announcement to the air of the results of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S annual poll of exhibitors on "The Ten Best" of the moneymakers at the box offices of 1939.

The broadcast was the culminating attention of a week in which the HERALD'S "Ten Best" got its annual institutional attentions from the press of the nation, its rotogravure sections and periodicals of comment.

Of special interest to the industry were the speakers' emphases on the success of self-regulation in the conduct of production, with attentions by Mr. Quigley to Mr. Hays' years of leadership, and in turn Mr. Hays' observation that Mr. Quigley "has contributed very much indeed to the processes by which we have planned to keep the American motion pictures thus attuned to American ideals."

Democracy Stressed

In the course of his introduction of Mr. Hays, Mr. Quigley said:

"MOTION PICTURE HERALD has just completed its regular annual survey to discover which motion picture personalities amongst all of those who appear on the screen are the public's favorites.

"It is fitting that the methods employed in this survey are the methods of democratic procedure because the motion picture is the sole art which is entitled to be described as democratic in its origin, development and patronage.

"It will be remembered that the motion picture, unlike painting, sculpture and music, did not depend for nurturing and support upon the patronage of kings and the riches of the aristocracy. The public alone has been the patron of this art.

"The film first ignored by the erudite and scoffed at by the intelligentsia, found its initial encouragement amongst the humble inhabitants of crowded industrial districts, many of whom, lately arrived in their America of opportunity, and as yet unschooled in the language of their adopted country, found happy relief from the language barrier in the then silent film which spoke the universal language of pictures.

"This survey is not based upon the opinions of critics. It does not concern itself with any of the abundant discussions and disquisitions which laboriously dissect and analyze the artistic implications of pictures and performers. Instead it goes straight to the heart of the public to find what preferences lie therein.

"It questions not why these preferences have been made. It is sufficient for us simply to know which players the public, in the exercise of its inalienable right of free choice, has determined it likes best.

"The democratic character of the HERALD survey is demonstrated in that it is based upon the votes cast by the whole public in the form of the admission price paid at the box-office. The theatre managers of the nation have told us which players the public paid most to see—which players received the greatest number of box office ballots.

Lists Ten Top Ranking Stars

"For 1939 the theatres report that the ten biggest money-making stars of the screen, in the order mentioned, are: Mickey Rooney, Tyrone Power, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Shirley Temple, Bette Davis, Alice Faye, Errol Flynn, James Cagney and Sonja Henie.

"The vote for these players is a vote for the pictures in which they have appeared. It is a significant fact that the predominant characteristics of the vehicles in which these players have ridden to popular acclaim are simplicity, wholesomeness and humanity.

"These are pictures which sought honestly to entertain and not mischievously to influence political, social or economic opinions.

"These are pictures which bespeak the American ideal and the best that has been contributed to this ideal out of the riches of the older civilizations. One will search in vain here for players who have sought to challenge the public interest with pictures specializing in the arty, the sophisticated or the suggestive.

"Vindication"

"The pictures which have made these players the public's preeminent favorites are a vindication of the reasons for, and a compliment to the success of, the American industry's system of voluntary, interior regulation which keeps straight the adjustment of the social and moral implications of American films to those ideals of life and behavior which are the source of this nation's greatness.

"I am privileged now to present one whose influence has been foremost upon the American film during the past eighteen years. His has been the voice which has successfully led the American motion picture industry in face of the inevitable responsibilities inherent in undertaking to provide its chief amusement to a vast audience of every age, group and condition of society."

"Progress of an Art"

Mr. Hays, taking up the thread of the broadcast, said:

"In conducting this poll, Mr. Quigley, and thus reporting it, you well call attention to the success of these individual stars and you celebrate the progress of an art and the achievements of an industry.

"It is of great interest to me each year to observe the result of the Popularity Poll of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, because it does depend upon the popular vote at the box office. My congratulations are most earnest to these stars who thus have been honored because the distinction has been gained through the free community selection exercised all over this land.

"It is as if, in an election, they have been made the people's choice this year by the voters themselves. The returns are compiled from the eighty-five millions of Americans who each week pass through the doors of the motion picture theatres in the United States alone. It is also the expression of approval of the public as participating partners in the whole partnership enterprise which is motion pictures.

"It is interesting to note also that the particular pictures in which these stars won this year's public acclaim dealt with human situations, wholesome themes and high American ideals.

"Symbols of Appreciation"

"I know I voice the wish of the distinguished artists honored tonight when I present them as symbols through whom is expressed the appreciation for the great army of artists and artisans—writers, actors, directors. technicians, producers and executives—whose combined efforts make motion pictures possible. Surely there is no other enterprise where success depends so much on intimate cooperation. Ours is indeed a great partnership. . . .

"Yet, as hard and faithfully as the creative branches may labor, irrespective of all thought and toil they expend, the value of what they do is judged only by the ultimate thing they produce, the possibilities for service of what they create. And however fine or artistic or ingenious this product may be, it is only valuable to mankind when it is made available for public good, translated into common capacity for its use, spread everywhere by distributors and exhibitors. Otherwise, it is like the light hidden beneath the bushel, or the talent buried in the ground. Indeed, the motion picture industry is a partnership.

CITE RESPONSIBILITY OF INDUSTRY

"In 1939 was celebrated the Fiftieth Anniversary of this art-industry which entertains the people of all the world, and the year brought also marked progress in the partnership of motion pictures with education. This partnership included the National Education Associations and the great Foundations interested in education. They are looking to this new teaching aid to help keep the stream of learning fluid and not frozen in the conventional channels of yesterday. Their cooperation with us has been well justified by the enthusiastic reception which has greeted the two series of short subjects made available during the year to America's classrooms. The seventy-five films in the Human Relations Series, adapted by the Commission of the Progressive Education Association from photoplays heretofore shown in theatres, are now virtually complete. The 849 short subjects, already shown in theatres, selected and cataloged for classrooms by the distinguished educational leaders who compose the Advisory Committee on the Use of Motion Pictures in Education are now widely in use. It thus appears that when motion pictures were called upon to contribute to our American culture through the schools, we had on hand in pictures produced for theatre entertainment the material for that job.

"Cooperation"

"Picture progress in 1939 is a tribute, just as full, to the cooperation given to the industry by social and religious leadership. The processes of criticism, selection and education have enlarged, not restricted, the artistic and dramatic opportunities of the screen; they have increased, not decreased, motion picture attendance. For this cooperation and criticism we are grateful. Thus the public exercises its privilege and duty as partners.

"In the whole result lies the true significance of the planned path of self-regulation in an art and an industry left free to develop and to discharge a public service under a system of self-guidance, uninfluenced by political censorship or subservient to propaganda and aided by all the constructive thought that could be brought to bear. And the same Martin Quigley who tonight has brought us this vote of the people also has labored valiantly with the industry, as one of us, and has contributed very much indeed to the processes by which we have planned to keep American motion pictures thus attuned to American ideals.

"The people of this country, who in the last analysis, are the guardians of the motion picture as an institution, should not forget that wherever as in Germany and Russia the heavy hand of government has come to dominate it, the motion picture as an art has withered. Little, indeed, has remained except crude, crass propaganda.

"Duty to Society"

"A present responsibility of the whole partnership is the transcendent duty to society now to keep the stream of world entertainment flowing—entertainment of the very highest quality and widest possible appeal. This responsibility will be discharged in spite of any handicaps that grow out of current world situations.

"Among our Christmas cards this year was one from Mr. and Mrs. George Arliss, sent from London. These delightful friends are at home in London now and his vast experience and sensitive soul give him, of course, the deepest realization of the conditions surrounding them. I can see his expression when he sent this Christmas greeting:

ACADEMY BANQUET FEBRUARY 29TH

Thursday February 29th, has been set for the 12th annual Awards Banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood. The awards committee, at a meeting this week, agreed to make foreign films eligible for all major awards.

The committee also voted an award for the best color photography, turned down a request for the establishment of new short subject awards, and decided to permit extras to vote in the finals on the best dramatic performance and best supporting role by an actor or actress.

"'To Mr. and Mrs. Will Hays

"'From Mr. and Mrs. George Arliss

"'Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year Anyway.'

"A Happy New Year anyway, in spite of bombing planes and blackouts. From George Arliss, fine exemplar of his distinguished and most useful profession, comes this emphasis of our privileges—we who tonight are here in America at peace—no less grieved by the sufferings of friends abroad because of the realization of the blessings which are ours.

"We Are at Peace"

"Blessings, indeed—not the least of which is the fact that we are at peace and can and will remain at peace with the whole world and thereby best serve the world.

"Blessings indeed—which we do well to remember at this year-end when inventories are in order, when we should pause a moment in our easy habit of taking everything for granted and think less about what's wrong with America and more about what's right with America. It is with our assets and not our liabilities that we will build for the future ever higher standards of living, better opportunities for our people, greater plenty to share and the greater reserves which human security will require.

"The world has survived tragic times before, with many cycles of war, pestilence and famine. Injustice and cruelty have been poisonous and recurrent weeds in the oft-broken path of civilization. But there always have been certain undying qualities of the human spirit which have survived from the beginning of man. Hope, faith and courage still burn with a living flame. It is by their eternal light that we make certain the future of America."

School Films Studied

The School Board of Lake Worth, Florida, is considering the use of motion picture machines in high schools of Fort Worth, West Palm Beach, Boynton, Delroy Beach and Pahokee.

Supreme Court Refuses to Hear RKO Plan Foes

Reorganization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, under the provisions of the plan approved by the New York circuit court of appeals last September under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act, was in effect approved this week by the United States supreme court when it denied two petitions for review. The court, in orders in which Associate Justice Douglas did not participate, denied the applications of H. Cassel & Company, a preferred creditor, and Ernest W. Stirn, a stockholder, for review of the September 8th decision of the circuit court.

Both petitions were based on the contention that the plan of reorganization failed fully to protect the interests of the petitioners. In the Cassel appeal, it was claimed that the proposed plan did not adequately compensate the debenture holders for their claims and for the loss of their security and preferred creditor status. The Stirn petition contended that the lower court erred in giving approval to compromises of certain claims, and in approving the reorganization when 100 per cent approval of the Class A stockholders had not been secured.

The Cassel company was a secured creditor, with a claim of approximately $300,000, based on $217,000 of ten year six per cent gold debentures on which interest has been accruing since December 1, 1932. Mr. Stirn had purchased certificates for RKO stock which he contended he had later been unable to convert.

The path is now clear for final action on RKO reorganization. It will be necessary for the trustee, the Irving Trust Company, to transfer assets of the old RKO company to the new one and pay allowed claims. The Supreme Court decision also removed one more condition of the Atlas underwriting agreement and the issuance of the new stock can proceed.

Hearing on Tuesday

Hearings on the proceedings of RKO are now set for Tuesday in New York, having been adjourned last Friday by William Bondy, federal judge, at the request of Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for the Atlas Corporation.

Mr. Rickaby said subscription warrants under the underwriting agreements had been offered to RKO creditors on December 22nd and that the offer would expire Monday.

O. C. Duering, attorney for the Irving Trust Company, is preparing an order transferring RKO assets from the Irving Trust Company to the new RKO company, Mr. Rickaby said.

Judge Bondy last week authorized the Irving Trust Company, as trustee, to affirm or disaffirm leases and contracts of RKO until July 1, 1940. The extension of time will not apply, the order said, if reorganization proceedings are ended before that date.

General unsecured claims in the sum of $107,304 against RKO have been allowed by Judge Bondy. Creditors whose claims were allowed are the Union Guardian Trust Company, $45,000; the United States National Bank of Denver, $37,552; Laura F. Albee, $21,000; the American Company, $3,558 and the estate of Cora E. Gregg, $204. Judge Bondy at the same time authorized the extension by the Irving Trust of $50,000 in secured gold notes to April 1, 1940.

HOUSE AGAINST NEELY BILL, SAYS BRYLAWSKI; BRANDT AGAIN WARNS

Washington Exhibitor Leader Sees Small Chance for Passage in 1940; New York Independent Continues Campaign

Convening of the second session of the Seventy-Sixth Congress of the United States on Wednesday noon brought the organized motion picture business face to face with a legislature into whose hands it is virtually certain will be placed the fate of the long fight of the opponents of block booking.

Brylawski Optimistic

While in many quarters of the large interests there has been reputed pessimism over the chances of defeating the bill in the House, after its passage by the Senate, last summer, a more optimistic attitude was struck this week by A. Julian Brylawski, who, in his position as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, and with the legislative contacts acquired down through the years therefrom, is generally conceded to be somewhat of an unofficial industry authority on and observer of the situation at the Capital.

"The Neely bill is expected to remain in committee a long time, and if the committee never reported it out, that would meet with the whole hearted approval of the House," he declared.

Meanwhile, the bill came up for more discussion and debate this week, Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of America, calling an anti-Neely bill mass meeting for New York's Hotel Astor, Wednesday afternoon, following an open discussion which he conducted the previous Thursday before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York. Mr. Brandt warned that passage of the bill would put hundreds of owners out of business.

Brandt Is Speaker

Mr. Brandt, at the AMPA, explained that he had just completed a nation-wide trip on which he spoke to 1,200 exhibitors assembled for special meetings and conventions and distributed 4,000 copies of the bill. Mr. Brandt said that "the claim has been made many times that the Neely bill is for the benefit of small independent and subsequent run theatres." He said that he investigated the question to find out whether the bill was really for the independent and against the group which the speaker identified with the Hays Office or if the bill was against the whole industry. He concluded that the bill attacks the whole business and the independent exhibitor more than anyone.

Mr. Brandt said "too much has been taken for granted" on the Neely bill. "The people proposing the bill know nothing about the matter and it is sponsored by people who have little or no stake in the industry." He cited the "appalling lack of knowledge on the part of 90% of the exhibitors" found in his tour. It was further asserted that the Allied organizations in favor of the bill used as their only argument "that it was the policy of National Allied."

The Neely bill, according to Mr. Brandt, "definitely puts the theatre operator out of business. The Neely bill is designed against blind buying—there is no exhibitor, including the affiliated, who would not come out in favor of any proposal under which he would know what he was buying." And if he believed the Neely bill did this he would come out for the Neely bill and do everything to see it passed, he continued.

Mr. Brandt said nothing in the Neely bill would remove gangster films, uplift the morality of the pictures or help the little fellow, producers or exhibitors. He said "under our system the independent producer has a chance today," holding that good films would find a distributor and "junk goes where junk should go." The theatre operator said, "If the Neely bill becomes a law I would go into the book publishing or some other business. One thing is keeping the independent exhibitor, the true showman alive . . . a continuous flow of product."

Big productions will suffer, according to Mr. Brandt, if the Neely bill is passed. "Technical costs will not come down and Mr. Bioff says that his people are still much underpaid. Union wages never come down."

The last part of the speech was devoted to outlining the campaign which has been launched. The speaker said "There is one way to lick the bill—arouse public opinion. . . . the bill is non-political and hence needs a definite campaign." Mr. Brandt spoke of the activities of the Pacific Coast Conference of Theatre Owners and continued, "The industry is open today to anyone who wants to produce. Most of the producers on the Coast are independents with distribution contracts and get money from distributors and banks. Under the Neely bill the box offices of the country would dry up and pictures of great calibre would no longer be made."

Shutdown Seen

Mr. Brandt cited such pictures as "Gone With the Wind" as worthy of great credit because "the public is once again talking motion pictures." The speaker held that if the Neely bill were passed "so many less pictures would be made than today that the theatres would have to close down part of the week" and the industry would sink from its place "as the fifth industry in the country to a midget business."

With regard to the campaign against the bill, the speaker said nothing about the question should be mentioned in newspaper ads, trailers should not be run on theatre screens and nothing should be mentioned in theatre programs. Mr. Brandt suggested that the local managers and their wives and relatives should be urged to write to their congressmen and say that the manager would lose his job if it was passed.

"You should go to your landlord and say that if the bill is passed you will stop getting your rent and the theatres will have to be turned into markets or garages or the like. Ask the State Chamber of Commerces to act. Get all the employees in the industry to write to congress. An overwhelming flood of letters would prevent the bill from becoming a law."

Mr. Brandt had followed, through part of his speech, a booklet in which the talk given by C. C. Pettijohn December 14th was printed. After Mr. Brandt concluded his remarks, Mr. Pettijohn said he agreed with Mr. Brandt and gave added emphasis to several points. Mr. Pettijohn pointed out that it would be impossible to make pictures like "Gone With the Wind" or any big and successful picture without a real organization. He said, "You can't go out and make one, two or three pictures. You must keep an organization together to make the kind of pictures which the industry must have to keep alive."

The ITOA leader repeated his report of his tour, the attack on the provisions of the bill and the appeal for organized opposition at the mass meeting in the Astor Wednesday. About 500 independent exhibitors, circuit heads and distribution officials attended.

Wood Attacks the Shirley Broadcast and Pot O'Gold

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has launched an attack on Shirley Temple as a radio performer and on the "Pot o' Gold" broadcast. The Ohio exhibitor's advice to Shirley Temple, contained in an "open letter" appearing in the Service Bulletin of the ITO of Ohio, is to stick to the screen and leave the radio alone. He also organized a campaign to raise money to combat the $1,000 given away over NBC each week.

Counter-Giveaway Planned

Exhibitor meetings were conducted by Mr. Wood in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Columbus to obtain pledges of theatre men for a fund to make it possible that double the amount given when a radio listener is lucky to win the "Pot o' Gold" can be awarded if the person is at the theatre when he is selected. Exhibitors controlling 104,300 seats have agreed to the plan under which they will be assessed three cents a seat. It was stated that a total of 200,000 seats is necessary before the plan can be put into effect and Mr. Wood believes the figure can be reached. A statewide campaign is planned for January if the required 200,000 seats to guarantee the initial $6,000 can be pledged.

Mr. Wood's letter to Shirley Temple was occasioned by her broadcast on Christmas Eve. The letter was headed by the text: "And a little child shall lead them." The letter opened by applauding the young star's contribution to charity because the salary for her first broadcast went to the Screen Actors' Guild relief fund. Mr. Wood called attention to the "irreparable harm" that broadcasts by motion picture stars do to theatre owners. Shirley was asked to "keep faith with those who have made it possible for you to be successful—the motion picture theatre owners of America."

The letter continued with the statement that stars appear practically every night on the air as competition to the theatre boxoffices. An appeal was made to Shirley Temple to make her first appearance on the radio her last, for, according to Mr. Wood, "your forte is the screen and not the air, and I beseech you to remain faithful to that medium of entertainment which has been responsible for your marvelous success. Perhaps if you will lead the way and refuse to lend your talents to the motion picture theatres' greatest competition—the radio—other screen stars will do likewise."

This week, the motion picture industry swings, not only into a new year, but into a new decade. The "Threadbare Thirties" give way, we hope, to what historians will sometime call the "Fortunate Forties." Looking back over the troubled years, which began in the last months of 1929, we can be proud of our industry, justly proud.

To Columbia, Metro, United Artists, Universal, Warner Brothers, 20th Century-Fox and other leading companies, we offer our honest congratulations for the stout-hearted, hard-working way in which they have not only fought tough times with ever stronger, ever finer product, but have made this industry a model to other great American industries in its ability to forge ahead no matter how tough the going. The past ten years are indeed a great testimony to the energy, the will, the genius of the motion picture industry.

And the past ten years, culminating in the gloriously successful year of 1939, are a glorious testimony to the strength of our own company, Paramount. As we face the new year, the new decade, we know that our record is a fine and proud one. For not only has our policy been consistent. We have succeeded in living up to our policy. Week in, week out, month in, month out, Paramount has continued to deliver a full, rounded quota of superior motion pictures. Believing that our duty is to keep the exhibitors of the nation supplied with the kind of pictures they want, when they want them, we have never shirked that duty.

In 1939 no company in the industry has supplied the exhibitor with more good, sound box office product than Paramount. Of course, we are proud of such great hits as "Union Pacific," "Beau Geste," "Midnight," "The Great Victor Herbert" and the other top successes we have used to illustrate these pages. But prouder still are we of the fact that Paramount has delivered at least two big pictures every month of the year, that no week has gone by in which an exhibitor did not see at least one worthwhile Paramount Picture on his Paramount release schedule.

ARNOLD SAYS CONSENT DECREE FOR PAST OFFENSES HAS BEEN ABANDONED

Anti-Trust Prosecutor Says Department Will Not Settle for "Promises to Obey Law"; Cites Number of Complaints

The principal need of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice is "sufficient personnel to take care of the complaints which are being received," it was declared Wednesday by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, in his annual report, in which he also said the Department's policy of granting consent decrees to condone past offenses had been abandoned. Mr. Arnold is best known to motion pictures for his present seemingly unrelentless prosecution of the majors and some circuits for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws.

Because of the lack of personnel, he explained, there were, at the close of the fiscal year on June 30th, last, more than 650 complaints on which the division had been unable to do any work, many of them concerning the motion picture business.

"The Department must either get sufficient personnel to handle these complaints in an orderly and effective way, or it will be unable to discharge fully its responsibility under the law," he warned.

Mr. Arnold's report disclosed that during the year a total of 1,375 complaints were received, an increase of 452 over the preceding year. These led to the initiation of 90 extensive investigations, including several in films, and in addition the division also was engaged in conducting 700 other investigations and studies of allegedly monopolistic situations, also including motion pictures. At the time the report was written, 200 investigations of major importance were in progress.

"The year 1940 marks the 50th anniversary of the Sherman Act," Mr. Arnold reminded. "At no time in its long history has there been such interest in the act nor such consistent pressure for its enforcement.

"The pressure comes not from any political group, but from independent business men and consumers all over the country and from leaders of both parties. It is particularly noticeable in the medium metropolis whose industries are beginning to feel the effect of absentee ownership. It also comes from consumers, home builders, small retailers and farmers who are forced to pay tribute to organizations which have seized strategic positions in the distribution system and who are thus able to block the channels of commerce."

"Constructive" Law Emphasized

Present policies of the Department of Justice are designed to emphasize the constructive character of the Sherman Act in freeing rather than impeding business enterprise, he asserted.

To this end the division is recommending that the civil penalties for anti-trust violations be increased so that the Government may restrict the use of criminal proceedings to cases where they would be appropriate.

"We have consistently emphasized that in the main anti-trust enforcement does not deal with moral problems," he said. "Although the procedure is criminal, the defendants are usually not members of what is ordinarily called the criminal class. Many of the organizations which violate the law are formed as defensive measures against other aggressive combinations. The country has been suffering from the absence of a referee in the competitive game. The increased personnel of the anti-trust division is constantly facing situations which have developed, without moral culpability on anyone's part, because the referee has been so long absent.

"However," he added, "until civil remedies are established by an act of Congress the Department must continue to use the criminal process. The present civil remedy, useful though it may be in reorganization of a business structure, is not sufficiently effective as a preventive measure."

Of interest, in view of the film cases, is Mr. Arnold's attitude with respect to the compromising of cases.

"In the past year we have consistently followed the policy of prosecuting past violations of the law by indictment," he explained. "We have declined to dismiss indictments upon the mere promise to obey the law in the future. The use of consent decrees to condone past offenses has been abandoned.

"As a result of that policy we are convinced that there is today a new respect for the anti-trust laws. Businessmen now feel that the Department of Justice can give them real protection. The best evidence of this is the increasing number of businessmen who bring their complaints to the Department. As our policy has become understood complaints have increased in geometrical proportions."

The Department, he continued, has "consistently emphasized that 'trust-busting' is not an end in itself and that its objective is not an

Majors Break Even on Trust Suits; Government Ordered to Reply

Victory through dismissal of one anti-trust action, in Florida, and appearance of a new action, in Georgia, this week gave the distributors an even break in the long series of attacks being conducted against them by both independents and the Government. They gained some ground, too, when a stipulation was filed in Federal Court, New York, requiring the Department of Justice to answer the majors' interrogatories by March 1st, in the "key" trust case in New York.

Attorneys for major company defendants in the New York case were to confer Thursday with Paul Williams, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, and William Farnsworth, special Government attorney, concerning clarification of the interrogatories served on the Government by the defendants.

In other trust matters, Federal Judge A. P. Murrah, in Oklahoma City, assigned hearing for January 12th, on motions of the major defendants in the A. B. Momand independent case, and in Nashville February 1st was set as date for hearing arguments in the Government's suit against Crescent Amusement and the majors.

Testimony-taking continued in the Boston action filed by Morse and Rothenberg against the film companies, with Moe Streimer of United Artists, New York, on the stand, preceded this week by F. J. A. McCarthy, Universal sales official; Leo Abrams, short subject manager for the same company; Richard Dobbyn of Maine and New Hampshire Theatres; Milton Kusell, Paramount; T. F. O'Toole, Columbia; Leo Jacobi, Warners; Henry Humell, Warners.

Motion for a temporary injunction in the Brooklyn, N. Y., equity suit against Randforce Amusement Corporation, Samuel Rinzler, Louis Frisch, William Yost and major companies was argued before Judge Grover M. Moskowitz in the Brooklyn Federal Court last Thursday.

The 395 Amusement Corporation, owner of the Gloria theatre in Brooklyn, filed suit for a permanent injunction against the defendants on December 11th. Plaintiff claims that a preference in clearance was granted the Clinton, recently erected Randforce theatre in that vicinity.

Major company New York offices have received copies of an anti-trust complaint filed by W. H. Odom of Milledgeville, Ga., charging conspiracy in preventing him from obtaining "first class" pictures for his Milledgeville theatre.

Mr. Odom contends that 10 days after he opened his theatre in 1933, the alleged conspiracy went into effect and that he was forced to sell his house to Roy Martin, who also was named in the suit.

Virtually on the eve of trial, an abrupt end came last Thursday to the Miami anti-trust suit brought by Herman Weingarten, who operates the Cameo and Surf theatres as president of the Washington Operating Company and Garden Operating Company, against two local theatre chains, Paramount Enterprises and Wometco Theatres, and the eight majors.

The suit charged conspiracy to monopolize distribution and showing of new films.

Action was dismissed by Federal Judge John W. Holland, at the plaintiff's request. The dismissal, obtained with prejudice to the plaintiffs, thereby barring further litigation, came as a surprise after nearly a year of controversy.

Attorney Henry K. Gibson, counsel for the plaintiff, said the dismissal action resulted from the sale of the Surf theatre and the leasing of the Cameo theatre to Wometco.

Extended Runs, Records, Claimed For Five Films

Many boxoffice claims were made this week by distributors for and on behalf of some of their current product: RKO, for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"; Twentieth-Fox, for "Swanee River"; Paramount, for its "Gulliver" and "Light That Failed"; Warners for "Four Wives."

Meanwhile, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is proceeding to lineup additional key city openings for "Gone With the Wind" in order to round up the 40 additional runs to be set by the end of the month.

Grosses Seen Climbing

MGM says the second-week boxoffice figures for "Gone With the Wind" have in many of the film's six current first-run situations surpassed the business recorded in the first week. Capacity at every performance and the biggest advance sale in history was reported at the Astor with the second week's gross listed at $22,000. Business at the Capitol was $82,500, or $5,000 over the first week's gross. Other news on "Wind" openings appears on page 31.

"Hunchback" Held Over

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" which is being held over for a second week in all line of its pre-release engagements has set a number of new house records according to RKO. The distributor announced that new records for all time were set at Keith's, Boston; the Hillstreet and Pantages, Los Angeles; Palace, Chicago; Keith's, Washington; the Orpheum, Kansas City; Park, Reading, and Senate, Harrisburg. Opening day at the Keith's in Boston was hailed as 10 per cent above the previous all time high for a single day and the second day's run was said to be 25 per cent above any other second day. The Los Angeles opening, according to RKO, was the greatest opening day on record and the second day's run there bettered the opening day of "Gunga Din." Other cities also listed record business. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" this week began day-and-date engagements in more than 100 additional cities.

Charles Laughton is making a personal appearance tour of the South along with engagements of "The Hunchback." The British star has never been in the South and it is stated that the trip has been arranged at his own request. Laughton will appear at the Fox, Atlanta, January 3rd; at the Malco, Memphis, January 5th; the RKO Orpheum, New Orleans, on January 6th, and the Majestic, Houston, on January 8th. The star is scheduled to be a guest of the Twelfth Night Revelers Club at the Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, announced that a new all-time high record for a single day's business was established Sunday, December 31st. All previous single day's records were smashed by a combination of Charles Laughton in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the holiday stage spectacle, Sunday boxoffice prices and an extra New Year's Eve performance. The gross was established despite the fact that, because of Sunday, the Music Hall did not open its doors until noon. The previous high gross for a single day was February 22, 1936, with "Follow the Fleet."

"Swanee River" Tops Records

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Swanee River," starring Don Ameche as Stephen Foster, the song writer, broke all standing records for boxoffice grosses at the Roxy theatre in New York over the New Year weekend. An attendance of 89,207 was registered at the theatre over the four days with more than 40,000 paying admissions on Sunday. The holiday weekend gross was $53,975 as compared to the previous record established by "Alexander's Ragtime Band" of $53,110 for four days.

Don Ameche and Al Jolson, starring in "Swanee River" with Andrea Leeds, took part in a nation-wide radio preview of the picture on the Kate Smith program over the CBS network last Wednesday.

"Raffles," the Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists picture, starring David Niven and Olivia de Havilland, will play at the Roxy theatre in New York following the run of "Swanee River" which opened an indefinite run last Friday.

"Gulliver" in Second Week

Robert M. Weitman, manager of the Paramount theatre, New York, announced that "Gulliver's Travels" established a new record by rolling up the biggest New Year holdover business for that theatre in the past five years. The picture finished the second week with a gross of $60,000 which, helped by a $25,000 week-end, was $10,000 over the first week's business. The picture was held over for a third week.

"Gulliver's Travels" was held over in most and carried over in the remaining few of its first 37 key city engagements, according to reports of the Paramount home office.

"The Light That Failed," Paramount picture starring Ronald Colman and Walter Huston established a new house record at the Rivoli theatre in New York, according to John C. Wright, manager. The first week's gross was $50,000, according to the manager, and was the best business the Rivoli has had in the past four years since "Les Miserables." The record on "The Light That Failed" was attributed to strong evening business. The picture was held over.

Warner Brothers' "Four Wives," featuring the Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Eddie Albert, May Robson, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran, has been held over in 28 key spots to date, according to home office reports. Among the cities listed are: New York, Dayton, Louisville, Chicago and Indianapolis. It was stated that in every run the picture outgrossed "Four Daughters," to which "Four Wives" is a sequel.

The Paramount theatre grossed an estimated $1,920,000 during 1939, not including the grosses on "Gulliver's Travels" and "The Great Victor Herbert." The average annual business during the past five years has been estimated at $1,699,000. In 1935 when the stage band policy was inaugurated the gross was $1,209,652.

No ERPI Borrowing

T. K. Stevenson, president of Electrical Research Products, declared Wednesday that a statement in the December 30th issue, saying ERPI operates the Astoria, Long Island, studios with money borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is in error, Mr. Stevenson adding that ERPI has never received or requested a loan from the RFC or any other governmental agency.

Martin in "Home Town"

Mary Martin, star of Paramount's "The Great Victor Herbert," made personal appearances a week ago, with the opening of her picture, in her "home town," Weatherford, Texas. Miss Martin has been on a personal appearance tour of the country.

attack on the efficient side but the freeing of the channels of commerce. Every combination, to a certain extent, restrains trade. It can be justified, therefore, only if it is reasonable. Size is not the criterion. . . .

"The rule of reason in the anti-trust laws provides a case-by-case method to determine in each particular industry what practices and what organizations are actually required in a machine age, and to eliminate those which are blocking the production and distribution of goods. Therefore, the emphasis of the law is not on making small industries out of big ones, but rather on abolishing restraints of trade."

Gives Code Requirements

Observers in Washington saw in Mr. Arnold's report the requirements of the Department for an amicable settlement of the New York film case.

Discussing the Department's policy, adopted last year, of giving approval to voluntary plans or practices, such as the trade practice code offered by film distributors, Mr. Arnold said:

"Any such plan must meet the following four requirements: First, it must be addressed to the problems of a particular industry; second, it must be given for a limited period and subject to constant check; third, there must be machinery to penalize the abuse of the position created by such approval; and fourth, that approval must be in a form which will permit ready reference to Congress, in order that the policy of the Department may be under constant scrutiny. Such approval can only be given by judicial decree in a civil proceeding which may be used concurrently with a criminal prosecution.

"The proposal for a consent decree must be voluntary, which means that the Department will in no instance start negotiations or suggest compromises on the basis of which prosecution would be dropped.

"At all times, the test of whether a consent decree should be accepted must be whether it will benefit the public, not whether it will give relief to the Department. Only where it appears that the consent decree will yield more constructive results for the consuming public, for employees, and for competitors, than the eventual criminal punishment of the offenders, will proposals for such a decree be entertained."

Mr. Arnold referred to the fact that in practically all pending cases, business firms are conferring either with the Department of Justice or with representatives of the Department of Commerce in an attempt to find a voluntary solution, but gave no indication whether any of the industries which have accepted Secretary of Commerce Hopkins' proffer of aid have met with any success.

THE SHORT SUBJECT POLL, FAME IN ONE REEL

Cartoons Head List of Preferences Expressed by Exhibitors

by JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN

FAME requires only seven to twenty minutes to assert itself in the grazing grounds of the short subject, and may call for an even briefer space of time to desert the one upon whom, or which, she has showered her largesse. Yet even Fame displays a measure of consistency in the distribution of her gifts. For example, there is no will o' the wisp character to the public esteem of the cartoon creations of Walt Disney, and Snow White, despite the incongruity, is the long-lived first-born of Mickey and Minnie Mouse, so far as popularity is concerned.

That is why no alarums of surprise are likely to sound forth at the revelation that Walt Disney's Cartoons were adjudged first and foremost short attractions at the box office by independent exhibitors who weekly voice their unrestricted judgments of product in the columns of "What the Picture Did for Me," of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. And so close to Disney's Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony drawings for entertainment release by RKO Radio came the Merrie Melodies of Warners' Vitaphone that only a few percentage points prevented a tie.

For the first time since its investigatory career of calculating entertainment potentialities and actualities began in 1932, Quigley Publications' polling personnel has cast a quizzical eye in the direction of the featurette division.

Serials Included

Separately tabulated, a canvass of serials brought the highest number of attentions, and points, to "The Spider's Web," Columbia chapter play, as the biggest money getter of the 12 months October 1, 1938, to November 1, 1939.

In total, some 93 short subject categories were recipients of vote attention in a lineup of candidates that covered the entire sector.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distributes five of the leaders—the Pete Smith specialties, Our Gang comedies, MGM Cartoons, MGM Miniatures and the FitzPatrick travelogues. Vitaphone ranks second highest with three of the winners to its distributing-producing credit—Merrie Melodies, Broadway Brevities and Melody Masters. RKO Radio as distributor agency for the Walt Disney cartoons, the highest rankers, and Twentieth Century-Fox as sponsor for the Terry-Toons, eighth in the poll, have one each of the short subjects in the winning ten division.

Honors Equal

For the ten honorable mention positions, Paramount and Vitaphone share equal honors with three each of their miniature material.

Vitaphone handles the Looney Tunes, Vitaphone Varieties and the "Your True Adventure" items.

The Leaders

The leaders of the general featurette poll, those which received the ten highest number of favorable citations, are, in the order of their placing:

1. Walt Disney cartoons.
2. Merrie Melodies.
3. Broadway Brevities.
4. Pete Smith specialties.
5. Our Gang comedies.
6. MGM cartoons.
7. Melody Masters.
8. Terry-Toons.
9. MGM Miniatures.
10. FitzPatrick Travel Talks.

After the first ten winners and occupying relative positions from eleventh to twentieth inclusive, in the complete listing, were these:

11. Crime Doesn't Pay series.
12. Grantland Rice Sportlights.
13. Paramount Headliners.
14. Three Stooges' comedies.
15. March of Time.
16. Looney Tunes.
17. MGM Musical Comedies.
18. Popeye the Sailor.
19. Vitaphone Varieties.
20. "Your True Adventure."

The verdicts on the last-named product of the late Floyd Gibbons apparently were not affected by the death of the bullet-voiced, globe-trotting hunter of reportorial adventure.

Paramount issues under its banner the Grantland Rice Sportlights, the Paramount Headliners and the Popeye the Sailor drawings. MGM places twice with the Crime Doesn't Pay selections and its Musical Comedies. RKO makes another placement, this time with the sponsorship of the March of Time, while Columbia also wins a single position with the Three Stooges' comedy efforts. In the complete tallying of the ten winners and ten runners-up, MGM is credited with seven, Vitaphone with a close six, Paramount with three, RKO with two and Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia one.

Cartoons Take Top Honors

The almost photo finish between the first and second rankings would seem to indicate that, no matter what may be the choices in other respects, prime preference in the short subject selection goes to the comedy cartoon classification.

Moreover, of the twenty series listed in the winning and honorable mention categories, six of the subject groups come from the inkpots, while the remaining fourteen are recruited from such diversified ingredients as musicals, orchestral compositions, sport slants, slapstick stuff, presentations of current national and international state of affairs, and screen lessons that the straight and narrow path is the best road to tread.

A further study of the first twenty high scorers seems productive of a similar conclusion, that it is in the lighter and brighter sides of entertainment that short subject efforts receive highest and most appreciative reception. Outside of the sober toned and thought provocative March of Time editions, the growing receptiveness to patriotic themes on the screen, the shocker quality of the Gibbons thrillsome tales, the entertainment quality of the winners and the honorable mentions is patterned on the festive side, stitched together of gay, featherweight material and composed of animated cartoon design and of song and dance stylization. A further point in the analysis of the winning contents of the short product leaders is that much of the material receives increased gayety through the application of beautiful and artistic coloring processing. Both the winner and the second subject in ranking are dressed up in picturesque pigmentation, as also are such position makers as MGM cartoons, some of the Terry-Toons and the FitzPatrick globe excursions.

Disney Laurels

The inspiration behind the Walt Disney cartoons needs no introduction or elaboration of his career. Sufficient and well deserved recognition has been granted the work of this artist craftsman from the side of the ticket window of theatre show shops from metropolitan cinema palaces to main street opry houses. Further accolades of less monetary substance, perhaps, but of nonetheless superior value, have come to the creator of the immortal Mickey Mouse and his Minnie, faithful but none too bright Pluto and crochety Donald Duck, from such intellectual sources as the Metropolitan Museum of Art and honorary degreeship from Yale, Harvard and the University of Southern California. Twice has his drawing board talent been the recipient of industry acclaim, once in the way of a special Academy honor for his feature length art masterpiece, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and again another Academy designation for "Ferdinand the Bull."

Leon Schlesinger is the principal genius behind the production of the Merrie Melodies and the Looney Tunes. Although, as a creative cartoonist, his work has not as yet received the academic and honorary recognition given to the Disney product, the fact that Mr. Schlesinger's Merrie Melodie compositions are but a slit of percentage space behind first place, and that two of his series have been voted among the first twenty reflects the worth and success of the Schlesinger cartoon contributions.

In reading over the long list of 93 different short product classifications, there is evidenced not only the fact that there is indeed a great number of miniature subject categories for inclusion in any theatre program of screen events but equally important is the conclusion that there is a wide variety from which to choose. In a field broad enough to include everything from a jam session to the newest edition of the March of Time, the survey newly illuminates the truth that there is box office championship product for any program, for every theatre.

Chicago Theatre Subway Entrances

Five loop theatres in Chicago, the Chicago, State-Lake, Tele-news, Roosevelt and United Artists, will have entrances off the new subway which is now under construction. Plans have not been completed because the city has not yet revealed the exact size of the subway. It is expected that the subway will be completed in two years.

Will Reserve All of "Wind" Night Tickets

Having found, from experience at New York's Capitol theatre and in six other key cities, that many prospective patrons were discouraged from seeing "Gone with the Wind" by the belief they'd be unable to obtain seats at night, MGM, the distributor, is now enforcing a policy of reserved evening seats, for all engagements hereafter. The new policy also will eliminate the long waiting for seats.

"Gone with the Wind" will play, shortly, in 36 cities, additional to the seven in which it is now shown. In 31 of these cities the theatres belong to the Loew circuit.

Warners have set the picture day-and-date in two theatres in Philadelphia. The premiere will be held the night of Jan. 18 at the Boyd, with two reserved seat shows thereafter. The Earl will open the film Jan. 19 on a continuous run policy of three shows a day, starting at 10 A.M. Prices will be advanced over regular scales.

The other engagements will be three-a-day continuous, at a night top of $1.10 with $1.65 for loges.

Four openings are scheduled for Jan. 25 as follows: Capitol, Wilkes Barre, Pa.; Comerford, Scranton, Pa.; Strand, Binghamton, N. Y.; Great Lakes, Buffalo. The Cataract, Niagara Falls, N. Y., will open the picture Jan. 26.

Loew circuit engagements are dated as follows:

Jan. 26—Century Baltimore; Palace, Washington; Loew's, Wilmington; Warner, Pittsburgh; State, Providence; State, Syracuse; Rochester, Rochester; Loew's, Indianapolis; Midland, Kansas City; Loew's, St. Louis; Stillman, Cleveland; State, Louisville; State, New Orleans; Vendome, Nashville; State, Memphis; Yonge St., Toronto.

Feb. 2—State, Norfolk; Loew's, Richmond; Loew's, Akron; Valentine, Toledo; Broad, Columbus; Loew's in Canton and Dayton; Majestic, Bridgeport; College, New Haven; Palace, Hartford; Elm, Worcester; Poli, Springfield, Mass.; Victory, Evansville.

Feb. 3—Poli, Waterbury; Poli, Meriden.

"Gone With the Wind" will play the Fifth Ave. Theatre in Seattle at a night top of $1.15, which will include a five-cent state admission tax. In Tacoma the picture will probably play the Music Box, according to John Hamrick, operator of the theatre.

Capacity business for second week runs of "Gone With the Wind" continued in all out-of-town houses. In Boston, where the second week ended Wednesday at both the State and Orpheum, a total of $92,000 was indicated, with $45,000 at the State, where two shows with reserved seats are played, and $47,000 for the Orpheum.

The Grand, in Atlanta, reported $25,000 for the second week, on a two-a-day basis. In Cincinnati, the Capitol reported $30,000, more than three times the previous house record.

At the Loew's, in Reading, the first week figure of $18,000 was equaled during the second. In Harrisburg, the Loew theatre reported $15,500 for the second week.

Based on the first five days, indications were that the film would do $65,000 in Los Angeles with $35,000 at the United Artists house, and $30,000 at the Carthay Circle.

The Legion of Decency this week gave "Wind" a Class B rating—"objectionable in part."

Variety Artists to Elect

The American Guild of Variety Artists will elect officers January 14th at the Palm Garden. A membership rally is scheduled for January 7th at the same place. Jean Muir is temporary executive secretary.

FCC PLANNING EXHAUSTIVE STUDY OF FREQUENCY MODULATION'S CASE

Entire Question of High Frequency Broadcasting To Be Discussed at Hearing Occasioned by License Requests

The growing interest in the Armstrong system of frequency modulation this week influenced the Federal Communications Commission to call an engineering hearing for February 28, next, at which the whole question of broadcasting on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles will be gone into exhaustively. The hearing was called, it was disclosed, because about 20 applications have been filed for new stations desiring to use frequency modulation.

Armstrong Development

Frequency modulation and its possible effects on radio broadcasting, television and facsimile transmission were described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD in the issues of December 9th and 16th. Major Edwin H. Armstrong has developed a frequency modulation system of broadcasting that is said to eliminate static, give high fidelity reception and many other advantages over the regular amplitude system. Many engineers hold that FM broadcasting will eventually replace the present system and all radio equipment now in use.

The major networks, CBS, NBC and Mutual, and leading independent stations have applied to the Federal Communications Commission for permission to build FM stations. The Commission has already granted a number of licenses and about 40 M stations are expected to be in operation within a few months. The Commission faces a difficult problem because FM and television operate in the same part of the radio wave and it may be necessary to redistribute bands. The Commission explained that it must call a special hearing to discuss further the question of frequency modulation.

Research Seen Necessary

"Before a permanent policy can be established with respect to either or both systems of modulation on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles for regular broadcasting service, studies and investigations must be made regarding the relative value of the two systems, the patent situation, the frequency needs of all radio services, and whether amplitude or frequency modulation, or both systems, should be recognized for other services as well as broadcasting," it was explained. "It is also necessary to consider the possible future effect that broadcasting on ultra-high frequencies may ultimately have upon standard broadcasting in the band 550 to 1600 kilocycles."

It was recalled at the commission that Major Armstrong appeared at an engineering hearing in June, 1936, to discuss that method of modulation and that, on the basis of engineering testimony at that hearing and studies by Government agencies, permanent allocations above 25,000 kilocycles were adopted for the various governmental and non-government services.

Advantages Set Forth

In an analysis of the two methods of modulation, the commission pointed out that amplitude modulation has long been used as the standard system for transmitting speech and music by radio and is the only system which is used by the existing services operating on the "conventional" frequencies below 25,000 kilocycles.

"The claimed chief advantages of the two methods are set forth briefly as follows," it was said in an engineering report:

"Amplitude Modulation:

"1. Amplitude modulation utilizes a much narrower band of frequencies, i.e., about one-fifth of the frequency band required for wide band frequency modulated signals of equal fidelity.

"2. Amplitude modulation may be used on all frequencies throughout the radio spectrum, whereas frequency modulation has proven useful only in the very high frequency bands.

3. Amplitude modulation is the only system which has been used successfully for television on the frequencies allocated by the commission for television service.

"Frequency Modulation:

"1. Frequency modulation possesses characteristics whereby it is possible to reduce the effects of all kinds of disturbances including atmospheric static, electrical noises, and background signal interference.

"2. A frequency modulated broadcast station employing low power will provide greater service than a similar station using amplitude modulation. However, if the power of the two stations is substantially increased the percentage increase in service area of the frequency modulated signal will be materially reduced.

3. A frequency modulated receiver will accept only the strongest signal or noise as the case may be when the ratio of the desired to undesired signal strength is approximately 2 to 1. In the case of amplitude modulation, the ratio must be at least 20 to 1 for good broadcast service. Consequently, it is possible to operate frequency modulated stations at relatively close geographical locations without interference.

"4. Frequency modulation has definite advantages over amplitude modulation in operating the low power services such as forestry, police, aircraft, etc. In such cases, each system is under the control of one licensee who can plan for the purchase, installation and operation of the entire transmitting and receiving system."

Chicago Newsreel Theatre

The Telenews theatre, first strictly newsreel house in Chicago, was opened to the public recently. One-hour shows composed of newsreels and short subjects will be shown at the Telenews, which is located at State Street near Randolph in the heart of Chicago's Loop district. The house seats 400. Sylvan Goldfinger is manager.

Krueger Gets Chicago Post

Carl Krueger, exploiteer for Paramount, has been assigned to cover the Chicago territory for the company. He will handle exploitation out of the Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and Indianapolis exchanges with headquarters in Chicago. He is at present working on special campaigns in the territory for "Gulliver's Travels."

Won't Move Production

Ben Judell of Producers Pictures Corporation has announced that he has no intention of moving his production headquarters from Hollywood to Prescott, Ariz., where he will produce 24 western features. There will be no change in his original melodrama and "four star" specials steup that he announced upon the formation of the company.

Hutchinson Sees Big Job Ahead For U.S. Films

American pictures today are in greater demand throughout the world than ever before and the United States industry should exert every effort to maintain the flow of the world's film supply, and to keep the channels open, not only for profit but to render a service to the people of the globe.

That is the view, at the turn of the year, of Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution of Twentieth Century-Fox, who speaks out of a background of 20 years' experience in the service of motion picture distribution throughout the world.

Problems Expected

American companies' overseas operations will show a great disparity in 1940 as compared with the year just ended and serious problems may be expected, Mr. Hutchinson said. During 1939 the greatest difficulty was the new restrictions of currency export in many countries and the drop in foreign exchange.

"In a world ridden with wars, upheavals, confusions and doubts, America and its film industry cannot expect to remain unscathed," said Mr. Hutchinson in New York this week.

The Twentieth Century-Fox foreign chief believes that American pictures should not be withheld from Germany or any other country, regardless whether we like or dislike their form of government or prevailing idealogy.

"Of the 2,000,000,000 people in the world only about 400,000,000—or one-fifth—live under free governments of their own selection and in a free economy as we know it," Mr. Hutchinson declared. "Of that one-fifth the United States represents one-third.

"As the greatest film-producing country in the world, with the greatest world-wide distributing organizations, it is our responsibility to send our pictures into every corner of the globe as ambassadors for the democratic way of living. We should do this despite the many handicaps we face.

"American pictures, reflecting the processes of democracy in the American way, can well perform a service to civilization in this dark hour in which civilization itself is in the balance.

"Let the people of the totalitarian countries and the people whose leaders have betrayed them see our pictures so that they may observe the way we live. The future of the American film industry is intertwined with the welfare of the peoples of the world. And there is an interdependence that is real.

"We of the American motion picture industry must take the broad view and render a service—a service not only for immediate profits. If the service is well performed, the profits will inevitably follow."

Set Four French Films

French Cinema Center, Inc., in 1940 will release four features, headed by "Harvest," now playing; "Jardin de Murcie," "Le Schpountz" and "L'Or Dans la Montagne." All will have English titles.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Glamour for "Gone"

"Gone With the Wind," a motion picture produced by David Oliver Selznick and released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, had its "official" Hollywood premiere this week. The press preview was held earlier.

A great many people attended. There were large numbers of arc lights and policemen. The runway to the Carthay Circle Theatre was banked with poinsettias, an indigenous red bloom.

In addition to almost all those connected with the film in acting capacities, the crowds overflowing the bleachers (estimated variously as between 10,000 and 20,000) saw the Hollywood "400," as they like to see them, in white tie and ermine, with jewels reflecting the glare of the incandescent and arc lights.

The morning papers were rapt in their descriptions of who wore what and with whom they attended. Columns were filled with descriptive adjective and prose approaching the purple. Practically no one stayed at home that night. No one, that is, of any consequence.

The parade of Packards, Cadillacs and vehicles of foreign extraction passed through a crowd lining the street extending from Wilshire Boulevard to the entrance of the theatre. The crowd had been there, in many cases, since early afternoon. The picture is there on an indefinite run.

It is also reported to be doing good business elsewhere.

"Gulliver" Art

The art of the motion picture—still a moot point in certain quarters—took another step forward with the announcement that the "celluloids," paintings and sketches used in the production of "Gulliver's Travels" will be sold to the public through the F. A. R. Galleries in New York, which has purchased the rights to do so from the Fleischer Studios, producers, and Paramount, distributors, of the picture.

A similar deal has been operative for some time between the Disney Studio and the Courvoiser Galleries in San Francisco, which sells the celluloids et al. to other art galleries, for sale, in turn, as the F. A. R. also plans to do.

Official artistic recognition has also been given the Disney cartoon creations with the purchase, some months ago, of one of the celluloids from "Snow White" by New York's Metropolitan Museum.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, reported as interested in the possibilities of the feature cartoon field, would doubtless add to the group, never having been backward in promotional activity.

Interviewed on this subject, the old advance agent merely sniffed superciliously. "Maybe we should have sold them 24 sheets to hang over the mantel. Maybe . . . say, but seriously, how about a one sheet?"

PRODUCTION GOES UP

Refreshed and invigorated by the holiday, Hollywood this week put six pictures in work, two more than last week; finished 15, as against the six of the week before; had 30 shooting, a drop of nine from the previous seven days; was preparing 17, compared to 15, and had 74 editing, five more than in the preceding week.

Two were started at Universal: "It Happened in Kaloha" and "Black Friday"; while Columbia began work on "Passport to Alcatraz"; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, on "Forty Little Mothers"; Twentieth Century-Fox, on the second of the "Cisco Kid" series; and Warner Brothers, on "Three Cheers for the Irish."

Paramount and MGM each finished three. The former wound up "Safari," "Golden Gloves" and "Hold Your Horses," the latter, "Broadway Melody of 1940," "Young Tom Edison" and "Arouse and Beware."

Columbia completed "Five Little Peppers at Home" and "Texas Express"; Monogram, "Chasing Trouble" and "Pioneer Days"; Producers Pictures," "Swift Justice" and "The Sage Brush Family Rides On"; Republic, "Village Barn Dance," and Universal, "The Devil Is Yellow" and "Rigadoon."

One short subject was finished, by MGM, while none were started or shooting. Being prepared were four: two by MGM, one by Columbia and one by Warners; and 13 were being edited, five by Columbia, four by Warners, and two apiece by MGM and RKO Radio.

Brevities

A documentary film on the Northwest Mounted Police has been made by Paramount at the organization's headquarters, Regina, Sask. The picture traces the training of a young recruit up to the time he joins his unit. The prosecuting work of the "Mounties" also is shown by a courtroom scene. The picture, titled "Scarlet and Gold," is expected to run about 45 minutes.

Eddie Cantor's first starring film for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "Forty Little Mothers," based on an original French story, "Monsieur Petiot," by Jean Guitton. Busby Berkeley will direct, with Harry Rapf as producer.

Bobby Breen, 12-year-old film and radio singer, has retired. The boy singer's voice is changing and he has been warned to do no more singing for at least two years, according to word from the studio. His latest picture for Sol Lesser is "Escape to Paradise," for RKO Radio release.

Universal is seeking a new western film star. The studio at present does not have a western star under contract, Bob Baker and Johnny Mack Brown having finished their contracts.

BAIRD, CBS, GENERAL ELECTRIC PLAN NEW YEAR TELEVISION ADVENTURES

English Company Will Revive Theatre Reception; GE Plans Network Broadcasting; DuMont Tests Improved Sets

Several progressive developments are promised for television during the first months of the New Year, including first network telecasting, by General Electric; Columbia Broadcasting's active participation in regular telecasting, after many attempts, the marketing of a newly developed television projector for theatres and homes, by Gaumont British-Baird, in New York, and improvements in home television reception, as reported by Dumont.

Theatre Use Planned

An "All-American" television projector for use in theatres will be presented by Gaumont British-Baird Television in New York some time this month. Last June Gaumont British gave the first demonstrations in New York of "large screen" television by means of Baird equipment which was brought from England. The tests continued through the summer and the engineers have been constructing a projector which will be "entirely American," having no relation to British interests.

Motion picture theatre patrons in England witnessed a television program for the first time last February 23rd when the Baird system had a 15 x 12 foot screen in two theatres, and another English company, Scophony, had a much smaller screen at another theatre. The Baird Company equipped a total of 5 theatres in London and had 13 more installations planned for last year when the war stopped English television. About 40 English theatres were said to be planning installations for 1940.

To Receive All Programs

The American Baird system is being designed to receive programs from either the NBC station or the Columbia station (which will start operation in the first part of 1940) and any three other stations that may be erected in the metropolitan area. The system also can project television carried to the machine by telephone wires. Paul Larsen, engineer for the company, said that a coaxial cable is not necessary and that they have been carrying out extensive tests with the Bell Telephone Laboratories and with the Columbia Broadcasting Company.

The Baird organization expects that television in motion picture theatres will not only be a good attraction for exhibitors, but they say it will increase the home sale of television sets. This was the result, according to Mr. Larsen, when the Baird system made installations in London theatres.

The television center has definitely shifted from London to New York, it was said. Before the present war there were about 10,000 television sets in and near London and there was great interest in theatre shows of special events such as the Derby, boxing fights and other events. But immediately after the war began the British Broadcasting Company discontinued television and no more sets could be sold for home use or projectors for theatres. Before the war started English dealers hoped to sell 50,000 television sets in 1940.

Mr. Larsen said the Baird-Gaumont British American projector would give a screen brightness suitable for any theatre—being between 2 and 4 lumens—about half of the minimum for motion pictures. He also claimed the image on the large 15 by 20 foot screen would be sharper and better all around than the small 12 inch screen, now the largest used, in the RCA home sets.

244,707 SEE RCA FILMS IN MONTH

Two Radio Corporation of America sound films, "Television" and "Air Waves"—for non-theatrical distribution—were shown to 244,707 persons in the month of November alone, in this country and Canada, the corporation says.

The films were made by Pathe, with the cooperation of the RCA, the National Broadcasting Company, and the RCA Manufacturing Company. They portray the "backstage" problems of radio and television.

William J. Ganz Company, of 19 East 47th Street, New York City, is handling national distribution, aided by state, educational, and municipal visual instruction bureaus.

CBS Television Set for February

Regular television service is planned by the Columbia Broadcasting System for some time in February. Gilbert Seldes, director of program production, has announced that development of new equipment, including lighting by General Electric and an improved television camera perfected by RCA, gives fair assurance that CBS will be able to start television service to the public in February. The company has been carrying on experimental television work for some time. CBS will operate on the second standard television wave length.

At present the National Broadcasting Company television station, 2XBS, is the only one giving service to the metropolitan area. The NBC station has been operating over six months on an experimental license and has been telecasting between 11 and 13 hours weekly.

Gilbert Seldes plans to develop a special technique for program presentation. At first the NBC station will operate five hours a week. "We will have as many hours as the public wants and as many as will be needed for routine programs," he said.

"I can't conceive of a theatre playing 'Gone with the Wind' being ignored by the public for a televised spelling bee."

Mr. Seldes also said he did not believe that motion pictures would play a major role in television because the public will be more interested in pickups caught by the mobile camera outside the studio.

DuMont Test Shows Improved Television

A new television receiver that has many advantages over existing types was demonstrated last week by Allen B. DuMont, at Passaic, N. J., to members of the Radio Manufacturers Association and television engineers. A new television screen and scanning device makes it possible to cut the present number of cycles in half without flicker.

The DuMont 21-inch tube projects a 16-inch image and produces a very satisfactory picture. The device uses a new vertical scanning device and a fluorescent screen which DuMont developed. One feature of the demonstration was the projection from a standard machine of the same film that was being transmitted by television. The television image compared quite favorably to the machine picture.

The DuMont machine demonstrated that greater detail can be achieved by increasing the number of lines in the picture from the 441 now used in the RCA system to 625 or even 800 lines. The DuMont receiver is adaptable to changes in television transmission, with only small adjustments necessary. The regular RCA system equipment is bound to the present standard of 441-line 60 fields-per-second.

The standardization committee of the Radio Manufacturers Association met after the DuMont demonstration but arrived at no decision.

Scophony To Enter U. S. Television Market

Scophony, Ltd., British television manufacturing company, plans to form an American company shortly to market the home and theatre television receivers developed by that company. Scophony is less well known at this time in America than the Baird television system, but was very active in the British television field before the war stopped operations there.

Jack Davis, operator of newsreel theatres in London, said that the Scophony television system gave a very clear picture when it was used in theatres. Mr. Davis said, "Television machines will some day be in every theatre. They will be part and parcel of the exhibitors' equipment and will be used for special topical events."

At the time of the first theatre television in London last February Scophony used a screen considerably smaller than the Baird Company, but according to Arthur Levey, a director of Scophony now in New York, the Scophony theatre screen image is now as large as any system and a 18 x 15 foot screen with a screen brightness about 50% greater than any system yet demonstrated has been perfected and already used in a 2,000 seat London theatre.

The Scophony system operates on a light control of its own and does not use the cathode ray tube, the basis of most of the television receivers now in use. The English standard of 405 lines is merely stepped up by speeding up the equipment to reach the present American standard of 441 lines or whatever may be determined in the future.

Mr. Levey further stated that the Ministry of Public Information had already given permission for the Scophony engineers to come to this country, even though they are of military age, to instruct American technicians in the use of the Scophony models which will be the basis of the American machines. Further announcements of the plans of the Scophony television company are expected within the next few weeks.

UNITED STATES COURT DECLARES ANTI-ASCAP MEASURE INOPERATIVE

Nebraska Statute Is Ruled Invasive of Authors' Right to Profit; Society Hails Decision as "First Real Test"

In a decision described by Edwin Claude Mills, its head, as the first real test of such a case on actual merits, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, last Thursday, won a sweeping victory over radio and other interests which have been fighting the organization, when the United States District Court at Lincoln, Nebraska, nullified a two-year-old state law to restrain the music combination from doing business there.

Radio broadcasters, like motion picture exhibitors' actions of some years back, have been fighting ASCAP over royalties collected from all radio stations for the public performance for profit of music composed or published by ASCAP members, a right taken under the U. S. copyright act.

Act Nullified

The opinion, read by Senior Judge Gardner, nullified the state's 1937 enactment which sought to restrain any music combination, bent on price fixing, from doing business in Nebraska. With the other judges, Munger and Donohoe, concurring, Judge Gardner said the act was inoperative, and a permanent injunction was in effect to forestall enforcement of the act as prescribed by the statute.

Hearing on the emergency legislation, passed in the 1937 session after being offered by Senator Frank Brady, an Atkinson, Neb., rancher, and signed by Governor Cochran, was held before the three judges last fall, after ASCAP had won a temporary injunction, under which it had been operating, in June, 1937. Louis D. Frolich, of New York, conducted ASCAP's case, and William Hotz, Omaha attorney, made the stand for the state on defense.

The court's opinion stated:

"We conclude that permanent injuction restraining enforcement of this statute must be granted. Counsel for the plaintiffs may prepare findings of fact and conclusions of law together with the form of decree in accordance with this opinion.

"Where the connection between the invalid parts and the other parts is such as to warrant belief that the legislature would not have passed the act without the invalid parts, the whole act must be held inoperative. The provision of the statute which we are here considering is such an essential part of the statute as not to be separable. In view of this conclusion, it is unnecessary to consider the other contentions that have been ably argued and elaborately briefed by counsel for the respective parties."

Collected $65,000 in State

Speaking for ASCAP during the trial were Gene Buck, president of the Society; E. C. Mills, the administrative chairman; and John G. Paine, general manager; and on the state's side, John Gillin, of Station WOW, Omaha, and Don Searle, general manager of Central States Broadcasting Company. KOIL, in Omaha, and KFAB and KFOR, Lincoln, were the heaviest testimony contributors.

During the trial, it was revealed that the contracted users of ASCAP music in Nebraska, of which theatres contributed $12,000, Station WOW, about $26,000, and the KOIL-KFAB-KFOR threesome, some $27,000, produced $65,000 annually for ASCAP.

The court found that, prior to the organization of ASCAP, the individual author or composer had no practical means of enforcing the exclusive right given him by the U. S. copyright act and that users of music who wished to buy public performance rights had no place to go.

Restraint of Trade

"Control of combinations in restraint of trade is a proper exercise of the police power of the state," said the opinion, "yet subject to restrictions imposed by the federal constitution, supreme law of the land. The owner of the copyright has the right to dispose of it at such times as he may see fit. While the copyright act may not enhance the right of proprietorship, it certainly does not lessen that right.

"The right of an author in his intellectual productions is similar to any other personal property right. It is assignable and may be sold or transferred in its entirety or a limited interest therein may be sold and assigned. The various rights included in the entire ownership may be split up and assigned to different persons."

The Nebraska statute would require author, composer or publisher to specify, on the composition, the selling price for private rendition or public rendition for profit. In regard to this section, the court reminded that there are several rights such as moving picture, stage, recording and radio production, and said:

"The copyright owner might wish to grant one of several rights to one party another right to a different party. The statute interferes with his right so to do."

Invades Ownership Rights

The court found that the statute would require the copyright owner to offer the public performance rights for sale or use in Nebraska. If he does not choose so to do, any person purchasing a composition may use it for public performance without liability.

"Clearly," said the opinion, "this deprives him of his rights under the copyright act. The statute cannot be justified as a method of exercising the police power. This power may not be extended to the extent of taking private property for a public use.

Violates Due Process

"While the power reasonably to restrain unlawful monopolistic trade-restraining combinations from exercising any rights in the state may be conceded, an act which compels the owner of a copyright to offer it for sale in a certain way, and if he fails to do so takes it from him without compensation, violates the due process and equal protection clauses of the constitution and the federal copyright act."

In dealing with the saving clause which the legislature made a part of the measure, the court said:

"The supreme court of Nebraska has held that a statutory expression of the separability of the various sections or provisions of a statute is an aid merely to judicial interpretation."

ASCAP is said to control 85 to 90 per cent of popular music essential for the operation of radio stations, dance halls, hotels and theatres.

The Nebraska statute in question became effective May 17, 1937. ASCAP is a voluntary unincorporated association of New York, to which each member has assigned the exclusive right of public performance for profit of his copyrighted compositions. The five-year contract between members and ASCAP expires December 31, 1940.

Lubitsch Comedy

Ernst Lubitsch, producer-director, herewith furnishes 95 minutes of light comedy admirably played by a cast strong in marquee value. It is a film in the Lubitsch manner, a Continental comedy handsomely mounted, and adequately fitted out with the better variety of Lubitsch touches. That is to say, it is adroitly developed and smartly conceived, a polished item of product. It makes no attempt to be tremendous or important and succeeds in being pleasantly entertaining.

Samson Raphaelson derived the screen play from a stage play by Nikolaus Laszlo and it is happily free of the risque connotations commonly associated with Continental comedies, an unfilmed background infidelity being the sole mild reminder of the Continental origin. This figures merely as pertaining incidentally to the essentially simple foreground story, which has to do principally with a young man and woman, coworkers in a shop in Budapest, who quarrel incessantly whilst conducting, unaware, a mental courtship by mutually anonymous correspondence. The device by which they are brought together ultimately is the sort of story material with which Lubitsch is at his best.

James Stewart gives his usual smooth portrayal and Margaret Sullavan goes along with him step for step. Frank Morgan handles a fundamentally serious assignment competently and Joseph Schildkraut is adequately reprehensible as the not too villainous villain. William Tracy gets rich laugh dividends out of a comedy casting.

Gangster Picture

No studio produces a gangster picture quite so expertly as the Warner plant where, under executive producer Hal B. Wallis' gifted tutelage, the business of proving that crime doesn't pay has been reduced to the status of an exact science. This time the associate producer in direct charge is Louis F. Edelman, the director is Lloyd Bacon, and the screen play is by Warren Duff out of a story by Jonathan Finn out of a book by Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

The basic argument of the picture is to the effect that an ex-convict on parole finds it so difficult to obtain employment that he usually resumes the practice of crime as a matter of necessity. The early part of the film argues the point most illuminatingly and convincingly, after which the parolee whose experience has been used for the purpose goes back to robbery as a life work and the picture winds up in a hail of lead quite as spectacular and lethal as any the studio has turned out.

Top billing is given impassive George Raft, who plays the temporarily honest ex-convict with the usual Raft solidity. Four rungs down the billing Humphrey Bogart makes a less noble gangster type more credible. William Holden, a name for the ads because of "Golden Boy," does reasonably well with a secondary lead and Jane Bryan handles a subdued feminine lead handily.

A Child is Born

(Warner Bros.)

Hospital Drama

Here is drama—indeed, a group of dramas—about life in its living and in its beginning. With its vital action concentrated in a maternity hospital, the picture provides a realistic view of the travails of both the living and the beginning of life. Of questionable interest to children, perhaps, it will hold many a gripping moment for adults.

While "no punches are pulled" with respect to essential dramatic action and emotional appeal, the theme is handled with restraint. The audience is made fully conscious of the tremendous emotional impact upon those concerned in the bringing of a child into the world, and even the modern scientific machinery attending such an event is described in impressive detail; yet the drama is after all that of people, not of a process, and this gives incisive glimpses of a number of lives, drawn together by the common purpose of motherhood.

Exploitation of a picture of this theme, of course, calls for restraint comparable to that used in the narration—or rather, a comparable selectivity advised by the specific character of the patronage. There are gripping episodes honestly portrayed in sensitive acting and direction, while the dramatic suggestiveness of the camera is liberally employed.

Entente Cordiale

(Concord Films)

Historical Pageantry

Like the title the film is a very cordial hands-across-the-channel gesture on the part of Producer Max Glass and his French colleagues who had anything to do with the production. Based on Andre Maurois' "Edward VII and His Time," the picture accords Edward full credit for the Franco-British entente, which incidentally appears to be more concrete today after being cemented by two wars, one current. The film encompasses the period starting from the end of the last century and Victoria's reign to Edward's death in 1910.

Quite a few well known English and French historical figures are portrayed, the English including Victoria, Edward, Joseph Chamberlain, Lord Kitchener and Lord Salisbury. It is interesting to note that while a competent make-up job has been accomplished, the French actors portraying the English still are French. The Gallic wit and the expressive characteristics of the race hardly can lend authenticity to a Chamberlain or a Kitchener. The clipped speech, the austerity of a British Minister or the ruggedness of an English army officer in the colonial service is missed.

Albeit, this is a handsome production produced on the grand scale. Edward here is the gay boulevardier who spends a good deal of his time in Paris watching the "can-can" girls perform and ignoring some bad press notices, for it is to be remembered that at that time the English and French were considered "traditional" enemies. Then too, Kitchener was taking over the Sudan and the French Marchand Expedition was occupying territory that the general was loath to have them occupy. Additional English royalty had blood ties with the Kaiser and were considering entente ties.

But it came to pass, as the story goes, that Edward's warm regard for the French and his unfriendliness towards his nephew, the Kaiser, brought England and France together in an entente cordiale signed at a great ball in Buckingham Palace.

On the French side the historical figures are Delcasse, the Prime Minister, who resembles somewhat our own Theodore Roosevelt; Clemenceau, not then the "tiger" of later days; Paul Cambon, Loubet and others. Not to be overlooked, but relatively unimportant, is a romantic element, the principals being the daughter of an English Lord and the son of a French Deputy and newspaper publisher.

Reviewed at the 55th St. Playhouse, one of two theatres in New York where the film had a double premiere, the other being the Fifth Avenue Playhouse. A capacity afternoon audience indicated a decided liking for the picture.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Distributed by Concord Films. Produced in Paris by Max Glass. Directed by Marcel L'Herbier. Based on "Edward VII and His Time," by Andre Maurois. Music by Marcel Lattes. Settings by Guy de Gastyne. Photography by Ted Pahle. English titles. Running time, 110 minutes. Release date, December 25, 1939. General audience classification.

Last Desire

(Transatlantic)

May-December Passion

Liam O'Flaherty, by whom Hollywood did quite nobly in the picturization of his "The Informer," again offers his particular penchant for pathological psychology in his latest case study exhibit of passion running wild. A previous work of last year, "The Puritan," all about a sex slayer and a case of conscience, had run afoul of an unfavorable verdict from the censorial scissors of the New York Board of Regents. This time Mr. O'Flaherty's reception has not been so frigid and his present pictorial opus concerning a May-December amatory partnership between an old man and a young girl has been granted official permission for exhibition on Empire State screens. However, general audience consideration of the seamy sided scenario may not be as lenient.

Halfway through the story, there is slipped in a title announcement that the principals have been joined in holy matrimony but, according to the original way of telling the tale, the connubial connections are more in the line of censor concessions than fictional faithfulness. Whether the couple has the benefit of clergy or not, the arrangement may increase the moral tone a trifle but the entertainment level remains at rock bottom.

"Georges" is a lonely old man of whom there may be appended the old wives' saying that there is no fool like an old fool. To give himself companionship in his bleak and barren days, he brings home a girl from the streets, who happens to be passing by while looking for her deserting lover. A platonic friendship on the old man's part develops into a jealous passion and when the girl, by now his wife, reciprocates the passes made at her by a mutual friend of the home circle, the husband strangles her and commits suicide by drowning. Perhaps the old boy's trouble was all glandular.

On the Night of the Fire

(Somlo-GFD)

Murder Melodrama

Joseph Somlo and Richard Norton set about three films, of which this is the first, with the aim of putting Britain on the screen map, with fidelity and realism. Not all British working class life is necessarily as somber as this, but the film does reflect with candour a scrap of low life in the greasy and turgid backstreets of an English shipbuilding town—obviously Newcastle. It is, further, an honest study of human weakness and futility.

For Britain the stars Ralph Richardson and Diana Wynyard are, of course, known, and much liked.

In essence the study of a weakling barber who steals a wad of money and murders a parsimonious shopkeeper who knows his secret, the picture develops into a relentless study of human fear and inhuman cruelty, knitting in detail of meanness and treachery, suspicion and persecution.

Gunther Krampf's camera-work brings memories of the earlier German films.

As the boxer "Jim Smith," Dave Crowley, lightweight star of the British boxing world, is uncommonly good.

The trade audience at the New Gallery, London, screening watched it with tensity and interest. The question of suitability for the wartime audience seemed, however, to be the major matter of ultimate debate.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

High School

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Withers Whimsy

First in a projected series of Jane Withers pictures to be made against the background of school days, this is a film which sets the series off to a flying start, and will give subsequent editions a tangible mark of success at which to shoot.

Miss Withers has never had a better role than this one of the bright youngster who is made to realize the importance of getting along as a member of the group in which she finds herself. As the daughter of a wealthy rancher, and the niece of a high school principal, her background acts as a force making her feel superior to her school mates, until she realizes the necessity of acclimating herself to the new environment.

The well known Thomas Jefferson High School of San Antonio, Texas, which has achieved fame of a sort as the home of bands, an ROTC group, and other units of a flavorful and uniformed nature, is used as the "High School" in the story by Jack Jungmeyer, Jr., Edith Skouras and Harold Tarshis, a story made to measure, and excellently so, for Miss Withers. It will do much for the repute of the young star who was 10th in this year's HERALD-FAME poll of money making stars among independent theatremen, and but slightly lower in the combined listing of votes.

George Nicholls' direction, including that of a Keystone chase in cars of ancient vintage, keeps the plot moving without a let down after a slow introduction.

John Stone was the associate producer, with Sol Wurtzel as executive producer.

Joe Brown, Jr., as the football-playing student of no great academic ability, shows great promise in his understanding portrayal of the role opposite Miss Withers.

Previewed at the Fox-Wilshire Theatre, Hollywood, where an audience which had already seen a more pretentious feature expressed complete and thorough satisfaction with the story and the players.—WALTER SELDEN.

Here's Hal

(Paramount)

For the Jitterbugs

Appearing with Hal Kemp, whose name is sufficient to attract the swingsters, are Bob Allen and the Smoothies—Babs, Charley and Little—as vocalists. The numbers include "In the Shade of Old Apple Tree," Hoagy Carmichael's "Vagabond Dreams," "In an Eighteenth Century Drawing Room" and "Swampfire," as Hall introduced it, featuring the Kamp sub-tone clarinet.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Old Hickory

(Vitaphone)

Historical Featurette in Color

Another masterly historical reproduction of famous American personalities and events, this time in a moving miniature devoted to the personal and political life of "Old Hickory" or President Andrew Jackson, is presented under Vitaphone's Historical Featurette division. The material is worthy of exhibition in any show shop up and down and across the whole forty-eight states, not to mention the possessions, of the country and is particularly pointed for schools and better film organizations. In this current treatment, Jackson is first seen winning the Battle of New Orleans in the War of 1812. There is a sequence depicting the personal side of the man, as expressed in the footage sketching the slander campaign conducted against him and his wife. "Old Hickory's" devotion to the Union is described in his stand against the South Carolina statesmen who threaten to secede because of the question of a protective tariff. A particularly effective section of the subject is the conclusion which pictures a young army captain out in the frontier west reading Jackson's toast, "Our Federal Union—must and shall be preserved." The fadeout shows the captain's face to be that of Abraham Lincoln. Hugh Sothern, who introduced the character of Andrew Jackson in the DeMille epic, "The Buccaneer," handles the role in this miniature as effectively as he did in the super production. Color and background mountings are handsome. Running time, 17 minutes.

World of 1960

Futurama

In the wake of the New York World's Fair and the Golden Gate Exposition a number of short subjects have appeared on the general aspects of the two great shows. Here the subject is entirely concerned with but one exhibit of the New York Fair. The exhibit, which was one of the most outstanding, if not the most outstanding, hits of the Fair in 1939, is the Futurama, designed by Norman Bel Geddes for General Motors. The exhibit, which forecasts the "World of 1960," is seen through the eyes of a grandfather and his two grandchildren. Produced and directed by B. K. Blake. Running time, 10 minutes.

Questions and Answers

This is the fourth in the "Information Please" series of questions and answers. The questions are propounded to a board of experts by Clifton Fadiman, who serves in the same capacity on the radio program of the same name. The experts are John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams and Oscar Levant, of the regular board, and Deems Taylor, composer and music critic, as guest expert. The questions range from fur coats to song titles and the answers from correct to comic. The series continues to be an interesting one and the experts a rare crew. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr. Supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, 11 minutes.

The Film Fan

(Vitaphone)

Looney Tune Interlude

This time Porky Pig has his adventures or more correctly his misadventures in connection with the cinema. The porcine character is sent to the store but on his way to do his errand, he forgets about his assignment, when he comes across a special children's show at a new movie palace. The little pig is enjoying the proceedings immensely until a laugh finish acts as an unwelcome reminder of his errand job. For those who have come to be fond of Porky, this latest cartoon cutup of his should be amusing.—Running time, seven minutes.

West Wall

(RKO Pathe)

Reelism

Contrary to what is indicated by the title this is not exclusively concerned with Germany's Siegfried Line but touches on that line of fortifications no more, and probably less, than it does on the French Maginot Line. All the scenes of the two "lines" shown here have appeared in newsreels before. Regardless, this is a most interesting subject and the reason lies in the commentary, maps and animated diagrams of Major George Fielding Eliot. Major Eliot, author of "The Ramparts We Watch" and other books dealing with military matters, has emerged as a military expert, both as a commentator in newspapers and on the air, in the current European war. His description and diagrams of the theatre of war on the western front gave a comprehensive picture of what it would mean to either side to attack the other and consequently why this war, on land, is notable principally for its inactivity. Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 69

(Universal)

Interesting

Listed in the array of odds and ends of some of the human race are an 18-year-old college chap who has stretched himself out to the longitudinal proportions of seven feet and three inches; an accentric, Bouck White, a Harvard graduate and formerly prominent figure in radical circles, who has togged his house out in all manner of bizarre decorations, and a demonstration of some of the latest wizardry of modern chemistry in the manufacture of material for milady's finery from evening wear to bathing beach dress. Additional believe it or nots are a rooster that hops for his lunch, reported to be a very peculiar trick for chicken table manners, and a gentleman who uses pumpkins to effect mask-like features. The display of oddities should brighten up any program.—Running time, nine minutes.

Bits of Life

(Paramount)

Paragraphic

The short short story idea comes to the screen with material based on two vignettes from Liberty. The first, a sweetness and light theme, tells of a young bride whose marital troubles are resolved by a serene old lady. The second, less credible, depicts murder, heat and thirst in the desert incident to discovery of gold by a prospector. Both are well told.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Rhumba Land

Latinized Musical

The bill of talent fare in this musical round, set in a Latin locale, may have some appeal to patrons below the Rio Grande or to the metropolitan night spot coteries of Hispanophiles, but to the general run of English speaking audiences the presentation will be not so entertaining or artistic. Outside of the picturesque and graceful toe work of Vivien Fay, the cast offers hardly stimulating screen stuff. Wini Shaw, in her efforts to be a sultry deep toned Latin, gives the impression she is from Manhattan. Then there is what is called the "Spanish Oomph Girl," Tana by name, who bangs on a musical instrument and emits weird vocal cries. There are also a rhumba team, a group of singing gauchos, a dark eyed and plump Latin tenor and a native band.—Running time, 18½ minutes.

One for the Book

(Vitaphone)

A Beauty of a Broadway Brevity

The Broadway Brevity variety show reaches a new high in entertainment effectiveness in this newest presentation under the "B. B." auspices. Against a bookish background, some familiar fictional folk sing, dance and make merry generally. Running in and around the literary personalities of Cinderella, Rip Van Winkle, Huckleberry Finn, and Joe Miller (of joke book notoriety) are a minstrel show with all the black face high spirits copyrighted by this particular brand of talent demonstration, a bevy of Gae Foster dancing dolls, a soft shoe specialty by Hal Sherman and the swinging and swaying singing of Betty Hutton. Betty's talent for jitterbug vocalization has earned her some sort of royal recognition among the "Yeah, man" sectors and her right to this high distinction is no more evident than in the moments allowed her to do her stuff. Betty's brethren of the "beat it out" musical moods, together with all folk who like gay and snappy amusement should find within the two reel running space of this miniature lots of smiles and songs to please their most exacting demands.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Snow Follies

(Universal)

Two-Reel Musical

A round of vaudeville turns is presented in this latest offering of the two-reel musical Universal moods. The highlight of the specialities by way of being perhaps the best known is Lillian Roth, a torrid tone chanteuse, who supplies some blistering vocalization in a swing street spiritual yclept "Sing, You, Sinners." Other talent representations number a skating trio, a tenor to sing "My Own," a quartet of swing sisters to do something silly in the way of rhythm jumble, a specialty dancer, a team of ballroom terpsichoreans and a lady accordionist. For those whose nostalgic urge for the reputedly defunct vaudeville will apparently blind them to the mediocrity of this presentation, the bill may have some appeal but for others the verdict on the performances will be, despite the wintery background against which they are run, not "so hot".—Running time, 19 minutes.

Sports Issue

One of the most difficult of all sports is Jai-Alai, a sport that demands constant practice from an early age and which, because of its terrific speed, burns out a player before the age of 30. The sport is played little in the United States and that mostly in the south. It is played principally in Mexico and Spain and rivals bull-fighting in spectator interest. The fine points of the game are shown here by some of the best players of Mexico. Narrative by Stanley Frank. Described by Dan Seymour. Running time, nine minutes.

Travel

This is a brief trip through little known Chile including Santiago, Vina del Mar, Valparaiso, an Indian village and the lake regions of the Andes—all done in color. The subject is one of great interest but the color is not satisfactory and the editing and commentary are below par for audiences accustomed to better. —Running Time, 10 minutes.

Romance of the Potato

(MGM)

Pete Smith Pedagogy

Mixed up with the customary and always welcome screwy sayings of Pete Smith are some interesting slices of dietary history of the potato, as dished out in the latest Smithian serving. The fable begins with the introduction of the Spanish conquistadors to the lowly spud from the generous table of some South American Indians. At that time, the redskins had the name of "battata" for the delicacy. The Spanish explorer, De Cieca, transported the edible finding to the motherland, but the innovator was imprisoned for trying to poison his king, when the royal chef unknowingly served up the potatoes uncooked. The next testing ground for the floury food was handled in England by Sir Walter Raleigh, who seemed to a sort of a semi-Elsa Maxwell of the Elizabethan times. A hilarious bit of debunking is done in this section, when the impudent Mr. Smith depicts the famed cloak scene between the "Virgin

Withers and Autry

Jane Withers and Gene Autry are here cast together for the first time, with the latter as the grandson of Wild Bill Carson, the former as the young daughter of a family which has long had a feud with the Carsons.

With the aid of episodes involving a film company which comes to the small town in which they both live, the feud is patched up and Autry marries Jane's elder sister, played by Marjorie Weaver.

Also seen are Frank Thomas, Robert Lowery, Katherine Aldridge, Hobart Cavanaugh, Jack Carson, Hamilton MacFadden and Charles Middleton.

The original screen play was by Lou Breslow and Owen Francis, who also collaborated on "Pack Up Your Troubles." John Stone acted as associate producer, and Alfred Green directed, as he did on "The Gracie Allen Murder Case."

Allegorical Antiquity

Through the medium of a flashback, an elderly scientist tells the story of the prehistoric carvings on the walls of a cave to a group of mountain climbers. What the carvings tell is a tale of two early tribes who discover the value of cooperation when faced by a common enemy in the form of a prehistoric monster.

Victor Mature, Lon Chaney, Jr., Carole Landis and John Hubbard are seen in the original screenplay by Mickell Novak, George Baker and C. J. Frickert, directed by Hal Roach Sr. and Jr., and produced by Mr. Roach Sr.

The original story was written by Eugene Roche.

Release date: To be determined.

The Way of All Flesh

(Paramount)

Psychological Study

Akim Tamiroff, in this new presentation of "The Way of All Flesh," enacts the role played by Emil Jannings in 1927, of a man's gradual disintegration. Robber of securities entrusted to him, he allows his family to think him dead rather than disgrace them.

Gladys George portrays the part played by Phyllis Haver opposite Emil Jannings in the silent version. William Henry, Muriel Angelus, Roger Imhof, Berton Churchill and James Seay round out the cast.

Based on a story by Lajos Biro and Jules Furthman, the screen play was written by Lenore Coffee, who, in collaboration, wrote the story basis of "Good Girls Go to Paris" and the screen plays of "White Banners" and "Four Daughters."

Louis King, who directed "Seventeen" and "Undercover Doctor," did the same here, with Eugene Zukor as associate producer.

Release date: To be determined.

The Wolf of Wall Street

(Republic)

Murder Mystery

Edmund Lowe appears in "The Wolf of Wall Street" as a criminal lawyer who accepts the post of District Attorney after an innocent client has been sent to the electric chair, and as such brings to justice the head of a criminal gang, ostensibly an honest financier.

James Stephenson portrays the gang leader, while Rose Hobart, Bill Demarest, Jerome Cowan, Maurice Murphy and Ann Baldwin round out the roles.

Robert North was associate producer, with William McGann as director, as he was on "Everybody's Hobby" and "Gantry the Great."

Release date: To be determined.

Buck Benny Rides Again

(Paramount)

Comedy

The self-effacing Mr. Benny, aided and abetted by "Rochester," the creation of Eddie Anderson, is here seen as a radio star who poses as a virile son of the west on a ranch, with complications besetting him from the first reel.

Ellen Drew, Phil Harris, Andy Devine, Virginia Dale and Lillian Cornell further the story with their varied characterizations.

Mark Sandrich, who directed "Man About Town," "Carefree" and "Shall We Dance," was producer-director.

Release date: May 3, 1940.

Queen" and her chivalrous gentleman friend. For, as "good Queen Bess" stepped up the velvety shield, she was dunked in a mud puddle up to her royal ears. The next important step in potato cultivation happened in France at the time of the French Revolution and it is to the credit of this lowly vegetable that it was instrumental in saving the neck of its introducer, an apothecary by the name of Parmentier. Incidentally, it is credited to Raleigh's efforts that the Emerald Isle met its favorite dish and it was really the famine of 1845 that brought the Gaelic candidates for the New York City police force and the builders of the Union Pacific railroad to this country. Along with the Hibernians came their spuds. If all the stories of history could be told as comically and as entertainly as this pageant of the potato, Mr. Smith would become the great American historian.—Running time, nine minutes.

Beautiful Switzerland

Travelogue

The scenic beauties, and they are many, of the small Alpine country, Switzerland, are pictured here. The camera work is of a high order, capturing a good deal of the natural splendor of the Alps. Shown are the lakes, Lucerne and Geneva; the famous castle of Chillon, the Bernese Highlands, Lauterbrunnen Valley, the ascent to the Gornergrat, the Matterhorn and quaint mountain villages. Produced by Andre De La Varre. Narrated by Len Sterling. Running time, 10 minutes.

Our Gang, Students

This newest Our Gang cutup should have some salutary effects besides being amusing entertainment for the kiddie fan following. For one thing, perhaps, little boys (and the girls, too) may all grow up to study hard, as a result of seeing what happened to Alfalfa, the dope. The juvenile morality play goes something like this. Alfalfa is a big shot on the local neighborhood football team but his daddy is none too pleased with his son's low score scholastic record. Pop draws his offspring to the sidelines to recount the sad story of an Alfalfa who grows up to be the campus pigskin idol only to be barred from playing at the crucial moment of the big game by his study flunks. So tell the kids: if you want to make the All-American poll of pigskin glamour boys, you better start hitting the books instead of the line. What does the country's first string of collegiate gridiron eleven say to such advice?—Running time, 11 minutes.

For Music Lovers

Number three in this season's symphonic series, the reel records Rossini's popular overture played by the 122 musicians of the National Philharmonic Orchestra of the United States under the direction of Frederick Feher. The orchestra ably upholds its reputation.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Comedy

Slapstick comedy is the basic element of this subject. A new combination composed of Noah Beery, Jr., Paul Hurst and Shemp Howard provide the comedy. Howard is a prize fight manager, Hurst a punch-drunk pugilist and Beery a young athlete who becomes a prize fighter and wins the big bout. The action and comedy centers around Beery, who doesn't want his mother to know he's a fighter and who finds himself fighting the brother of the girl he loves. Produced and directed by Jules White. Running time, 18 minutes.

LEGISLATIVE "OFF" YEAR MAY BRING RELIEF FROM NEW TAX THREATS

Only Eight States To Hold Regular Sessions in 1940; Special Meetings Not Expected to Touch Film Matters

This is an "off" year for state legislatures, a bare eight states having regular sessions set, and another eight contemplating possible "emergency" sessions, to take up financial, tax and budget matters, for the most part.

With Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia having regular sessions on their state legislative calendar and Nebraska a special session, and only California, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Texas and Wisconsin contemplating emergency sessions, it appears that their exhibitor and distributor champions of the motion picture will have a comparatively easy time of it in legislative halls in 1940. Their threatening battles in Congress over the Neely anti-block selling bill, however, is another matter.

There are some troubles, though, in legislatures and councils of some cities and municipalities.

Seek Lower Kentucky Tax

A bill to lower Kentucky's amusement tax, said to be the highest of its kind in the country, will be placed before the 1940 General Assembly.

The special session of the Nebraska legislature, which started Tuesday, probably will not consider any legislation covering the amusement field. The session has been called in connection with the state assistance relief and according to the Governor of Nebraska "only subjects of extreme emergency character will be included."

In Pennsylvania, Governor Arthur H. James said he was hopeful that business recovery and WPA employment increases would alleviate any critical need for additional relief financing at a special session of the legislature, but "it is rather difficult to avoid a special session sometime in 1940, if for no other purpose than to transfer funds."

In the event of a special session to meet relief needs it is likely that an emergency amusement tax will be adopted. Two one-cent amusement tax measures, however, were defeated at the 1939 regular session. One of these proposed bills was introduced for the purpose of meeting relief needs, while the other was to meet proposed increases in teachers' salaries.

Whether or not Massachusetts will call an extraordinary legislative session in 1940 remains a matter of conjecture. The Bay State voted last year to hold biennial sessions of the General Court. The Governor, however, may call a special session at any time. Film matters, now under consideration by special recess commissions, include tax proposals and so-called safety and labor measures.

New Tax Feared in Texas

Texas exhibitors are worried over the possibility that the state legislature may adopt an amusement tax on admissions exceeding 50 cents, this being in addition to the present federal levy. The legislature faces the prospect of voting upon a $21,000,000 tax bill, the largest in the history of Texas.

A possibility of a special legislature session in Wisconsin is seen there. The latest group to request a special session is the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor (A F of L), which urged Governor Julius P. Heil to call the session to raise new revenue by a revision of income and inheritance taxes.

RCA, GE, WESTINGHOUSE IN NEW LICENSING PACTS

Announcement that the Radio Corporation of America has entered into new license agreements with General Electric and Westinghouse Electric was made Monday by officers of the three companies. The new agreement is supplemental to license agreements which have been in effect among the three since 1932.

Under the new licenses for the United States and most foreign countrise, RCA will be enabled to put the results of its research to broader uses in both radio and other industries employing electronic devices, it was said. In general, RCA has acquired from General Electric and Westinghouse the right to sell, and to grant licenses to others for the sale of, most types of radio tubes for all uses, and has also acquired the right to sell associated apparatus for many uses.

Under the agreement, General Electric and Westinghouse acquire from RCA the right to sell equipment, including tubes, for many radio applications, such as broadcasting transmitters, television and facsimile apparatus, and airport equipment.

The Federation claims that the state faces a $17,000,000 shortage in the 1939-41 biennium, and that present administration proposals to meet the deficit would fail to balance the budget.

Charges have been made by various groups that the present administration is deliberately setting the stage for a sales tax. Such a tax would meet with strong opposition from Wisconsin exhibitors.

A new three per cent admission tax on amusements is being considered by the California state finance department.

The Merchants Association of New York City has asked Governor Herbert Lehman for a reduction of at least $30,000,000 and preferably $50,000,000 in taxes for the new fiscal year beginning July 1st. The Committee for Industrial Organization has renewed its appeal for a change in the employment agency situation, including that of theatrical organizations and has asked a minimum 40 hour week with 40 cents per hour pay.

Increase Seen in Canada

Increased taxation of both a direct and indirect nature and an upward trend in excise duties on imports, which will affect the film industry in the Dominion, are expected to be introduced at the 1940 session of the Canadian Parliament, opening next Wednesday. The Governor has intimated that it requires additional revenue because of the war and will attempt to finance its war operations, already exceeding $1,000,000 per day, on a pay-as-you-go basis. Specifically the Government will seek revision of the amusement tax act in order to collect $2,000,000 annually from theatres. The tax was abolished two years ago.

While agreeing with the Bijou Amusement Company, et al, theatre operating company of Woonsocket, R. I., that a municipality has no power to raise revenue by taxation unless such power is clearly granted to it by the legislature, A. A. Capotosto, Rhode Island supreme court justice, this week in Providence upheld the action of the Woonsocket Board of Police Commissioners in increasing theatre license fees in that city last January.

Ohio Sales Tax Up

Ohio sales tax collections for the first 11 months of this year amounted to $40,239,359, an increase of $5,524,122 over the corresponding period of 1938, according to figures released by Don H. Ebright, state treasurer, who estimates that the full year will yield approximately $45,000,000.

Ohio theatres pay a three per cent retail sales tax based on grosses, but returns from the admission tax have been decidedly lower in proportion to other lines, definitely indicating that theatres are not keeping pace with the improvement in general business conditions.

License fees and taxes from motion picture theatres in the State of Virginia amounted to $30,166.71 in 1939, according to the State Department of Taxation. The previous year the amount was $30,178.33. The report also showed that there were 745 theatres in operation in Virginia in 1939, as compared to 749 in 1938.

Gross collections of the Virginia Division of Motion Picture Censorship increased while disbursements decreased in 1939 as compared with 1938, it was disclosed this week.

Collections in 1939 amounted to $37,023 as against $36,161 in 1938, an increase of $862. The 1939 disbursement totaled $18,471 as compared with $21,678 in 1938, a decrease of $3,307. Five films were rejected in each of the last two years, but 35 eliminations were ordered in 1939 as compared with 25 in 1938.

Owners Protest Standee Ban

The City Council of Wilmington, Del., has taken under advisement a protest by managers of city theatres against the inclusion in the pending fire prevention ordinance a provision which would forbid any standing between the last row of seats and the foyer wall. The objection was voiced by theatremen at a meeting with members of council and a committee from the Chamber of Commerce.

Thomas Read, Michigan's Attorney General, has ruled that only state police may be deputized as fire marshals to inspect motion picture theatres. Local fire chiefs may not be so deputized. A further consequence of the ruling will be the invalidation of the traditional "honorary fire marshal" card, which has been a standing pass held by politicians and their friends.

Sunday Films

The Mayor and board of aldermen of Martin, Tenn., have approved the showing of films on Sunday afternoon.

City officials of Hobbs, N. M., have dug up a 150 year old blue law and ordered a Sunday lid clamped on all business. Baseball was exempted and there is a possibility that other sports will be exempted.

The Halifax, N. S., board of trade has endorsed the movement for the opening of Halifax film theatres on Sundays during the war. The board, one of the most important trade organizations in Canada, has given approval to showing pictures on Sundays, as a means of giving the men in uniform the right kind of entertainment and to keep them out of undesirable places. It is proposed to allow the theatres to open from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. for pictures only, each Sunday.

NEW POSTS TO EDINGTON, HENIGSON, BERMAN; THREE SALES DRIVES START

Former Independent Producer in Charge of All High Budget Films at RKO; Sherman, Darmour Get New Contracts

A series of important personnel appointments, changes and continuances in Hollywood this week placed Harry Edington on top of RKO filming, Pandro Berman in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Henry Henigson as vice-president of James Roosevelt's new Globe Productions, and continued Harry Sherman as producer for Paramount and Larry Darmour for Columbia.

Mr. Edington was appointed executive producer of RKO and will be responsible for and in charge of all the more important pictures to be made on the RKO Radio lot in Hollywood. Before his appointment to his new post Mr. Edington was president of Famous Productions, Inc., whose pictures Universal released, the latest being "Green Hell," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Bennett.

Previously he was in the agency business in Hollywood, his clients having included Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Ann Harding, Gladys Swarthout, Grace Moore, Nelson Eddy, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Cary Grant and Joel McCrea. Prior to this he was a production executive identified with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Lee Marcus will continue to act as executive producer in charge of the balance of RKO Radio's program, according to George Schaefer, president. J. J. Nolan continues as assistant to the president, in charge of all studio operations.

Berman on Vacation

Mr. Berman, former RKO production head, will become associated with MGM upon completion of a vacation about February 1st. He is at Sun Valley, Idaho. His new contract is understood to have a three year term. Commenting on Mr. Berman's signing, Louis B. Mayer, MGM studio chief, called him "one of the outstanding young producers in the industry today."

Mr. Henigson becomes vice-president and associate producer of Globe and will concern himself with the completion of production personnel. Mr. Roosevelt said this week that a release deal would be announced shortly.

Globe will produce two pictures this year, the first of which is to be "The Bat." Associated with Mr. Roosevelt are Guy Prosper, story editor; Dee Izzard, production manager (through arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn), and Henry Verstappen, general production assistant.

Sherman Gets New Contract

Mr. Sherman's new deal with Paramount is for two years. He will produce six films of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series and two Zane Grey pictures besides one special for each of the two years.

The tentative titles are "Riders of the Panamint," "Buckaroo," "The Chisholm Trail," "Men of the Plains," "Three Men from Texas," "Border Vigilantes," "The Thundering Herd" and "Code of the West." The last two are Zane Grey stories.

WALKER, EX-MAYOR, TALKS PRODUCTION

James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, conferred with the present Mayor of New York, Fiorello LaGuardia, Friday in reference to the campaign for eastern film production. Mr. Walker declined to comment on the discussion and referred inquiries to Mayor LaGuardia.

The Mayor said he had discussed the situation generally with Mr. Walker who had offered to support the plan. He indicated that Mr. Walker represented exhibitors who favor increased eastern production, but declined to identify those whom Mr. Walker represented.

Referring to status of the campaign, the Mayor said: "Some points are now beyond the pioneering stage; others are rounding out into practical shape."

Leon Bergere, who claims to represent a European financial interest, conferred on the same day with Clendenin Ryan, head of the Mayor's chamber of commerce, which was recently established to attract business to New York. Mr. Bergere said that he and and Mr. Ryan discussed eastern production but he also declined to comment further.

Signing of the new deal follows the signing of a two-year contract between Mr. Sherman and William Boyd, star of the Cassidy series. Boyd has completed his 30th picture for Paramount, tentatively titled "Hold Your Horses."

Mr. Darmour has been signed by Columbia to make three more serials in the coming year, in addition to his pictures starring Jack Holt for Columbia. Mr. Darmour has purchased the rights to the cartoon strip, "Terry and the Pirates," by Milton Caniff.

Withdraw "Little Mothers"

Edwin Fadiman of National Pictures Corporation announces that under the terms of his agreement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under which he sold them the English remake rights to the Eddie Cantor starring vehicle, "40 Little Mothers" going into production next week, National has agreed to withdraw completely from circulation the original French version with English subtitles.

Powell Named Editor

S. Morgan Powell, Canadian film and dramatic critic, has been appointed editor of the Montreal Daily Star, directing the editorial page.

Campaigns To Wind Up Sales of 1939-1940 Product Begun by Universal, United Artists, RKO; To Run Through Spring

Distribution this week was concerned with the business of sales and booking drives to liquidate standing commitments on 1939-40 product. At RKO, drive "captains" started a rapid-fire tour of the 38 company exchanges in the U. S. and Canada; at 7:30 on the morning of last Wednesday, Warner branch managers in their beds in the field were summoned to telephones to hear home office announcements of the beginning of the Warner "Gradwell Sears Drive"; Universal pitted its eastern divisions against the west in its drive; United Artists announced a series of district drives.

Exchange Tours Started

Three members of the Ned Depinet Drive advance forces headed by "Captain" Herb MacIntyre started a tour of the RKO exchanges on Tuesday. Accompanying him are Walter Branson, midwestern district manager, and Harry Gittleson, editor of the company's publication, who will get out a paper from the field.

The Ned Depinet Drive period is from January 27th to May 10th. Ten big features are scheduled for playing time in this period.

The first of a series of Columbia divisional sales meetings will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Mayflower hotel in Washington, with 23 attending from the mideastern division. Other meetings will be in Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco.

'Phone Call Is Signal

The Warner branch managers awakened by telephone were greeted by cheery-voiced operators with the following message: "Good morning, wake up—the Sears Drive has started!" The sales drive, which began last week with the release of "Four Wives," continues for 16 weeks through April 13th.

A Universal sales drive in honor of William A. Scully, general sales manager, began on Sunday and will continue through May 4th.

Nate J. Blumberg, president; Mr. Scully and Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president and foreign manager, will leave New York for the coast on Friday and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, who arrived in New York over the week-end from the coast, will return there by plane Saturday.

U.A. Has Circuits Complete

United Artists has closed deals with every circuit in the eastern territory, according to an announcement by Harry L. Gold, vice-president and eastern general sales manager, at a meeting of eastern representatives in New York last Thursday.

Mr. Gold also announced a number of district sales drives to take place in each of the territories starting this Tuesday.

Nat L. Lefton, Republic franchise owner in Cleveland, reports the following winners of the Date drive just finished: First, $100, Rudy Norton, Cleveland salesman; second, $50, Jack Lefton, Cleveland salesman; third, $50, George Kirby, Cincinnati booker. Beginning this Monday and continuing for 16 weeks, Republic will hold a collection drive, with $500 in awards for winners.

SANTA DISAPPOINTS BRITISH TRADE AS FILMS COUNCIL DELAYS ACTION

Finance Organization to Subsidize Producers Certain to Result from Present Conferences; Close Control Is Expected

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

If the British industry in general, and British producers in particular, expected that Santa Claus Stanley this year would put something appreciable in their Xmas stockings, they were foredoomed to disappointment. The process of legislative beneficence is taking just a little longer.

Council Launches Study

True it is that the Films Council has got to work, formed an active and determined committee to explore and, so to speak, reorganize the future of the wartime industry, brought in financial experts and launched an exhaustive financial and industrial survey. The millenium, however, is not quite yet.

One thing is certain, and that is that the Board of Trade and its foster child the Films Council, mean action. They have lost no time in getting to grips with the situation. Practical steps have already been taken to materialize Mr. Stanley's plans for the industry. Nebulous as these are in detail they do, it is clear, provide for the establishment, in one form or another, of a films finance organization or Credit Bank formed with city money and designed to subsidize appropriate British producers and their filmmaking schemes.

Mr. Stanley has made this clear to the Council, and it is the keystone of their present deliberations. Whether the money shall go to producers direct from the city organizations, or through the Board of Trade or a subsidiary body, is one of the problems yet to be decided. That American monies frozen here will not of necessity form part of any such financial pool is, it would seem, equally certain. Voluntary lending of revenues on a guaranteed principal and interest basis would not presumably be ruled out. Mr. Stanley's initial statement of his intentions included the proviso that American producer-distributors could spend their quota monies "either directly on film production" or make it "available by way of guaranteed loan."

It is the Board's idea that any machinery which is set up for the financial assistance of British producers shall exercise close control over expenditure. Such control would include preliminary approval of the producer and his executives, of the subject to be filmed, and a close watch on the costing and expenditure on production processes, and even a guard over the time spent on making the films.

British producers who have optimistically expected Whitehall to be translated into a twentieth century Klondike, who believed that the mighty frozen credits which a wartime Government is going to detain in this country would be handed out to them gratuitously and generously, are doomed to disappointment.

The presence on the Committee of a new face, that of Mr. A. Palache, of the banking house of Helbert, Wagg and Co., as financial and economic adviser, and the likelihood that other banking and finance experts will cooperate in an advisory capacity as the occasion demands, indicate that the financial watchdogs have now been let off the chain.

Already the Committee has launched a comprehensive investigation of the financal and industrial resources of the industry, gone deeply into the studio and technical assets of the business, sought to register its personnel. They have even secured from distributors a complete record of their quota productions and acquisitions for the past two years, of their cost and status, and of the releases and revenues they have obtained.

The Stanley plans are directed specifically at voluntary production, not at the quota productions sponsored in the past and to be sponsored in the future by American interests here. Use may be made of the reciprocity clauses of the Act, and of the reciprocity provisions of the future regulations by some U. S. interests here, but it is on the cards that others will meet their obligations by directly sponsored productions.

Some misapprehension has been caused in industry circles by the wording of various paragraphs in the famous Stanley letter to Sir Frederick Whyte. One of these had reference to the control organization which is supposedly to have charge of the frozen American credits. There is not likely, in fact, to be any "organization" and indeed little if any "control." There will be obvious restrictions, restrictions such as would apply to any money in the foreign exchange category, but it is as certain as anything legislative can be certain in these fastly moving times, that, generally speaking, American interests here will have complete option on what they do with money they have earned and which is, after all, their own.

Advice Plentiful

Among the more serious critics and would-be architects of trade destinies, are the CEA, who characteristically mingle their formulae with equal parts of scepticism and caution. Interpreting Mr. Stanley's as a request for suggestions they have decided to make no suggestions of any advanced or comprehensive character until they know more about his plans.

They have arrived at this state of mind and argument by a studied process, by careful if partisan analysis of the past and present situation. Their first and last fear is naturally of a shortage of product. The elimination of the footage and cost clauses of the Quota Act they foresee as cutting the numerical total of U. S. sponsored films in favor of a few expensive films marketable on international lines—an annual maximum of 30 to 35 pictures. Even this prospect they cannot envisage confidently, when they regard the restrictions on the foreign movements of American nationals, in the war zone at any rate, with obvious repercussions on the import of the necessary personnel. The best available British personnel they foresee being scooped by American interests with consequent shortage of staffs, technicians and stars facing voluntary producers.

Examining the blind and advance booking situation, with one eye on the co-operative production schemes currently floating in the trade breeze, they realize that such schemes—despite the Bernstein theory of proprietorial interest in product—require a year's product to be booked in advance. America is pointed to with the suggestion that exhibitors there are the losers by advance booking. Examination of British processes, they claim, has revealed that the plums go to the circuits first, because producers need the revenue. Like conditions would still obtain and if anything be aggravated with undue hardship resulting to the independents.

Cooperative Booking Considered

Nevertheless this co-operative booking idea is still in the winds and likely to be quoted to Mr. Stanley by any exhibitor deputation which discusses future regulation of the industry. It depends obviously on numerical support and there is as yet no assurance it will get it in sufficient degree.

Thus exhibitors asking for further information about the prospective machinery, will insist on their alleged rights, plead for the retention of these forward booking regulations, but also suggest that since producers will need guarantees if borrowing money, some control of rentals will be needed, ask, too, that any quota percentages which be applied to them shall be such as will be bearable without due exploitation.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

W. Somerset Maugham's "Christmas Holiday" appropriately enough led the listing of Best Sellers of fiction as the Yuletide season got underway, and in the third spot was another seasonal tome, "The Nazarene" by Sholem Asch. In between, there was Christopher Morley's increasingly popular novel, "Kitty Foyle". The Best Renters listing still finds John Steinbeck's sociological opus, "The Grapes of Wrath", at the top. The ratings are from The Retail Bookseller, house organ of The Baker & Taylor Company, New York.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

When young Kenneth O'Brien, of the well known motion picture legal talent O'Briens, was ushered into the cub-reporter section of United Artists Pictures, in New York, to learn the motion picture business "from the ground up," it was generally thought that with the influence behind him, he would soon go far into U. A. corporate affairs. But, Ken did not particularly relish the idea, and after two years, he quit to go into, of all things, the selling of Pepsi-Cola, big nickel-a-drink soda stand beverage. There were many who questioned Young O'Brien's judgment, not the least critical of whom was your reporter. But Kenneth insisted, and before long, he had gotten the exclusive Connecticut state franchise for the stuff, with two bottling plants up at Fairfield and a line of trucks long enough to transport the Russian army—all of which was brought to mind by the financial news of the other afternoon announcing that Pepsi-Cola had just voted a dividend of $15 a share—fifteen dollars a share! Stockholders will get $3,500,000 in dividends alone. The stock sells for around $215 per share.

Ken, pal, where are you?

Motion picture film is one of the big items for which American Express refrigerated containers are now employed in the comparatively new service for shipping perishables, the Express Company's list of shipments including fish and films, serums and vaccines, vegetables, fruits, hatching eggs, oysters, dry ice, cheese.

Motion pictures taken on location in places where atmospheric conditions might affect the films, have been the principal subjects of film refrigerated transportation. There are less than a thousand of the containers available; called Church Container, they're manufactured by General Electric.

Seems that some one down that way, who had played the film before Pete got it, didn't like the "They Shall Have Music" caption, made up one of his own, "Their One Love," and forgot to retitle the print correctly when he finished with it.

Anyway, that little remark has brought the undying gratitude of the goat milk industry, one of their spokesman, E. E. Williams, who breeds "pure-bred Saanen dairy goats," at Charlotte, N. C., said. Not only did Mr. Williams write to Metro expressing gratitude for such "favorable publicity," but he took pen in hand and wrote to other goat breeders, uring them to write similarly to the producers.

But, wait 'till they see what Universal, Mae West and W. C. Fields do to a goat in their new "My Little Chickadee."

Mr. Fields and Buxom Mae are supposed to have just been married (it's that kind of a picture) and in one scene are on their honeymoon. The set represents their bedroom. Miss West is in bed and Mr. Fields, standing in front of a mirror, is preparing to retire.

Then Mae West sneaks out of bed, leads a goat into the room, places it in the bed and runs away from her new husband. It seems that Miss West is not really married to Mr. Fields; she has merely tricked him into believing that she is.

The goat is in the bed and Fields, without turning around, says: "Darling, have you changed your perfume?"

Motion picture exhibitors of New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, the four U. S. cities having subway transportation, might keep the subway companies in mind when they have trouble with their sound systems because of outside interference.

In a new New York apartment for the first night, a wife complained to her husband that their radio would not work. He put in new tubes, but still no sound from the amplifier.

"Oh, well," said the husband, who knew absolutely nothing about radio except how to tune in his favorite stations, "maybe it's because we're so close to the subway. Why don't you phone the subway company tomorrow and have them do something about it?"

She did—and the company did. They rushed a repair crew. The radio reception in that household is all right now.

CHICAGO YEAR MARKED BY LEGAL SKIRMISHES

Film Row Moved to 13th and Wabash; Theatre Grosses Showed 10 Per Cent Increase

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH in Chicago

Legal skirmishes among the United States Government, the Balaban & Katz circuit, major film companies and independent theatremen were highlights of 1939 in the Chicago territory.

Government Against B&K

The suit of the Government against B&K and the major companies, excepting Universal and RKO, was an important legal fray of the year. The suit is now near a close with the Government attorneys preparing answers to the briefs filed by defense counsel. These replies will be forthcoming shortly and the material will then be submitted before Special Master in Chancery Edgar Eldredge who is hearing the case. His report will then be given to Federal Judge Woodward for a decision. This decision is expected to be reached by April 1, at the latest.

The suit of the independent theatremen against B&K and the major companies has been postponed again and again, awaiting action on the Government suit. Much talk has been current of late that this suit may be dropped and some sort of an agreement reached between the independents and B&K. If this is done there will be some readjustment in the present clearance system, it is believed. At present attorneys for both sides deny any special attention being given to the matter.

Other suits filed against B&K and the majors have also been held up pending action in the Government matter. These include the Gary theatre suit and the Frank Ford case. Both are independent theatre groups seeking a change from the present release conditions, which they claim are unfair.

The past year was one to be remembered because it marked the removal of Chicago's Film Row to the area around 13th Street and South Wabash Avenue from 9th Street and Wabash.

The opening of the new Twentieth Century-Fox film exchange building on the corner of 13th and Wabash in July was the big event of the new Film Row development. This new exchange is one of the largest and finest buildings of its kind in the country. The only major company not located in this district at present is the RKO-Radio exchange which is three blocks north in the old district. Plans for a new RKO exchange are now being worked out though and will probably be announced this coming spring. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is also expected to build a new exchange building in 1940. The site will probably be on Michigan Blvd., just back of the present location.

Did Little Remodeling

Speaking of building, Chicago theatres did less remodeling in 1939 than in the year previous but indications are for substantial improvement in this line in the coming year. The Telenews theatre was erected late this summer and opened last weekend. It is the first theatre built in the Loop in the past 16 years. The newsreel house seats 600 and is located on State Street just a few doors north of Randolph Street in the heart of the Loop.

Theatre business generally took the upward trend in the late months of 1939, in Chicago. An increase in grosses of about 10 per cent over the previous year, was reported. The wage scale for the motion picture operators was increased 10 per cent in October to make up for a pay cut taken the previous fall, for the same amount.

About 20 theatres closed in Chicago during the summer months, including three Loop theatres; the Oriental, United Artists and RKO-Palace reopening later in the summer. A shortage of pictures and poor business was the cause of the closing, except as regards the Oriental which B&K closed because of trouble over the lease. The house was later reopened by Jones, Linick & Schaeffer.

In 1939 three major film companies held national sales conventions in Chicago. MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Monogram were here for such meetings while practically all companies held important sales conferences here at one time or another. The policy for the sale and distribution of "Gone With the Wind" was decided at a sales meeting here several weeks ago. All MGM branch managers and district leaders attended.

Film Buying Slower

Film buying was slower than usual in Chicago this past season. Several major companies had to make adjustments in their demands before deals were closed, so bitter was the difference in regard to terms. The end of the year, however, found most all product deals completed for all companies.

In the year several types of legislation were introduced before the Illinois legislature which had a direct bearing on the motion picture industry. Attempts were made to halt double features by limiting the length of film programs to two hours and fifteen minutes and bills against block-booking, allowing children in theatres after 9:30, theatre divorcement and other like bills were proposed. None of them became laws, however, although the time limitation bill was passed by both the house and the senate only to be vetoed by the Governor.

City officials prohibited the using of the radio program "Dr. I.Q." in the Chicago theatre but were overruled when the matter was taken to court. Attempts to have Bank Night and other cash giveaway games restored met with no success.

In nearby Waukegan, the world premiere of the Jack Benny picture, "Man About Town," aroused newspapers to protest, again, the fact that Chicago is never given world premieres of big pictures.

Allied Theatres of Illinois, continued to grow at a rapid rate and the group is now one of the largest and most important independent theatre associations in the country.

The past year found exhibitors complaining about business as usual but none of them changed their plans for winter vacations in Florida.

Hoffberg Co. Changes Name

The firm name of J. H. Hoffberg Co., Inc., has been changed to Hoffberg Productions after 16 years, according to announcement by J. H. Hoffberg, president. New offices at 1600 Broadway have been leased. The firm formerly was at 729 Seventh Avenue.

Hart Approved By FCC

Vincent G. Hart, attorney, former member of the Production Code Administration, has been admitted to practice before the Federal Communications Commission.

New York's Mayor LaGuardia Fights NBC—and Wins

Mayor LaGuardia was scheduled to be on the air as master of ceremonies for the New York Film Critics Broadcast next Sunday; then he was "off" because NBC ruled that a mayor can speak as a mayor and not as a master of ceremonies. It was finally settled when it was decided that Mayor LaGuardia could go on as anything he wished to be despite the new Code which regulates such things.

Film Connection Seen

While the "battle" waged the newspapers had a grand time. In searching for a motive for the original NBC ban it was suggested that the broadcasting company feared that the motion picture industry would be upset if the Mayor spoke about his Eastern production plan. The Mayor's final comment was "the film boys will have to get a better publicity stunt than that."

The radio "battle" has a long history. The New York Film Critics refused to join the national group to select the best picture of the year and other "bests." It was announced that Mayor LaGuardia would preside at a ceremony at which the awards would be presented. The program was to be broadcast over a nationwide hookup. Nothing further was heard until the critics selected "Wuthering Heights" as the best picture of the year and made their other choices. When NBC was approached to arrange details of the scheduled broadcast, Abel A. Schechter, director of special events for NBC, told William Boehnel, World-Telegram, chairman of the critics' committee on arrangements, according to reports, that the Mayor could not be the master of ceremonies.

The Mayor was informed of the decision of NBC. He telephoned David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America of which the National Broadcasting Company is a subsidiary, and "both had a good laugh." Meanwhile, Mr. Boehnel was able to get no action at NBC, so he went to the Columbia Broadcasting System which agreed to do all it could to squeeze in the program on short notice.

It seems that John Royal, NBC vice-president in charge of programs, was out to luncheon when Mr. Boehnel tried to appeal over the head of Mr. Schechter. But Mr. Royal could not be reached so the CBS had been approached. It soon developed that the Mayor could have his choice of networks.

David Sarnoff had communicated with John Royal who in turn reversed the decision of his subordinate and it was decided that the Mayor could say what he wished and be a politician or master of ceremonies. Then the critics put it up to the Mayor who stated, "I am satisfied there was no intention on the part of NBC in any way to limit or remotely suggest a program. . . . It is indifferent to me what station the program is on. That is entirely up to the New York Film Critics."

The critics finally decided to accept NBC's statement that the "ban" was all a mistake and the program is scheduled for Sunday, January 7th.

Samuel Goldwyn will come to New York to receive the award given "Wuthering Heights" as the best picture of the year. Mr. Goldwyn will be guest of honor at a reception tendered by the critics at the Rainbow Room.

Harry Davis Dies; Was Early Owner Of "Nickelodeon"

Harry Davis, one of the first motion picture theatre operators and an early leader in other entertainment media, died Tuesday in Pittsburgh, aged 78. He had been an invalid 12 years.

Mr. Davis, even in 1905 an entertainment enterpreneur, with experience in stock companies, grand opera, walking races, and the like, decided, in partnership with the late Pennsylvania Senator, John P. Harris, to set up a motion picture theatre. They used a building in downtown Pittsburgh, a storeroom seating 96 persons. It had a burlap front and it was called "The Nickelodeon."

It was in this "theatre" that the two motion picture operators presented "The Great Train Robbery," epic of the time and called the first attempt by the films at narration of a story. The first day the receipts were $22.50; the second day, $76; they kept rising, and in two weeks, the show was running continuously from eight o'clock in the morning to midnight. The profits mounted to $1,000 a week.

Mr. Davis, other contribution to the motion picture industry was the development, via his stock company (organized before his entrance into film theatre operation), of players, such as Thomas Meighan, William Powell, and others.

Mr. Davis sold his entertainment interests in 1927 to the Stanley Company.

Theatre construction is expanding in Central America and the West Indies, Mr. Allinsmith said.

FROM READERS

Dear Mr. Quigley:—

I wonder if the industry in wailing in every issue of every trade journal about lost foreign markets is not crying "wolf" too much. I am sure it does not want to take the position like "King Cotton" that it only exists because of export markets. American exhibited pictures made the present marvelous American industry. The foreign business, I assume, is but the velvet that came through the financing of American films from patron approval in pioneer days.

The constant threat that pictures to be shown to the 88,000,000 patrons per week in the near future are going to be poorer in quality and fewer in number should thoroughly discourage both exhibitor and patron. It would be distressing if every industry had to take such a blue outlook if its foreign market was impaired. I cannot conceive of the auto industry deciding that in spite of a continued American market they were going to make poorer cars at higher prices. Obviously, they would recognize, as should the picture industry, that such a policy would be killing the goose that laid the golden egg. They might better state they were not going to make any cars except custom made ones and that only on advance orders.

The net of the whole thing is if 17,500 theatres in America can exhibit to 88,000,000 people a week and the existing producing units cannot service such a situation someone will. I do not happen to have the investment of each of the majors in production but when one considers the real estate and other investment in 17,500 theatres I assume it will exceed that of the production investment. Where there is that much money invested and as much consumer demand as now exists there will be produced without doubt a quality supply equal or in excess of the demand. To conceive otherwise would be selling short Yankee genius and enterprise.

I do not believe there is any dividend paid in the effort to have the public and exhibitors go into mourning for producers in the loss of foreign markets, whether the loss is partial or complete—temporary or permanent. I am sure such bear or true stories alone will not affect seriously adverse legislation such as the Neely Bill.

If there is smoke where there is fire obviously the best thing is to apply the extinguisher to the fire instead of accelerating the blaze by futile complaining. Somebody in the industry must know that a certain number of pictures will be needed next year. Certainly there will be someone producing what is needed. Why should there be any camouflage? If a survey indicates that under no circumstances can as many pictures be produced or should be produced, then the playing time on production of pictures of better quality can be lengthened and actual theatre opening can be diminished by not starting exhibiting at 10 A.M. in the morning and every afternoon. If the pictures were not sufficient or strong enough to play 365 days a year some houses could close in the summer as they do now or others have fewer performances.

Maybe all this does not add up but I do not know that the good will of the industry is being helped particularly by constant bear stories. Trust suits, divorce laws and other legal and legislative activities are harmful enough without spreading broadcast that production chaos and exhibition confusion is just around the corner. Optimistic Americans have constantly echoed Arthur Brisbane's oft repeated statement "Never sell America short." If that is good advice on collective America why should it not be applied to any of our leading industries? In conclusion, why should we not take the attitude that it is unwise to "sell the picture industry short?"

Respectfully yours,
Harry G. Hogan,
Quimby Theatres,

In 1920 he became associated with Robertson-Cole, parent company of RKO Radio Pictures, and has been with the organization since that time.

Ticket War in New York

The Broadway legitimate theatre's efforts to adopt a code of fair prices and practices in the selling of tickets, appeared this week to have broken down, as the smaller ticket brokers, under the aegis of the Associated Theatre Ticket Agencies, refused to sign the League of New York Theatres-sponsored ticket code, and, instead, set up its own rules.

55-Cent Premium Set

This new set of practices, fixed last Friday evening, set a 55-cent advance as the limit for all tickets sold over the counter—less than the 75-cent maximum which had been fixed by the other code. Additional rules were to be drawn up this week or next.

Meanwhile, the League of New York Theatres voted last week not to supply the smaller ticket brokers with tickets, and had set the deadline for signature to its code for Tuesday.

Gustave A. Gerber, attorney for the smaller ticket brokers' unit, threatened last week to take legal action if the League enforced its rulings after Tuesday.

The dissident ticket brokers professed to have enough tickets, this week, for another week or so.

Mr. Gerber, in threatening legal action, said it would be a "war of attrition" and that the struggle would hurt the theatres more than the brokers.

It was pointed out, in behalf of the League, that the threat might not mean much;

Seven brokers have signed the League code; among them are the "Big Three," Tyson, Postal-Leblang, and McBride, who handle about 60 per cent of the ticket business.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

GOLDEN BOY: William Holden, Barbara Stanwyck—Good picture and fine acting but no draw. I starved for three nights. I guess I played it too old. Even the farmers didn't like it. Played, Dec. 5-6-7. Running time, 101 minutes.—John C. Hartley, Arcade theatre, Arcade, N. Y. Small town patronage.

LADY AND THE MOB: Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman—Good for dual bill with western on week-end. Did us no business a week previous to Xmas.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Charles Starrett has no draw like Autry or Rogers. Good for a double bill on weekend. Western fans seemed satisfied. Business not up to usual on week before Xmas.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

COWBOY QUARTERBACK, THE: Bert Wheeler, Marie Wilson, Gloria Dickson—Nothing to this one. You're just as well off if you leave it in the exchange. Played December 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Here's a dandy show. Pleased 'em all and business was great. Give us more, Warner, like this. Garfield and Lane make a great team. Played December 11-12.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall—Here's an action picture with plenty of suspense and it was well received by our patrons. Believe this Marshall girl is going to be all right. Running time, 83 minutes. Played, December 15, 16.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Didn't do what we expected on this one. A fine picture but didn't seem to draw the student body. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 26-28.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small town and college patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—Very fine picture but stop right there. Did the smallest business for a Sunday-Monday in years. Of course we had a number of outside activities but the picture has no draw. Why don't Warner Brothers try Bette in a comedy like Metro did with Garbo. Give her something with mass appeal. She'll pass out of the picture if something isn't done and done soon. Running time, 95 minutes. Played, December 17, 18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Dick Foran, Jane Wyman—Just a little action picture which failed to draw on family night. Suitable only for lower half of a dual. Running time, 55 minutes. Played December 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Just another Hilton bust. Can't understand why First National bothered to take a camera out to the sets. There was nothing there for it to take. Was all for the microphone. After it was over, there was still just nothing. The story, as only Hilton can write it, is English and very boresome. This picture is bound to meet with success and be appreciated in some spots but they are few and far between. Running time, 115 minutes. Played December 17.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—This one will go over with a roar at any theatre in any locality. Held up in great shape all three play dates. Mickey at his best with Garland at his side. Nothing but praise for all other members of the cast. Don't pass this one up. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 19-21.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small town and college patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Metro harped about this for a good long time and I was expecting something great. It was good but nothing colossal. It did a fair business but didn't break any records. People liked it. Played, Dec. 17-18. Running time, 97 minutes.—John C. Hartley, Arcade Theatre, Arcade, N. Y. Small town patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart—A swell performance by Robinson. A masterpiece of acting by Lockhart the blackmailer. Played November 21-23.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, A: Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburne, Gene Lockhart—Owing to clearance we could not play this outstanding picture until after the season so set it in this season with no regrets. Our suggestion, if you did not get it in during the holidays, to set it for Christmas week of 1940, as here is a picture that will never grow old. An excellent picture with Lockhart doing his best in this role. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, Ann Rutherford—Excellent entertainment and plenty of what it takes to make an interesting motion picture. We meet a new Miss Ann Rutherford in this picture. That young lady is something to take notice to. As far as we were concerned, she was the whole show. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 20-21.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—A swell comedy. Say, that Maisie gal is a riot. If chins have been sagging in your house, this will pick them up and rattle them. Played November 24-25.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Lots of real small town entertainment in this one. Not a dull moment and had our patrons in laughs most of the time. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Dec. 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Franchot Tone, Ann Sothern—By far one of the best program pictures I have had the pleasure of running. Lots of good clever comedy and a murder to carry it along. Leo has something to roar about here. By all means play this one. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker—A full hour and a half of comedy and music. If your town likes the Marx Bros. they will enjoy this more than anything they have made. This picture is plenty fast. Good arrangements on the piano and the harp, also instrumental novelties. Running time, 87 minutes. Played December 24.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker—For those who like the Marx Brothers this picture is as funny as any they ever made. Do not be afraid of this and give it all the time it so richly deserves. Silly, of course, as are all their pictures and Florence Rice does not hurt the picture in the least. A swell show. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY (REISSUE): Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—Returned this great picture for a Pal Night engagement and while it just about held its own with other Pal Night pictures, what's the use playing old ones when there's plenty of new ones? Running time, 133 minutes. Played, Dec. 13, 14.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce—Suitable for a dual bill. Failed to do business. Too many Kenos a week before Xmas.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris—Beery is tops on our list. A fine picture which everyone liked. Played November 24-25.—Elmer Slaybaugh. Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Virginia Grey—This is a very timely picture and one of Wallace Beery's best. He really lets himself go. It has good action. Virginia Grey has really got something and I hope Metro will give her the break. The picture drew well but should be exploited plenty. Played Dec. 3-4. Running time, 95 minutes.—John C. Hartley, Arcade Theatre, Arcade, N. Y. Small town patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Now, you are talking, Metro. Get back in that old groove and give us this type of picture that we know you are capable of producing. Big hearted and windy, that's Wallace Beery. Tough? Sure but not too tough. Wally has got a way about him you just can't help but like. The story goes back to the days of the Splinter Fleet just before the U. S. A. entered the War. Photography, direction, sound and all technicalities were expertly handled. Running time, 95 minutes. Played December 10-12.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Very good picture and did more than average business. Played December 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—I consider this a mighty swell show. The color is excellent. In fact, everything is well done in this production. But it gives the youngsters a good scare or two. The midgets put on a real show as did everyone else. Did not draw as well as expected. Played November 22-25.—B. W. Merrill, Lyric Theatre, Edgar, Neb. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell—A swell picture which did not have any draw. Those who came liked it very much. Personally thought it very clever. Running time, 134 minutes. Played Dec. 10, 11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—This picture pleased and drew well in spite of the killing. Book it and step on it. Played December 10-11.—B. W. Merrill, Lyric Theatre, Edgar, Neb. Small town patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Swell picture to fair business. Plenty of shivers and thrills. My doorman was still shaking after the show was over. But everyone liked it and said so. Played December 3-4.—B. W. Merrill, Lyric Theatre, Edgar, Neb. Small town patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—A picture that pleased 100 per cent. Book it and boost it. Played December 5-6.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Emlyn Williams, Leslie Banks—A flop at the box office. Worst business in months. It was not liked here. Played December 14-16.—B. W. Merrill, Lyric Theatre, Edgar, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert—Here was an old program picture from last year's group which really surprised us. Was entertainment and drew some extra business. Guess our people like race track stories. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

Republic

DAYS OF JESSE JAMES: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Good picture; good business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT AT MIDNIGHT: Phil Reagan, Roscoe Turner—One of Republic's better efforts but Turner's appearances were very few. He should have rated a more active part. Played November 17-18.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER PONY EXPRESS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Up to Rogers standard.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CALIENTE: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Another swell piece for the Rogers fans. Have played several of Rogers pictures since running an Autry, and the Autry fans are scowling a bit. Date played, December 15-16.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Reynolds—Best Autry yet. Very good singing and story good. Did a wonderful business, not expected during Xmas week. Song "South of the Border" well heard on radio. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 20-21.—Frank T. Le Page, Millinocket Theatre, Millinocket, Maine. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor—A swell picture but not much business. Too many of this type on the market lately. Running time, 81 minutes. Played Dec. 11, 12.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—Excellent picture for the type. Well acted out. Average Sunday attendance but fell off on Monday. Matinee on Saturday, Sunday and holidays only. Running time, 81 minutes. Played December 10-11.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small town and college patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—Swell picture; plenty to work on; good business in a small town if you tell your people about it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 28-29.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Fine picture. Business below par. Week before Xmas. Keno every night somewhere.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Many more like this one, we'll say goodbye to Jane. Failed to please the few who saw it. Played December 21-22.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—About on a par with the usual Jane Withers picture. Satisfied and did an average business. Played December 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DAYTIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Binnie Barnes, Warren Williams, Joan Davis, Wendy Barrie—Good picture; fair business. Very amusing comedy with Joan Davis helping to put it over. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert—One of the best Fox pictures that I have ever played. Had everything. Plenty of action and beautiful color. You can play this one anytime and do business. Patrons like the picture very much. Played Dec. 12-13-14. Running time, 103 minutes.—John C. Hartley, Arcade Theatre, Arcade, N. Y. Small town patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Elsa Maxwell, Lynn Bari—A very good picture that should please anywhere. Linda Darnell great. This girl should go places and in my opinion she will be tops at the box office very soon. Played November 2-3.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHALL, THE: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—Just what my audiences like. Did a lot more business and the customers enjoyed this feature much more than the majority of the high priced so-called big productions. Played December 8.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE: Jean Rogers, Glenn Ford—Positively the poorest one we've had in months. No plot, no story, no stars, no nothing. Not even suitable for a double bill. Played December 13.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George—Just a fair program picture. Played November 27-28.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU: Gloria Stuart, Stuart Erwin—Very good. Should please all around. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 15-16.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A CHANCE: Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent—Picture seemed to please all who saw it. Running time, 63 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

THE HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—A very good picture; pleased all who saw it. Should do big business with proper advertising. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 27, 28.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (reissue): Slim Summerville, Lew Ayres;

THE ROAD BACK (reissue): John King, Richard Cromwell—Didn't draw as well as expected, but were well received by all who saw them. Play them if you can. Played November 4-6 and December 2-4.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Very entertaining picture. Miss Weidler is a very good actress.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla.

FRANKENSTEIN (reissue): Boris Karloff; DRACULA (reissue): Bela Lugosi—Booked early for Halloween night and did myself a swell favor. Broke the house record and topped "You Can't Take It With You" by 15%. How's that, Nate? Played October 31-November 2.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Like the tide this baby is coming up. Move over, you other kids.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger—This picture did not "hit" our audience as did "Three Smart Girls," and had it not been for the excellent acting and the comedy provided by Charles Winninger, we would have had a great many dissatisfied patrons. It is the opinion of most of our critics that the picture is better suited (because of the story) to a female audience, rather than one comprised of the male sex only. Although the acting of Winninger was the high spot in the picture for our boys, they could not refrain from mentioning the fact that Miss Durbin still has a beautiful voice and that she knows how to use it. In addition to the two stars already mentioned, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish and the others played their parts well. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, N. J. State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison theatre patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Nan Grey—Universal appears trying its best to convince us that Basil Rathbone is a sort of ridiculous

figure with an ever-twisting mouth instead of a rather able, if sinister, actor. Teamed with the jerky, ghoul Boris Karloff, and a mis-cast including Barbara O'Neill, Ian Hunter, Nan Grey, Mr. Rathbone succumbs to overwhelming odds and fails to lend much dignity or horror to a singularly amateurish production. A number of heads fall, but the synthetic Hollywood blue blood that gushes forth is an exceedingly poor imitation. A more unregal group of players I have never seen assembled in a single motion picture. It is now England's turn to match "Tower of London" with a Western entitled "Two Gun Wicky," featuring Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Dame May Witty and Flora Robson, with a band of rustlers played by the guards at Buckingham Palace. Played Dec. 19, 20.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine.

UNDERPUP, THE: Gloria Jean—An excellent picture. On par with Deanna's pictures. Like to see more of the two boys who almost stole the show. Played October 17-19.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Very well liked. A credit to Universal and a great big cheer for Boyer and Dunne for their swell performance. Played October 24-26.—Elmer Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla.

Warner Brothers

"DEAD END KIDS" ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—Good picture; good business. Running time, 62 minutes. Played December 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan—Here's a program picture which did more business at Pal Night prices than "The Old Maid" played on Sunday and Monday. And it's just a program too with some exciting moments. Running time, 82 minutes. Played December 20, 21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett—Another quickie by the company that so far this season have given us one picture worth anything, "Dust Be My Destiny." Nothing to this picture but a waste of film. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn—Wonderful acting; should do good business for a class patronage, but poor gross for small town. Running time, 106 minutes. Played Dec. 21, 22.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—A very fine picture. Pleased all. Business above average. Played November 20-21.—J. R. Long, Bocanito Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—Very good. Enjoyed by all.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LET'S TALK TURKEY: Pete Smith Specialties—Here is a short that really brought in extra customers. Those that say it the first show told their friends. Would give it the best short of the season award. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY: Cartoons—Excellent. Rudolph Ising did a swell job on this cartoon. Color as well as the plot is excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUR GANG COMEDIES: These always take with our audience and am sure they will elsewhere.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small town and college patronage.

TAKE A CUE: Pete Smith Specialty—Some trick stick (cue) work by that very able and capable billiard player, Mr. Charles Peterson, plus some good comedy by the college "stooge." Will please most any audience, as do most of "Pete's Specialties." Running time, 9 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, N. J. State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

THINK FIRST: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—No comment can be given this short as it is one of the series which is tops of the industry. This one is exceptionally good. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HOCKEY CHAMP: Walt Disney Cartoons—I don't like cartoons but will admit that this one was clever and one of the best I have seen. Pluto and Donald Duck steal the picture. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

FRESH FISH: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SEEING RED: Broadway Brevity—A short subject that pleased our audience 100%. It has plenty of comedy and a variety of radio and vaudeville acts. The impersonation by "Red" Skelton of a "lady in dressing" as well as the dance routine of Harris and Shore and A. Robins clowning (quick change artist) provoked much comedy. The Merry Macs rendition of "Down by the Old Mill Stream" and the tapping of Louis Da Pron added appreciably to the short. Should please. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, N. J. State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

IS IT GOOD WILL?

The Christmas season just passed has been up to par in the number of "good-will-and-prestige" campaigns sponsored by theatremen. Successful toy, food and other worthy matinee projects proved managers eager to do their expected part in aiding the underprivileged. The danger to guard against and especially now is the pressue from other organizations, encouraged by the theatre's participation, to angle for similar cooperation on projects rating less consideration. These encroachments against the grosses are to be stoutly repulsed.

The pure good-will-and-prestige project may prove a bane as well as a blessing. It all depends upon the handling. For the most part, members shy away from good-will stuff that has no definite link to the ticket-window. They feel that the theatre may share in community activities without penalizing the boxoffice. Cases that come quickly to mind and noted in recent issues have to do with Glenn Nelson and Russ McKibbon. So far as concerns the good will, the theatremen gained appreciably. But it so happens that the tieins were guided expertly enough to win prestige with no sacrifice of paid admissions.

The theatre's position makes it a tempting target for local projects, worthy and otherwise. The wise manager does not allow himself to be "good-willed" into a good thing.

SOMETHING TO REGARD

Paid newspaper advertising sells the most tickets. It doesn't sell all the tickets. Managers take up the slack between "most" and "all" in devious ways. One of the better ways not intensively exploited is the newspaper column, by-lined by the theatreman.

It isn't being done widely. Every manager isn't up to it. Where he is, the chances are better than fair that editors will not be too hard to convince.

Reproduced on another page is the kind of thing we have in mind, compiled by Manager Ike Byrne, Fox Egyptian, Delta, Colorado. Under the title, "Backstage," the column has been published consecutively in more than 200 issues. Byrne started it to counteract publicity adverse to the industry, to localize picture publicity material and avoid boiler-plate. The column is selling extra tickets. It is also establishing the Round Tabler as a member of the community.

For some weeks now, the dusting off of a Round Table niche has been in order for "The Manager," intra-circuit 20-odd page monthly sponsored by Famous Players-Canadian. Published under the sure guidance of J. J. Fitzgibbons, edited by Larry Graburn with a strong hand from Jimmy Nairn and Jack Barker, it is a handsome job of work by an outfit that has long learned the value of doing things handsomely.

Ike wants contact with other manager column-conductors for exchange of newsworthy ideas. Let there be quick response. The idea rates warm encouragement.

THE IDEA IS CIRCULATING

Whether or not the consistent pounding by your Round Table has anything to do with it is neither here nor there. But from accounts in the trade press and reports forwarded by scouts in the field it appears that more circuits than ever before have distributed extra bonus checks in the year just ended. Which of course is as it should be.

No other system of remuneration has ever worked as profitably in insuring top effort over 52 weeks.

The manager who can look forward to a cut of any extra grosses he may bring to the boxoffice does not have to be coerced, cajoled or driven. The prospect of the added dough-dough is all the incentive he needs.

The path upward worn by Quigley Awards winners is now followed by Sid Holland, voted the 1937 Bronze and recently appointed district manager for the Mohawk Valley zone of the Schine Bros. circuit. As a long-time member and valued contributor, Sid rates a standing Round Table vote of congratulations. Which is heartily given.

Double feature shows call for double street ballys as witness idea created by J. R. Wheeler at the Lex Theatre, in Chicago to advertise "Coast Guard" and "Cowboy Quarterback." Two lads carrying twin banners sold the dates, one dressed in naval uniform and the other in full football regalia.

In deference to the current holiday season and to acquaint his patrons with the film goodies in store for them in the near future, Manager George Irwin at the Lyceum, in Duluth, Minn., decorated his lobby fireplace in the manner shown at right. Oversized stockings and wrapped packages each carried titles of forthcoming attractions.

Fitzpatrick Sells Blocks of Tickets For "Eve" Show

With the booking of "That's Right, You're Wrong" as his mainspring of attention, Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., concentrated his advance campaign on selling the attraction as the top entertainment of his New Year's Eve program, the various promotions and exploitations being in keeping with the occasion.

With this in mind, Fitz planted publicity on the midnight show in papers throughout the drawing area, as well as the local press, and followed through by selling blocks of tickets to department stores and other organizations for special New Year's eve parties. This thought was conveyed in spot announcements over local stations. Clocks in department stores, five and tens and other shops contained small black and white stickers with the line "Have a grand time at Loew's New Year's Eve." Posters in strategic locations carried similar messages, as did door knob cards, telephone booths, automobile doors, etc., and a special drive was made to attract women by distribution of novelty mirrors bearing the New Year's Eve copy.

Lecturer Street Bally Featured

Promotion tying into the attraction included a 24-sheet pasted on lobby floor. A blackboard ballyhoo was attended by a lecturer in cap and gown and for street attention, Ed had a man in costume dressed as Father Time with back banner carrying the New Year copy.

Theatre attendants in caps and gowns rode on busses and trolleys carrying small portable radios tuned into the radio announcements. At the theatre, doorman, cashiers and ushers were garbed in caps and gowns, each wearing badge with copy.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Paper Towel Gag

At a reported cost of twenty-five cents, Les Campbell of the Empress in Kelowna got the bright idea of unrolling the paper towels in the rest rooms and imprinting them every foot or so with his current picture title. Towels were then rerolled and returned to the dispensers. When stamping the towels, Les rolled them up on a piece of wood loosely and when the job was completed, bounced them a couple of times on the end and they fell back into a perfect roll.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Honors Football Team

Gold football charms and autographed photos of Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney were presented to the local high school football team as a goodwill gesture in connection with publicity arranged for the date of "Babes in Arms" at the Paramount, in St. Paul, by Don Alexander and Walter Van Camp. Signalizing the success of the victorious team, charms were presented on stage stunt rating mention in local dailies and school paper.

Date Arranged by Irwin With Local Girl and Star

The female contingent of Duluth, Minn., was recently agog over stories planted in local dailies by George Irwin for his advance on "What a Life" at the Lyceum. For the girl submitting the best letter on "Why I want to go out with a movie and stage star," a date with Jackie Coogan, who appears in the play, dated locally to follow the picture, was arranged.

As a further buildup in the stunt, Irwin invited the boys to submit their letters on the same subject, winner to have a date with Cyrilla Dorne, Jackie's leading lady.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lobby Teletype Machine Helps Sell "Messenger"

Promoted from local Western Union officials by Louie Charninsky was a teletype machine which was planted in his lobby as part of his advance campaign on "Call a Messenger" at the Capitol Theatre, in Dallas, Texas. Machine which was hooked up with a direct wire to main sending station, sent wires from the lobby of the theatre. Flanked on either side of the machine was a panel covered with telegrams congratulating the management on booking the picture. Also featured on the display were title, cast, playdates and a few catch lines.

For "Jamaica Inn," Charninsky secured numerous displays in windows of leading bookstores with a special setpiece of Life Magazine's selection as the picture of the week with a setpiece of Laughton in all of his history-making films. Advance and current plugs were used on all three local stations.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Novel Coloring Contest

Manager Eddie Yarbrough of Warner's Keeney Theatre, in Elmira, N. Y. gave a little different slant to a coloring contest, when in his campaign for "Allegheny Uprising", he tied in with local kid shop for display breaks. Winning drawings were placed in the store's windows and merchant cooperated in various ways to build interest in the stunt.

NEW NAMES ADDED TO COMMITTEE

THE wave of acceptances to the 1940 Quigley Awards Judging Committee mounts higher and higher. Top men of the industry continue to express their approval in forthright statements of full endorsement. It is evident that the seventh year of the Awards has earned unanimous welcome from executives as well as the men in the field. On these pages and the following are added expressions from bossman and manager.

From the latter, it is to be noted that in large measure the Awards continue to influence promotions, salary rises and bonuses; enhance the theatreman's prestige in the regard of his superiors.

Following the first listing of 1940 Judges in last week's issue, are names of others who are pleased to serve. These include: Ralph Branton, Exhibition; Howard Dietz, Advertising; S. Charles Einfeld, Advertising; William K. Jenkins, Exhibition; John Joseph, Advertising; R. J. O'Donnell, Exhibition; E. H. Rowley, Exhibition; George Walsh, Exhibition; Alec Moss, Advertising.

ARCH REEVE

Advertising Manager
Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.

I will be happy to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

The value of sound, practical showmanship and showmen to this business has never been so recognized as it is today. The Quigley Awards, therefore, must be regarded as even more important than in the past.

E. C. BEATTY

President
W. S. Butterfield Theatres
Detroit, Mich.

I will be glad to accept the appointment to be on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards as suggested in your letter of December 8th.

LEONARD H. GOLDENSON

Paramount Theatres Service Corp.
New York

I appreciate your invitation to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards and deem it an honor and pleasure to serve in such a capacity.

CRESSON E. SMITH

Western Sales Manager
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

I feel that the Quigley Awards are of great benefit to the industry. Not only do they bring recognition to the deserving men in the field, whose ability might otherwise sometimes be "lost in the shuffle," but I believe that the zeal to win through outstanding campaigns is a great stimulating factor in our business.

M. A. LIGHTMAN

President
Malco Theatres, Inc.

Thanks for your letter of December 12th. I would be very happy to accept the appointment.

RALPH BRANTON

General Manager
Tri-States Theatres, Des Moines, Iowa

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 8th, and I am profoundly grateful for your selection of me as a Judge in your 1940 Quigley Awards. By all means, you may list my name, and I consider it an honor. The only question, of course, is whether or not I can be in New York at the time designated for the selection of the winners, but I will, of course, make every effort to be there providing I can have sufficient notice.

I feel that your Awards are doing a very important job in the industry as this practice is keeping the showmanship alive which is so apt to go out the window under prevailing conditions of the Industry, and under distributors' ideas of present distribution. I commend your efforts highly in keeping the spark of showmanship alive that is so necessary and so essential to the continued growth of the business.

MONROE GREENTHAL

Director of Exploitation
United Artists Corp.

The Quigley Awards are really the Nobel Peace Awards of the motion picture industry. They are that important. Anyone who wins such an Award, automatically establishes himself as a great showman, and if we have enough great showmen, there will be plenty of peace of mind in Hollywood engendered by the security of thought that great pictures will be given the proper type of showmanship-handling by theatre men everywhere.

Thanks for the honor of asking me to be on your Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

GEORGE W. WEEKS

General Sales Manager
Monogram Pictures Corp.

Showmanship is solely a matter of shrewd exploitation. Any medium or competition which stimulates exploitation directly promotes the highest interests of the box office and eventually the industry itself. More power to you.

HARRY MANDEL

Director of Advertising and Publicity
RKO Theatres

Thank you for inviting me to act on your Judging Committee. I shall be very glad to accept.

I still think that your department is a treasure house of ideas and inspiration.

MAURICE BERGMAN

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Columbia Pictures Corp.

I will be pleased to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

Again, I want to say to you that in my opinion the awards will become more important each year and are certainly a stimulating factor in the interest all of us have on behalf of increased showmanship.

LOUIS POLLOCK

Eastern Advertising Manager
Universal Pictures, Inc.

Thanks for the invitation to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. You may, of course, list my name.

FURTHER ENDORSEMENTS FOR 1940

JULES J. RUBENS
Vice-President
Publix Great States Theatres

I am happy to accept a place on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards inasmuch as it has been definitely established that most theatre managers do strive to obtain them and, unquestionably, exert more thought and effort to the operation of their theatres, which naturally results in larger grosses.

While some of our best men in the field have failed to receive Awards, still I have found that they all have ambitions to do so and believe that our boys have made an unusually good showing in the number of Awards that have been won by Great States' men.

ROBERT M. GILLHAM
Director of Advertising and Publicity
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

I accept with pleasure appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards sponsored by the Managers' Round Table of Motion Picture Herald.

HARRY GOLDBERG
Director of Advertising and Publicity
Warner Bros. Theatres

I am accepting your invitation to act on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

EDWARD A. GOLDEN
Vice-President

I accept your invitation for appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards and wish to thank you for this honor.

HARRY ARTHUR
President
Fanchon & Marco

Thank you for again inviting me to be one of the judges for the 1940 Quigley Awards sponsored by the Managers' Round Table of Motion Picture Herald. I am pleased to accept.

Exhibitors are now relying more than ever upon the exploitation and advertising efforts of the theatre manager. Intensive showmanship is playing an invaluable part in producing bigger box office returns.

May I congratulate you and the managers in the field for the high standard of the exploitation and advertising campaigns that are regularly entered in the annual Quigley Awards.

GEORGE C. WALSH
President & General Manager
Netco Theatres Corp.
Poughkeepsie, New York

It is a real pleasure to serve again on the Quigley Award Committee for the coming year. These Awards have been a splendid stimulation for theatre managers and I congratulate Quigley Publications on continuing them from year to year.

WM. K. JENKINS
Lucas & Jenkins, Inc.
Atlanta, Georgia

It will give me pleasure to be one of the judges on your committee.

S. CHARLES EINFELD
Director of Advertising & Publicity
Warner Bros. Pictures

I deeply appreciate the honor of becoming a member of the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards, sponsored by the Managers' Round Table of the Motion Picture Herald.

The Quigley Awards are a definitely important influence in behalf of greater showmanship on the part of the men who run our theatres. They stimulate individual initiative by focusing the industry's attention upon those managers who are resourceful and energetic in selling their attractions to the public. Recognition of meritorious efforts such as provided by the Quigley Awards is a splendid inspirational influence.

J. J. FITZGIBBONS
Vice-President
Famous Players Canadian Corp.
Toronto, Canada

I accept with thanks your kind invitation of December 8th to continue as a member of the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

We consider the Round Table Club of the Motion Picture Herald, which you conduct, one of the most stimulating factors in encouraging the managers of our circuit to work out merchandising and exploitation ideas, for the reason that the managers who are anxious to improve their position have a first class medium to publicize their efforts and to benefit from the exchange of ideas and the suggestions that come from the efforts of their fellow managers who are smart enough to take advantage of the opportunities given them to participate.

R. J. O'DONNELL
General Manager
Interstate Circuit, Inc.
Dallas, Texas

Thank you for your invitation to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. I will be honored and happy to act in this capacity.

I am most firmly convinced that the Quigley Awards are instrumental in bringing extra money to the box office every day in the year. This is a natural and logical result of the inspiration afforded by these Awards to the men in the field to work their hardest and to gain recognition for their work by submitting their campaigns to the Awards Committee. And recognition and the healthy competition it engenders are vital factors in promoting continuance of outstanding work.

E. H. ROWLEY
Robb & Rowley United, Inc.
Dallas, Texas

This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter advising that you wish to appoint me on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. This is to advise that it will be satisfactory to appoint me as one of the judges.

I will be very happy to be a judge again for another year.

It is a pleasure to accept appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

The Man in the Field Also Claps Hands

RAY BELL

Pub. Dir., Loew's Theatres
Washington, D. C.

The years have served only to intensify my high regard for the Quigley Inspirational campaigns. Obviously a fellow can't get a raise or a promotion every time he does a good piece of work. But in the recognition that is constantly available and is offered by these competitions he can find that inward satisfaction which beckons us on to better work. A Plaque or a Certificate has forced this minion to carry on zealously; and never to fall below the standard Quigley Awards imply is the constant admonition.

LES POLLOCK

Manager, Loew's
Rochester, N. Y.

I have always found and believe the Quigley Awards an incentive for showmen. Setting a goal for one's self is a sure way of achievement, and aided and abetted by the untold valuable exploits of other men in the field placed at our disposal—well, how can anyone derive anything but good from your endeavors?

LOUIE CHARNINSKY

City Mgr., Capitol
Dallas, Texas

I would like to say that the Quigley Awards have helped me materially in the respect that the efforts which I have put forth in the way of exploitation and publicity on pictures, have made me manager of three downtown theatres.

P. E. McCOY

Manager, Georgia
Athens, Ga.

Since entering into the Quigley Awards for 1939 competition, I have won recognition from the committee each quarter thus far. I have found this recognition to be of stimulating interest to myself and at the Boxoffice. Each quarter seems to add more "zest" to that showmanship enthusiasm to do something to bring a "greater" boxoffice into my theatre.

STUART TOMBER

Manager, Fargo
Sycamore, Ill.

Absolutely! A stimulant to self, to interest in the industry and best of all—picking up and using proved and tried ideas. Not to mention satisfaction at having the work payoff other than at the box office.

SID HOLLAND

District Manager
Schines Theatres

After six consecutive years of endorsement not only by the men whose exploitation efforts make the turnstiles click—but by producers, distributors and exhibitors alike, how can there be any doubt as to the value of the Awards as a box office stimulant.—Personally, I'm for them 100 per cent.

SMITH CREDITS AWARDS FOR ADVANCEMENTS

I have been fortunate enough to win a Plaque and numerous Mentions and I am confident that this has helped my prestige immensely. Hot Springs is a resort and numbers of showmen come here from all parts of the country and most all of them call on me stating that they know me through Quigley Award Competitions and Round Table activities. I have had several advancements with my company and I want to give great credit to Quigley Awards.

The Quigley Competitions are the show windows for displays of theatre managers' talents. Managers who fail to display their ability are neglecting an opportunity to acquaint the industry with their value.—W. CLYDE SMITH, City Manager, Malco Theatres, Hot Springs, Ark.

GEORGE BANNAN

Manager, Van Wert
Van Wert, Ohio

While it is always my ernest desire to put forth all my efforts to attain the best Box-Office results possible, the incentive in the competition for Quigley Awards has always proven the factor which brings forth the greatest results. As a boon to the executives, and a boon to the managers, I say "Long Live the Quigley Awards!"

BYRON McELLIGOTT

City Mgr., Capitol
Aberdeen, So. Dakota

Exploitation is still definitely boxoffice, and recognition of the Quigley Awards Committee gives the writer the supreme satisfaction that comes from a job well done.

—AND SO DOES HOBSON JOHNSON

The Managers' Round Table is the "front page" to progressive showmen. The Quigley Awards is without a doubt the best stunt used by any trade paper. As one of the winners of the Quarter-Master medals, I am sure it has been a great help to me. Since receiving the medal I have been promoted from manager to General Manager of the seven Pal Theatres.—HOBSON JOHNSON, General Manager, Pal Theatres, Vidalia, Ga.

TED EMERSON

Advt. Mgr., Tri States Theatres
Omaha, Neb.

I am very happy about the whole thing!

While I cannot truthfully say that I have received any monetary benefits from my various citations, yet the Quigley Awards are and always have been a great help to me in my line of work.

After all, it is not Ted Emerson's activities in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD that interests me most. It's reading about what the other fellow is doing to win an Award. That is where I get my inspiration and ideas to build bigger grosses on pictures.

And that is what every manager gets out of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD if he only knows it.

GUS LAMPE

City Manager, RKO Schine Theatres
Syracuse, N. Y.

I am very much sold on the Quigley Award for the reason that it gives everyone an incentive. And, aside from the splendid recommendation we receive from our organization it also tends to show that the industry itself appreciates a live wire.

May it continue to function and be the incentive to everyone it has been to me.

WALLACE ALLEN

Manager, Kentucky
Lexington, Ky.

I believe the Quigley Award system as now in use stimulates managers to do their utmost in selling every picture with any possibilities whatsoever. A friendly spirit of rivalry is also set up between managers in the various circuits to try and outdo their brother managers and win honors for their individual group.

PETE EGAN

Manager, Palace
Calgary, Alberta, Can.

The Quigley Award, in a few words, is a magnet for theatremen. By this I mean, that the exploitation of pictures through other managers acts as an incentive to go on and do bigger and better jobs.

A. J. KALBERER

Manager, Indiana
Washington, Ind.

We have never been much on "three-sheeting" ourselves, but since submitting material for the Round Table Department have overcome much of this feeling. The Awards are worth fighting for and aid a great deal in keeping a manager "on his toes."

Our employers have been quick to recognize our Quarter Master Citation and Quarter-Master Medal in the form of sincere congratulations. So far no promotions have been in order but feel sure that our awards will help us when the opportunity for such comes along.

He Traces Promotion to Awards Winnings

MOON CORKER

L. & J. City Manager, Palace
Athens, Ga.

The greatest benefit to me is that I have the satisfaction of knowing that the field of competition for these awards is studded with good showmen and that winning from them is a great honor. I am sure that participation in these competitions has helped my business.

E. E. CRABTREE

City Mgr., Publix Great States
Danville, Ill.

Without doubt your Competitions are valuable in the development of good showmen, and that value can be enhanced by an increasing number of managers participating. Many times the new ideas come from new members, as it has always been, and they benefit the box office in general.

MARLOWE CONNER

Manager, Avalon
Chicago, Ill.

The Quigley Awards without a doubt stimulate box-office returns, competitive interest and personal achievement. I have earned a Quarter-Master Plaque and several Citations and I sincerely feel they have materially aided my progress.

EVERETT C. CALLOW

Dir. Advt. and Pub., Warners
Philadelphia, Pa.

I believe that the Quigley Awards system gathers greater momentum from year to year, and is always a constant prospective for the managers of this circuit to keep shooting for. The outcome of each quarter is eagerly awaited by all managers. Keep up the good work.

WILLIAM K. SAXTON

City Manager, Loew's Century
Baltimore, Md.

The awarding of the various Quigley awards has created keen competition among managers of all types of theatres. When first started only first run situation, participated, but now it's with interest to note neighborhood and all types of theatres showing such efforts in promotion due to your incentive created in the boys in the field.

GEORGE IRWIN

Manager, Lyceum
Duluth, Minn.

There is no doubt that awards stimulate boxoffice showmanship. As far as improving a manager's position, I believe that when better jobs are available, winners of Awards will be taken into consideration when choosing men for them. Also, that when conditions warrant, winners will be rewarded with increases in salaries. There is no doubt that winners enhance their prestige and are kept in the limelight of their employers.

—AND SO DOES A. KENT CRAIG

One of our most prized possessions is a Quarter-Master Citation and the efforts put forth to obtain recognition in Quigley Awards have amply repaid us in boxoffice results, let alone the prestige we have enjoyed through the personal publicity involved.

Just as publicity sells your merchandise, personal publicity sells the individual. Our activities in Quigley Awards are mainly responsible for the rapid promotions we have received within the last few years. Along with promotions go increases in salary, plus extra bonuses and the several cash awards we have been fortunate enough to win.—A. KENT CRAIG, Manager, Capitol, St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada.

JIMMY REDMOND

Pub. Dir., Bonham
Fairbury, Neb.

I have been quite active in Quigley Competition for the past three years, and am proud of my eight citations, and my plaque. I am quite sure that Motion Picture Herald has aided me in more ways than one in helping me with many a campaign, and I certainly do know that my winnings have meant very much in my numerous salary raises, letters of congratulations from my employers.

JACK SIMONS

Manager, Loew's Poli
Hartford, Conn.

The Quigley Awards are a very definite stimulant to box-office showmanship. To be honored with an award for an exceptionally meritorious bit of "show selling" is not only a proud personal distinction but one that must reflect in the boxoffice as well.

—AND SO DOES LIGE BRIEN

Just want to say that the Quigley Awards are a valuable token of an achievement; they are an appreciation aside from that of the "office." To receive an Award proves your efforts worthwhile—and we know that a good honest try won't be overlooked, and can't but help reflect at the boxoffice.

In my situation business has increased and thus enhanced my prestige in regards to promotion and a salary increase.—LIGE BRIEN, Manager, Prince, Ambridge, Pa.

GLENN NELSON

Manager, Harris
Findlay, Ohio

I firmly believe that the worth of the Awards is of untold value due to the fact that it stimulates the average manager to re-examine the foundation of his campaign before launching it. The reason for the mental awareness on our part is due to the fact that we all know that any idea must be presented to a group of judges whose showmanship has been proven and that they know at a glance whether a campaign or stunt is of box office value.

For me the greatest value of the Award comes from within myself—that swell feeling of having done a good job and knowing that I still can compete with the best of them and be recognized for my efforts. It is a fine feeling to know you haven't become stagnant and settled in a rut.

MEL GRUNDY

Strand Rivoli Theatres
Muncie, Indiana

I have not won any great awards—a couple of appointments, and a quarter-master citation are about all. I have had several pictures printed and several stories.

However, none of these has helped my position with the company—raise, bonus or anything! The only satisfaction I have gotten so far has been personal. I like the idea, despite all the above!

SAM GILMAN

Manager, Loew's
Harrisburg, Penna.

As I have always said in the past the Quigley Awards given through the Managers' Round Table certainly stimulates showmanship which can not help but reflect on the box office. A winning of an award is a great incentive.

If nothing else, the many awards hanging on the walls of my office look very impressive to local business people who happen to visit me.

BILL JOHNSON

Manager, Opera House
Millinocket, Maine

The Quigley Awards are unrivalled in the matter of recognizing and rewarding boxoffice showmanship without regard to situation, circumstances and product shown. The exploitation ideas brought to public attention through your competitions are of inestimable value to every reader. I sincerely hope you will continue to sponsor them through the years to come.

FRANCIS DEERING

Manager, Loew's
Houston, Texas

It's a pleasure to take part in the Quigley Competitions—a bigger pleasure to receive the awards and the recognition that goes with them.

Library System Features "Smith" Displays for Miller

Postcards obtained from leading Washington hotel were secured by Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein for their date on "Mr. Smith" and mailed in advance to special list. Public Library system was furnished with stills with which they created displays exhibited in 38 branches, starting 10 days ahead. Announcement cards were planted in the lobbies of leading hotels and counter cards in department stores.

Through tieup effected with magazine distributors, fleet of trucks were covered with huge banners, through cooperation of Neon Clock Co., 11 by 14 cards were spotted in all their clocks located throughout the city during engagement, and numerous stories with art breaks landed in dailies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Contests Highlight Johnson's Local Fire Prevention Week

Tying in with the local Fire Prevention Week, Manager Don Johnson at the Gayety Theatre, in Chicago, concentrated on his kids by holding a contest for which guest tickets were awarded those submitting the best 50-word letters on the subject. Contest was worked in conjunction with local fire insurance company which paid for printing and distribution of heralds calling attention to the stunt.

Also through tieup with insurance company window display was featured containing tombstones on each of which were such epitaphs as "I cleaned with gasoline," "I smoked in bed," etc., etc. Also run in cooperating newspaper was a contest for adults on fire prevention.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

'Life" Trips to Hollywood

All high schools and junior highs of San Francisco were tied into a unique exploitation stunt for Paramount's "What a Life," showing at the Warfield Theater in that city. Campaign had a dual purpose. First was award of a $10 cash prize to the student writing the best review of the film. Second, in cooperation with the Norton Publications, operating district papers with combined circulation exceeding 100,000, was offer of a free trip to Hollywood, with companion, for student sending in the best "Henry Aldridge" skit, taking off the chief comic character of the film. Jaunt by Pacific Greyhound bus, included a night and day at a hotel, lunch at the Paramount lot, and tickets to a Jack Benny broadcast. Stunt was staged by exploiteer Graham Kislingbury.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Van Dyck's Marx Impersonator

It isn't every theatreman who is fortunate enough to have an usher that is a "dead ringer" for Groucho Marx, but such was the lot of Eric Van Dyck at Loew's 83rd Street Theatre, New York, who planted the lad at the front of his house ahead and during run of "Marx Bros. at the Circus." As patrons entered the theatre, usher rushed to greet them in true Marxian fashion, lad was also used as cashier. During recessionals, "Groucho" descended from the stage and walked through aisles paging Mr. Chips, the next picture.

BACKSTAGE

By "Ike" Byrne

The turkey was stuffed with dressing, and we were stuffed with turkey. We wonder why, everytime we start feeling thankful for everything, that we go and eat so much.

We had two reasons to be particularly thankful this Thanksgiving day—Deanna Durbin and Wallace Beery. Deanna Durbin in her new picture "First Love," came up to our every expectation and Wallace Beery exceeded his.

And, as everyone left after seeing the two pictures, we knew for sure that it was "Thanks-giving day."

Busiest man on the street these days is Fred Newman. A man doesn't dare even say hello or he will holler at you to come up on some roof to help wire up one of the nice looking stars which they have been hanging. If Delta isn't the prettiest Christmas city on the slope this year, it won't be Fred Newman's fault.

We've been looking forward to seeing "Drums Along the Mohawk" ever since we visited the location of the picture last summer at Cedar City, Utah. We had gone down to see Bryce Canyon, but the "natives" informed us that the real attraction was the "Drums Along the Mohawk" location.

Beauiful country, it made a natural background for the Technicolor picture which opens Sunday in Delta. We're going to have fun trying to recognize the filling station attendant who was so enthused about "being in the movies," among the mass shots."

Did Mrs. Allen ever get to eat last Wednesday? Rollie had gone out to the restaurant for a bite, when he suddenly remembered that it was "Rotary" day, and dashed down to the hotel for the weekly meeting.

Jitterbug Contests Featured by Binstock

As a ballyhoo for "Dancing Co-Ed" at the Warner Lyric, in Hartford, Round Tabler Paul Binstock staged a jitterbug contest for five preliminary weeks, two more for the semi-finals with the eighth week devoted to the grand finals for the championship of Hartford.

As a starter, Paul ran a special trailer on his screen two weeks in advance, lobby display featured cutouts of jitterbug couples taken from national advertising and newspaper cooperation was secured from the Hartford Times and the Hartford Courant. Two gold trophies were promoted from local jeweler and presented to winning couple night of finals, Artie Shaw promoted postcards were imprinted and distributed house-to-house and leading stores permitted the theatreman to stamp their bags advertising the film and finals.

Fitzpatrick Presents "Circus" Trophy at Game

On Saturday afternoon, Ed Fitzpatrick at the Poli, in Waterbury, Conn, for "At the Circus," sent three boys dressed as the Marx Brothers out to the new city stadium where the Crosby-Naugatuck football game was being held. Lads mingled with the crowds, ran around the field, played football between halves and in general created a furore.

To the first fellow making a touchdown for the local team went a bronze statue of a player which was presented to him on the field by the theatre's Marx Brothers.

THE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

PROGRESS REPORT

FOR all of its repute of galloping development some of the phases of evolution in the structure of the industry of the motion picture are coming slowly. This has been a consequence of the concentrations of capital and creative attention to the basic product, the film—and a consequence, too, of factors of sheer inertia, so much to attend to that all else could wait.

Typical has been the long time a-coming of the unified operation represented by Advertising Accessories, Inc., the newly formed affiliate of National Screen Service. Just now the project covers the promotional merchandise of three concerns, Paramount, RKO and Universal. The prospects are that in time the newly constituted machinery of service will be at least as extensive in its coverage of producers as the National Screen trailer project.

The movement and reaching for the efficiencies to be had, now crystalized into operation by Mr. Herman Robbins and the indefatigable Mr. Charles Casanave, has been in the minds of distribution executives many and many a year.

To students of distribution the advantages have ever been obvious, even if apparently unobtainable. Twenty-five years ago unified physical distribution was being talked. Somewhat later Mr. Walter Irwin became the author of a unified distribution plan which was for the day of its presentation famously well accepted, as a theory. It or its equivalent may some day, when more insistent problems of the distribution machine are solved, or met, yet become a working fact. None will dispute that the motion picture industry has in its physical distribution plant a vast duplication of equipment with a capacity and cost out of proportion to the service to be rendered.

While these considerations of the machinery are primarily addressed at sheer business mechanics, it is to be observed that always reduction to practise of new devices finds influences on products. It may be expected to prove so with the advertising accessory services. With wastes and conflicts and complexities eliminated more effective attentions to the wares themselves are likely to result. Just mention that notion to Mr. Robbins and Mr. Casanave and you will probably hear a hatful.

That the whole project, both as a corporate device and as an instrument of production, should have a certain relation to the closely kindred trailer art-and-business is inevitable.

Potentialities for better showmanship and a larger utilization of better devices of box office selling are evident and more than promised.

CALIFORNIA'S "MIAMI"

MAGNIFICENT potentialities for transcontinental woofing repose in the production of "Miami" for Paramount, under the direction of Mr. Andrew L. Stone. Two weeks ago came a piece from Mr. Dave Epstein casually observing that Mr. Stone had been looking up locations at San Diego and Coronado. Now we've had to tear up a piece about that because, says Mr. Epstein, "there's been found a difference between Florida and California orange groves, and also there might be Chamber of Commerce comment". So it comes there's a Paramount expedition to Florida to "make background shots" in the veritable locations of the story. It looked for a time that Mr. Max Fleischer, the Miami producer, might have been put into what is known as a local situation among disturbed neighbors.

CODE and DRAMA

THE forthcoming motion picture version of the New York stage play of two seasons ago entitled "Of Mice and Men" is another emphatic exemplification of the truth that the industry's regulatory processes affecting production do not infrequently contribute dramatic betterment to the subjects with which they deal. The processes were of course not intended primarily to do any such thing. Even amongst well-wishers it was hardly hoped that the Code would do other than effect reasonable standards of decency without material sacrifice to dramatic aims. But it has done this and more.

The stage play, "Of Mice and Men", was based on the John Steinbeck story. It was a pronounced success but necessarily limited in extent because of the subject matter. It was argued, and perhaps with considerable effect, that much of the language employed restricted its acceptance. There were certain colorations, as well, in the manner of telling the story which left implications of a decidedly unpleasant taste.

The motion picture has dramatic merit superior to that of the stage play and dictionary words or colloquial uses of them alone are employed. It is stark, severe and penetrating. It does all this and more without recourse to allusions which of their very nature have no right of entry into a public auditorium. This job of Hal Roach as the producer and Lewis Milestone as the director is a highly creditable one. If those who sneer at the screen's immaturity were as thoughtful as their ponderous posings would have one believe, this production should silence them for a long moment at least.

"Of Mice and Men" does a service in showing what the screen can do and do well. Now that this has been done it is to be hoped that Mr. Roach and his colleagues in Hollywood will return promptly to the production of subject matter less agonizing in its import—subject matter less calculated to add to the misery than the happiness of an audience. Yes, there are those clinically inclined persons who want the smell of a sociological ether in their pictures, plays and books. But the millions get all the depression they want without buying tickets for more.

AN advertisement in "The Cinema" of London—where nightlife is a bit afflicted by "blackouts"—announces that the many friends of F. W. Musgrave can find him now as the proprietor of "The Hare & Hounds" which is to be found located "next door to the Bull & Bush, North End Way, Hampstead." Sounds most exciting, especially in the dark.

Bioff Indicted

WILLIAM BIOFF, IATSE studio union leader, on Wednesday was indicted on two counts of income tax evasion by the federal grand jury in Los Angeles. He was to be surrendered Thursday by his attorney, George M. Breslin.

Concluding one phase of the investigation of several months' duration, the federal grand jurors voted a true bill charging Bioff had failed to pay proper taxes during 1936 and 1937, the latter year being a period in which he received what he described as a $100,000 loan from Joseph M. Schenck. The Government charges that Bioff should have paid $4,384 in taxes on an income of $33,573 in 1936 and $80,250 on income of $176,417 in 1937. Instead, according to Charles H. Carr, assistant United States attorney general in charge of the probe, Bioff in 1936 paid a tax of $105.92 on an asserted income of $5,710 and in 1937 paid a levy of $193.50 on an asserted income of $7,205. Maximum penalty on each count is five years in jail or $10,000 fine or both.

Mr. Breslin and Michael Luddy, attorney for the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, Wednesday issued the following statement: "We have not yet seen the indictment and have no definite knowledge of its exact charges. However, we assume the indictment involves matters which were investigated several years ago by the Sacramento grand jury and by the legislative interim committee on capital and labor and lately by the local federal grand jury. Although we do not intend to try the case in any place other than the proper court we do feel that Mr. Bioff's complete innocence of any possible charge will be definitely established in due course."

While Illinois' Governor Henry Horner was preparing to open hearings this week, in Springfield, on the extradition of Bioff from California to Illinois, to serve out a 17-year-old Chicago jail term, Bioff, still in Hollywood, was leading his studio unions in new attacks on the producers, charging that they were not living up to the 10 per cent wage increase recently granted to the various crafts. He was answered immediately by Joseph M. Schenck, as head of the producers' labor committee.

Bioff's extradition was sought in the Illinois state capital by Thomas J. Courtney, Cook County prosecutor; it has been opposed by Senator Abraham L. Marovitz, Bioff's attorney at Springfield. The proceedings have developed into a political cause celebre, with Democratic Governor Horner under criticism from Republicans of the state and from the Chicago Daily News, a leader in the move for apprehension of Bioff. It was in the News' columns, and also in the columns of many of the country's papers, that Westbrook Pegler, syndicated writer, first revealed, several months ago, that Bioff had not finished a six months 1922 jail term in Chicago, though his appeal from it, which obtained his release, had been rejected.

Bioff was arrested in Los Angeles, on a wired request from the Chicago authorities. He walked free for two weeks on bail, and, when the Chicago authorities did not follow with extradition proceedings, the Los Angeles police released him. The Illinois Governor, on December 20th, postponed hearings to this week, to allow filing of briefs by attorneys for the state and the coast labor leader. The previous delays, and this postponement caused editorial criticism, and Governor Horner filed a $250,000 libel suit against the Chicago Daily News.

Bioff, who said the charge had been made to hamper his labor activities, led other studio labor leaders to a Hollywood conference on Tuesday, with Mr. Schenck and his producers' committee, after making new threats of a strike.

The strike possibility was soon dispelled when the producers agreed strictly to observe jurisdictional lines as set up by the studio unions, and the wage increases.

The union had claimed that, since the recently granted ten per cent wage increase, the producers were using laborers to do grips' work, grips to do gaffers' work, and that they were paying these classes lower scales.

Dies' "Reds"

BUILDING up to his public pleading of Wednesday, January 3rd, before the new Congress, for funds to continue his investigation of un-American activities, Representative Martin Dies (Dem., Texas), the week before had gone to the press of America with loud charges of a Hollywood motion picture colony penetrated by Communism. The impression had been left that the Congressman would cite Hollywood "cases" in a 20-page report. That report was not made a part of Mr. Dies' formal committee report to Congress, nor has it been made public since. The underlying reason, as heard in Washington Wednesday was: Disinclination of certain members of Mr. Dies' committee to "smear" individuals without definite detailed evidence of their affiliation with Communist or other subversive organizations. Meanwhile, Mr. Dies still was awaiting the word of Congress that would kill or continue his investigations.

It was pointed out that no public hearings had ever been held on the California situation and that at least another two months work would be necessary to develop the details of the investigators' discoveries.

$ Sleuths

UNCLE SAM'S minatory eye, constantly on the alert for attempted evasions of federal admission tax payments, is determined to keep down violations. This was the word from the Washington headquarters of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue this week.

Indicating that "tax evasions do not pay," Commissioner Guy T. Helvering pointed out that during the past year a considerable but unspecified amount of additional admission taxes were collected and, in addition, some offenders, unnamed, were fined or imprisoned.

The Washington report carried no intimation that any great difficulty is being encountered in obtaining true reports and complete tax payments from most motion picture theatres, and left the suggestion that ticket brokers and cabarets, whose activities are harder to check, are the chief offenders.

Regardless, sky-rocketing admission tax collections in the last few months have caused the U. S. Treasury Department to make an upward revision of its original estimate of revenue from that source for 1939-40, from $19,200,000 to $20,500,000, as reported on page 17.

The Italian Scene

AMERICAN motion pictures still head the list of foreign films imported into Italy according to the official figures of the Italian Film Monopoly which reach this country via La Cinématographie Française. The Italian motion picture monopoly has released figures for the 1937-38 and 1938-39 seasons.

The American companies stopped distribution in Italy on December 31, 1938, and the majors have not been sending pictures since that date. Even though the second period tabulated runs up to June, 1939, six months after the American companies withdrew, it was pointed out that the American pictures listed for the 1938-39 season could have been imported before the first of the year.

In the first period, from July 1, 1937 to May 30, 1938 the following foreign pictures were imported to Italy: 173 American, 25 French, 22 German, 13 English, 3 Austrian and 1 Hungarian. From July 1, 1938 to May 30, 1939 the tabulation shows 144 American, 40 French, 21 German, 16 English and 1 Spanish. Despite the Rome-Berlin axis France gained considerably and Germany lost slightly in the number of pictures brought into Italy for the recent period.

Forty-four features and 96 shorts were produced in Italy in 1938 according to the Italian Library of Information.

Another Language?

"THE LION HAS WINGS," Alexander Korda production from England, purportedly intended to stimulate patriotism for the Allies in their war with Hitler, a film which has played in Great Britain and Canada for the last six weeks, is being reconstructed for American audiences. United Artists, the distributor, decided that the "very English" commentary, which runs through a part of the picture, needed to be altered, and so engaged Lowell Thomas, narrator, to do the altering, in "American voice."

The picture was made from the library, from the newsreel, from dramatic scenes made in the studio, in London.

"The Lion Has Wings" was produced with Korda financing, but had State collaboration. The British Ministry of Information helped sponsor the picture in England. The cost was said to be within $125,000 and Aubrey Flanagan hailed the film as "a cutter's masterpiece and a cameraman's triumph," in his review from London in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 18th, 1939.

Withal, and of more immediate and important interest to the exhibitor is the picture's box office performances to date, United Artists, in New York, Wednesday, estimating that it will get $140,000 from the film in Canada alone—"and when we get $140,000 from Canada, on any picture, that's something," quoting a United Artists official.

"Wind", 69¢

MACMILLAN'S, the book publisher, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the film distributor, might be said to be engaged in a price war over "Gone With the Wind." It is a peaceful war, however, because the new "motion picture edition" of the book, though priced at 69c (6c to 96c less than the picture's box office price) carries a scene from the picture on the cover and otherwise ties in with the Selznick production to the tune of four pages—including all the credits, all advertisement.

It is well known that motion pictures based on books help stimulate new reader interest — "Wuthering Heights" is one of the best recent examples of this, enjoying a new book sales spurt after filming. But "Wind," now selling at the book store at 69c (it originally sold for $3.00), and selling at the theatre from 75c to $1.50, sets something of a precedent.

In England, book publishers use regular screen scenarios as an "original" source of popular book material—with slogans like "You have seen the picture, now read the book."

"Wind" news of the week appears on page 19.

Freedom, Except . . .

AMERICANS spending the same production moneys in England as under the existing quota, will be compelled hereafter to make a certain number of minimum cost films, under a new agreement, said officials of the British Board of Trade, under exhibitor questioning, at a conference in London Wednesday. The United States interests in England can do as they wish with their money now "frozen" in the country except convert it into dollars, it was said. The Board of Trade has no power to prevent them from acquiring theatres or mortgages.

The future policy of the Board of Trade regarding film financing, was still regarded uncertain this week, in view of the appointment of Sir Andrew Rae Duncan to be president of the board, succeeding Oliver Stanley, who was named Secretary of State for War.

Expecting

"THE RKO-DISNEY people" are aiming at a New York opening box office gross for "Pinocchio," when it makes its indefinite run at the Center Theatre starting February 15th, that will be almost double the $530,000 ticket income recorded at the Music Hall by their "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," in five weeks in January and February, 1938, its initial New York showing, Motion Picture Daily said Thursday.

The RKO-Disney interests, it pointed out, also expect $250,000 gross rental return from the Center's run, compared with the $150,000 received for "Snow White" in its five weeks at the Music Hall.

"Pinocchio" will be shown at the Center on rental terms of 70 per cent and at an admission scale averaging 75 cents a seat at the 3,200-seat theatre. The prices for "Snow White's" Music Hall engagement ranged from 40 cents to $1.65, an average of 68 cents per seat. The Music Hall seats 6,200.

PCA

"REGULAR" motion picture exhibitors had 596 feature motion pictures and 715 short subjects, in one and two reels, excluding 520 newsreels, at their disposal for showing to their public in 1939; that is, they had that much product bearing the seal of approval of the Production Code Administration, under the industry's own system of regulating film standards. There were an additional dozen or two socalled "sex," "hygiene" and clinical pictures on the market, finding an occasional playdate, coming from the socalled "fringe" of the industry, many of which were barred in one or another of the half-dozen states where state censorship exists, or meeting local objection elsewhere.

The annual report of the Production Code Administration will show that the West Coast branch of the PCA—at Joseph I. Breen's headquarters, in Hollywood, issued approval certificates in 1939 for 523 features, for 436 short subjects; the East Coast branch, at the Hays headquarters, in New York, issued 73 feature certificates, 279 for shorts—most of the "eastern certificates" going to imports and certain independent product.

Since the PCA began issuing approval certificates, on July 15, 1934, a total of 3,809 features and 4,500 have been so labeled, as follows:

YEAR	FEATURES	SHORTS
1934	294*	487
1935	901†	851
1936	763†	831
1937	661	783
1938	594	833
1939	596	715
TOTALS	3,809	4,500

Issuance of certificates started July 15, 1934.*

†Reason for the unusually large number of features certified in 1935 and 1936 is attributable to the action of distributors in submitting reissues, or pictures that were in circulation without certificates as produced prior to 1934 when the issuance of certificates started.

The PCA records show calendar year releases.

EMBODYING many a return to first principles, Hal Roach's "1,000,000 B.C." for United Artists release is nearing completion. Precise information as to how prehistoric effects are obtained is withheld by the studio but the stills at right and below show the result. Mr. Roach is personally directing the film, which is concerned principally with a story of conflict between the Rock Tribe, stone throwers, and the Shell Tribe, spear fighters. Volcanoes erupt, monsters overrun the area, natural disasters threaten, the Shell People ultimately impose their higher culture upon the others and, of course, boy gets girl.

THREE NEW TRUST SUITS HIT MAJORS; HOMAND'S MARYLAND CASE DROPPED

More Than 50 Actions Pending; Newest Cases by Independent Exhibitors in Boston, Rockland, Me., and Philadelphia

The comparative quiet which for weeks has prevailed all along the anti-trust suit line broke with loud reverberations this week, in the eastern sector, with the filing of three actions by independent exhibitors against the large companies, in Boston, Rockland, Maine, and in Philadelphia.

Over 50 Actions Pending

The plaintiffs: in Boston, E. M. Loew's Theatres (not connected with Loew's, Inc.); in Maine, Carroll Cooney, and in Philadelphia, Rubin Shapiro. Their actions bring to well over 50 those pending against the eight large companies, virtually all of which were named in each of this week's three complaints, along with other defendants.

The majors gained some ground in the week with the dismissal of Leo Homand's trust action in Baltimore, by a federal court, on the grounds that the plaintiff failed to show a conspiracy in restrain of trade. An appeal will be taken

In other pending film trust cases, the majors and Department of Justice counsel ended formal conferences in the "key" New York action, the Government filed answers in the Balaban and Katz Chicago contempt case, depositions continued in the John Ford suit in Boston, a Federal Judge denied United Artists' plea for dismissal of the complaint of Folley Amusement, of Brooklyn, and arguments were set for January 15th and the 29th, respectively, in the Mori-Philadelphia and Linden-Baltimore cases.

Seven File Boston Suit

The Boston action against eight majors, seeking $2,595,000 for alleged violations of the anti-trust laws, were filed by seven E. M. Loew theatre corporations: Loew's Drive-In Theatre, Providence, Rhode Island; the Lynn Open Air Theatre, Inc., of Lynn, Massachusetts; Winchester Theatre Company, of Winchester, Mass.; E. M. Loew's, Inc., operating the Winchester Theatre, under lease; the Miami Drive-In Theatre, Dade County, Florida; the Governor Ritchie Theatre, Inc., Glen Burnie, Maryland; and the Mount Vernon Theatre Corporation, Alexandria, Virginia. The action is in Boston Federal Court.

The action specifies that the accused conspired and combined in restraint of trade; that they allowed the plaintiff houses no first run pictures; and that they, additionally, forced such to show inferior product.

In addition, the Winchester Theatre Company, and its leaseholder, the E. M. Loew's, Inc., filed suit against the Massachusetts Amusement Corporation, the Massachusetts Operating Company, Inc., and the Middlesex Theatre, Inc., operating theatres in towns near Winchester. The plaintiffs seek equal rights in showing films.

$100,000 Maine Suit

Alleging violation of provisions of the Clayton anti-trust law, the Waldo Theatre Corporation, of Waldoboro, Maine, has entered attachments aggregating $100,000 at the Knox County Registry of Deeds, Rockland, same state, against the M. & P. Theatre Corporation, the Rockland Amusement Company, New England Theatres, Inc., Public Netco Theatre Corporation, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., 20th Century Fox Film Corporation, Vitagraph, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., United Artists Corporation, and Universal Film Exchange, Inc.

NO RELIEF FROM MR. JACKSON

Continuance of the present anti-trust policies of the Department of Justice, including those on the motion picture industry, was foreseen in Washington this week, under the Department's new leader, former Solicitor-General Robert H. Jackson, who was nominated last week to become attorney general, to succeed Frank Murphy. Mr. Murphy was elevated to the United States supreme court by President Roosevelt. Mr. Jackson, who had been assistant attorney general in charge of the Department's anti-trust division before the accession to that post by Thurman W. Arnold, and before his own appointment as solicitor-general, is said to be in full sympathy with the Department's present anti-trust campaign.

Mr. Murphy last week called the anti-trust suits an effort to stabilize national economy, and said, in his annual report, that "the country has been suffering from the absence of a referee in the competitive game." Mr. Arnold also talked last week, saying: "This new activity by the Department is not an attack on business; the purpose is constructive."

President of the plaintiff corporation is Carroll T. Cooney, who is also president of a New York wholesale lumber company. He alleges inability to obtain first run product for his Waldo Theatre.

Lynch in Philadelphia Case

Naming Robert Lynch, Philadelphia manager for Loew's, and 12 companies as defendants, Rubin Shapiro, operator of the Admiral Theatre, in that city, filed an anti-trust action for $75,000 in Philadelphia Federal Court last week.

The suit was filed in the name of Mr. Shapiro, the Harub Amusement Company Corporation, which operates the theatre, and the Penn Jersey Amusement Corporation. It names as defendants, besides Mr. Lynch, Warner Brothers, Inc., Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Loew's, Inc., 20th Century Fox Film Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and United Artists. Both the Clayton and Sherman anti-trust acts are mentioned as having been violated.

The plaintiffs claim that clearance operating in favor of the Stanley-Warners' Keystone, Wishart, and Kent, and the independent Diamond Theatre, damages the business of the Admiral, a neighborhood house.

Westway Case Ends

"The Westway Theatre case" against seven majors and Frank Durkee in Baltimore, ended last week, when Federal Judge Calvin Chesnut ruled that the plaintiff (Leo Homand, of the Westway) had "failed to show a conspiracy in restraint of trade . . . or unreasonable restraint of competition." The judge also held that clearance and run were necessary film industry operations, and lawful.

New York Trust Conferences

In the Government's New York anti-trust suit, conferences between major defendants' attorneys and Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, on the majors' interrogatories to the Government, ended on Friday. Mr. Williams said he had told the majors' attorneys what detailed information the Government would supply.

If the Government's attitude was acceptable, he said, a stipulation for both sides would be drawn and signed; if it was not, Federal Judge John Knox would decide.

The Government had until next Monday to file objections to the majors' interrogatories, which were served recently.

Answers in Chicago

In Chicago, where the Government has been following its criminal contempt case against Balaban and Katz and the majors, for violation of a 1932 consent decree, the Government attorneys last week filed three answers to the defendants, before Master Edgar Eldredge. The first reply answers the defense brief and memoranda; the second states Government objections to conclusions of law, as submitted by the defense; the third states the Government's objection to the proposed findings of fact.

Boston Suit Continues

In Boston, the long-running anti-trust suit by Morse and Rothenberg against the majors, postponed last week after testimony by Abe Montague, Columbia sales manager, and Seymour Schussel, company salesman, continued Monday when John J. Ford of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, and George C. Walsh, head of Paramount's Metro Theatres, took the witness stand.

Lose Brooklyn Move

Federal Judge Vincent Leibell, in Brooklyn, last week, denied United Artists' application to dismiss the complaint of the Folley Amusement Holding Corporation against it, the other majors, and Monogram, Republic, and others. The Judge, however, did not rule on jurisdiction.

To Hear Landis Appeal

The Circuit Court of Appeals, in Philadelphia, on next Monday, was scheduled to hear further arguments in case of the Landis Theatre, of Vineland, New Jersey, against the majors and the Stanley-Warner theatres. On last November 6th, Judge William H. Kirkpatrick had handed down a decree nisi, declaring that the licensing agreements between the Stanley Warner Vineland houses and the distributors violated anti-trust laws, and directing them to cease discriminating against the plaintiff, Eugene Mori, operator of the theatre, who was backed in his suit by public officials of Vineland.

The defense obtained a supersedeas; it posted a $10,000 bond, and took the case to the appeals court.

Baltimore Case January 29th

The Linden Theatre anti-trust suit against the majors and the Rome-Durkee circuit in the Baltimore area, is scheduled to begin on January 29th, in that city. The Linden's owners assert they are unable to obtain product.

PENDING TELEVISION APPLICATIONS WOULD DOUBLE TELECASTING FIELD

FCC Approval Believed Likely for Only Half of Requests; Hearings on Allocations To Start in Capital Monday

With 23 applications pending for authority to construct new television stations in 12 states and with several of the 21 presently licensed stations seeking expansive changes in their facilities it now seems certain that the proposed allocation of television channels set forth in the recent report of the Federal Communication Commission's television committee will be a major subject of discussion at hearings which the commission has set for Monday in Washington.

Only Half Will Be Granted

Indications are that approximately only half of the pending applications for new stations or changes can be granted under the plan outlined by the committee, which provides that not more than three channels shall be allocated to cities with metropolitan-area populations in excess of 1,000,000; two to cities between 500,000 and 1,000,000, and one to smaller cities.

Probably to be most restricted, should the Commission adopt its committee's proposals, are New York and Los Angeles immediately, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Washington in the future, as well as a number of smaller communities in which television companies have laboratories. Four applications for stations in Los Angeles, for instance, are now pending. In Chicago, Balaban & Katz has applied for a permit to operate a station.

While the commission last month tentatively adopted the television committee's proposed new rules, it decided to hold open hearings before finally passing on them so that there could be no later complaint that all interests had not been heard. Aside from the allocations, the major features of the rules is the provision permitting television station operators to make charges to cover the cost of program production, including advertising material, but not to charge for transmission—in other words, to accept commercial programs on a cooperative basis but not for profit.

Sparring for Position

With the television situation shaping up as it is, pointing to the day when regular commercial operation will be authorized, the various companies now in the field are sparring for position so that they may be set when the commission lets them unlock the cash register.

Thus, there are applications in the commission files for stations in Cincinnati, San Francisco, Washington, Milwaukee, Avon, Conn.; Schenectady, Chicago, Meriden, Conn.; Des Moines, Philadelphia, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Sacramento, Cal.; Kansas City and Manhattan, Kans.

Stations already are licensed in New York, Los Angeles, Passaic, N. J.; Kansas City, Bridgeport, Conn.; Albany, N. Y.; Schenectady, Chicago, Iowa City, Iowa; Boston, West Lafayette, Ind.; Philadelphia, and Camden, N. J.

The Commission has before it 22 requests for new stations; 21 already are licensed. The proposed allocations would provide for 120 stations in 91 metropolitan areas, or nearly three times the number of operating and proposed stations, but the difficulty is that existing and planned stations are confined to a few communities.

FCC officials believe that 17 of the pending applications are eligible for grant, provided appropriate time-sharing arrangements can be worked out, but several of these are for changes in existing facilities rather than for new stations.

The proposed allocation provides for seven Group A channels between 44,000 and 108,000 kilocycles, 12 channels for Group B stations, between 156,000 and 294,000 kilocycles, and any 6,000-kilocycle band above 300,000 kilocycles, except between 400,000 and 401,000 kilocycles, for Group C stations. Two types of television stations are provided for, experimental research stations, known as Class I, and experimental program stations, known as Class II. Only the latter—the experimental program stations—are to be permitted to make charges for the programs they transmit. Class II stations will be assigned one channel from either Group A or Group B; Class I stations may be assigned one or more channels as the program of experimentation requires, and assignment of a channel to a Class II station will not preclude the use of that channel by a Class I station.

With the development recently of new pick-up equipment only a fraction of the weight and cost of the apparatus now generally in use for out-of-studio programs, and the promised perfection of a method of linking stations by radio, television engineers believe picture radio is about to "go places," so that the present struggle for licenses attains increased importance.

Circuit Signs Warner Product

Warner Brothers has sold its product to the Colorado Corporation, operating 11 theatres in and around Los Angeles. Jack Brower handled the deal for Warners under the supervision of W. E. Callaway, district manager.

Theatre Ticket Dispute Settled

The dispute between the League of New York Theatres and ticket brokers was settled Tuesday when a modified code, submitted by the league, was accepted by representatives of 22 agencies.

Gusave A. Gerber, attorney for the agencies, said that the proposed modifications provide for a remission in the payment of certain funds by the brokers for code enforcement; a waiver of bond filing; the right to participate in rule-making and the establishment of regulations for the legitimate theatre industry, and acceptance of the Associated Theatre Ticket Agencies, Inc., as an association to assist in enforcing the code.

Zukor, Hicks Sail For Latin America

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures, was to arrive in New York Thursday from Hollywood, and, accompanied by John Hicks Jr., vice president, was to sail Friday aboard the SS Santa Elena for a two-month trip through Central and South America. Mrs. Hicks will accompany them on the tour, which will cover the principal cities of nine countries, during which the Paramount executives will conduct a survey of Latin-American film conditions and address sales meetings.

LABOR JOINS ORGANIZED INDUSTRY IN ITS FIGHT ON NEELY BILL

Central Council Calls Measure an Attack on Jobs; House Committee Is Expected to Begin Study Next Month

Labor, 600,000 strong, threw its support behind the industry this week in its fight against Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely's promised efforts in Congress in behalf of his anti-block booking bill, already passed by the Senate and now to go to the House.

Cites Destructive Features

The formidable labor ally is the Central Trades and Labor Council, in New York, composed of 350 unions in every conceivable type of craft. It is an American Federation of Labor affiliate, and through its executive board and Thomas Murtha, Council president, voiced opposition to the bill's "destructive features," in a joint statement issued to the public and press.

With Senator Neely promising action soon, industry opponents of the bill continued this week to take the stand in attack, in the persons of executives and committees of actors, writers and directors in Hollywood, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, and others, besides those already on record.

A strong newspaper defense of the screen against attacks by proponents of anti-block sales legislation came this week from John Rosenfield, motion picture editor of the Dallas News, who, concluding 20 years as a newspaperman, challenged "the advocates of the Neely bill to lay their cards on the table and quit threatening the movies with further stifling inhibitions."

"The screen, which deserves free play of creative imagination and inspiration, is thwarted on every front by social and psychological theories that won't stand up two seconds in the laboratories of sociology and psychology," observed Mr. Rosenfield.

Up Next Month

Block booking legislation now is expected to be taken up for consideration by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in Washington some time next month.

While the Committee has not yet been called to consider any of the legislation of the new session, the block booking bill is the second subject on its calendar and will probably be taken up when reached in the regular order of business.

Indications are that the Committee will refuse to pass on the measure without hearings, which would probably run a month or so, and that the bill, if reported favorably, would not reach the floor of the House before April or May.

Meanwhile, various organizations supporting the bill are flooding members of Congress with letters and resolutions urging consideration of the legislation, it was learned this week.

The joint statement by Thomas Murtha, president, and the board of the Central Trades and Labor Council declared that the Neely Bill would increase the risk taken by producers, resulting in a drastic curtailment in the number of films produced, and the consequent loss of studio jobs in addition to the closing of theatres for lack of product. Also, it was said, the measure would solve none of the problems of the industry.

The statement said in part:

"The Neely Bill has been endorsed by many earnest but misinformed or misguided people and groups, but organized labor, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, has carefully analyzed the bill and finds that its enactment would cause tremendous injury to thousands of workers in various branches of the great American motion picture industry.

". . . The bill, stripped of its camouflage, is designed to increase tremendously the risks taken by the producing companies, which are already staggering.

"We have scrutinized the proposal minutely and it is our firm conviction that, if it is passed by Congress, it will mean a great curtailment in the number of films produced annually by the American studios. This, in turn, will mean the destruction of the jobs of workers employed in the studios and, at the same time, the shuttering of thousands of motion picture theatres for lack of sufficient product, with a consequent loss of employment to operators and other workers in the theatres. . . .

"Under the Neely Bill the exhibitor cannot get out from under an agreement to show in his theatre a given picture. This is in contrast with the existing situation, which permits the exhibitor to cancel freely.

"Without this suggested law, it has been shown conclusively that theatre owners do have a wide selection. It has also been demonstrated that every producing company gets one of its pictures shown by 5,000 to 9,000 more theatres than will play some other picture turned out by the same studio. Despite all the hue and cry over block booking, the record shows the widest variation in the number of showings of pictures on the annual list of any studio. . . .

"We are going to do everything within our power to kill this bill, which will do great damage to a major American industry but will solve none of the serious problems and difficulties of that industry."

Producer, Exhibitor, Public Stand To Lose by Neely Bill: Depinet

Disaster for the industry lies beyond enactment of the Neely anti-block selling bill, and to the public it would bring higher admission prices. This is the conclusion of Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, with 30 years in the motion picture business, who this week brought the case of the industry versus anti-block booking legislation to a quarter of a million business and professional men of the 4,975 clubs of Rotary International, through its official journal, The Rotarian.

Taking the affirmative in a debate-in-print, in the same journal, was James Roosevelt, who, after one year in the business, is about to produce his first motion picture, "The Bat."

"Blind disregard of a situation that yearly is becoming more and more acute may easily lead to definite legislative action. . . . I am firmly convinced that the situation can be met by the industry itself," said the son of the President, who believes that under the present method there is no such thing as an intelligent plan of selectivity of Hollywood product.

Mr. Depinet explained the practice as one growing out of the necessity of assurances to exhibitors of a steady flow of product, which, at the same time, enabled producers to extend and improve the supply, financially, artistically and otherwise.

The theatre owner could not afford to risk his investment without an assured source of merchandise, Mr. Depinet told the American businessmen of Rotary, likening the system to that which is practiced in other lines, in automobiles, for example.

To maintain the low admission prices which have made the motion picture so successful as an entertainment medium, it is necessary for the theatre to operate without interruption, not sporadically when it has a particular picture it desires to present, he continued.

On the question of morals and block booking, which so frequently is brought up by certain "sincere cultural and social groups," Mr. Depinet said: "The fact that motion pictures are rented to a theatre in a block or rented individually has nothing whatever to do with the moral quality of the product."

Furthermore, "contrary to the general belief of the layman, theatres under the block booking method are not compelled to exhibit every picture contracted for in a group," Mr. Depinet said, referring to prevailing cancellation clauses in rental contracts.

Enactment of any such legislation as that proposed in Congress by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely "would result in the closing of a vast number of theatres, largely the small theatres unable to compete in buying strength with the larger houses," said Mr. Depinet, warning, also, that "it would increase selling costs, for the absence of block booking would require individual sales effort for each picture," and "instead of improving the quality of pictures, it would lessen their merit by making the production of every picture an even more precarious adventure and unjustifiable risk of huge sums of money without a reasonable assurance of an opportunity for return."

NEW ATTACKS MADE ON NEELY BILL

Directors Guilds, in Hollywood, met Monday to decide action against the Neely Bill and send delegates to Washington to fight against it. Final action is up to the boards of the individual Guilds.

Spokesmen pointed out that opposition to the proposed law is being made only on the basis that it will make for local censorship and hinder production through the requirement that synopses of pictures must be given to exhibitors before the product is sold.

Guilds, however, will take no stand on the block booking phase of the Neely bill until they have thoroughly familiarized themselves with it first.

AMPA Neely Bill Drive

The special committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers formed to devise ways of arousing opposition to the Neely Bill met at the Hotel Astor last Monday. Martin Starr, chairman, presided. The other members of the committee are Lou Pollock, Herb Berg, Leon Bamberger, Paul Lazarus, Jr., and Eli Sugarman. Kenneth Clark, public relations contact of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, also attended.

The committee drafted a three-point program. Plans for an anti-Neely Bill mass rally in Madison Square Garden had to be dropped when the group was informed that the MPPDA did not have funds for such purposes. The committee is sponsoring a booklet, "Let's Kill the Movies! No, Let's Kill the Neely Bill!" The circulation goal is set at 1,000,000. The MPPDA will provide 1,000 copies for sample purposes. Companies are asked to cooperate. RKO, through Leon Bamberger, member of the committee, has agreed to underwrite 10,000 copies. The book will be available in black and white and in color, according to present plans.

The AMPA's Neely Bill committee also wants industry members and their relatives to send protests against the bill to the members of the House of Representatives. It is planned to use all means of publicity possible to arouse the industry on the Neely Bill question.

Last week Harry Brandt addressed a meeting of 500 independent exhibitors, circuit heads and distribution officials. The ITOA leader repeated his reasons against the bill and suggested that telegrams be sent to representatives and that newspapers be asked to cooperate in the campaign.

The MPPDA board continued last week its series of discussions on Neely Bill strategy. The board also concluded its formal discussions of the foreign market situations.

MPTOA's Drive Against Bill

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America members are urged to support the campaign against the Neely Bill in the current bulletin of the national exhibitor organization. After a brief review of the year and the prospect for the future, including a discussion of the Code, the last five pages of the seven-page bulletin are devoted to the Neely Bill.

E. L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA wrote "the Neely Bill is likely to be enacted by the House of Representatives at this session of Congress . . . the refusal of several of the distributing companies to provide any adequate option to cancel pictures in their own exhibition contracts, or otherwise, has not helped their situation any, and has nullified to a large extent the effect of the cancellation rights voluntarily offered by two of the leading film companies.

In a section entitled "Don't Be Fooled on the Neely Bill," Mr. Kuykendall said that the bill was not merely against the distributors but against the theatre men also: "The imminent enactment of the Neely Bill takes the issue out of exhibitor politics into the hard facts of the specific provisions of the law itself." Members are asked to inform themselves on the provisions of the law and the Bill is printed in part in the bulletin.

HERE'S A GROUP FAVORING BILL

Eight Spokane independent exhibitors, meeting this week at the call of Howard D. McBride, member of the board of trustees of the Independent Theatre Owners of the Northwest, went on record in favor of the Neely anti-block booking bill and discussed the feasibility of organizing a local branch of the state organization, affiliated with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors. James Hone, executive secretary of the I.T.O., is expected in Spokane for an organization meeting later this month.

Chance Games Ruled Illegal

Chance games again are under legal ban in Philadelphia as a result of a decision by Eugene Allessendroni, common pleas judge, in a test case brought by James F. Ryan, assistant city solicitor, against the Mayfair, which features a weekly game. Elsewhere the games fared better as a bill was to be introduced in the New York Assembly seeking to legalize Bingo, a New York judge criticized what he called the "stupidity and hypocrisy" of the state laws against "innocent gambling" and the Massachusetts supreme court said it was impossible to rule that every Bank Night was a lottery.

The Philadelphia court held that several aspects of the "quiz" game made it a lottery rather than a test of skill.

Judge Thomas Downs in Queens county court, New York, after criticizing the state laws against gambling suggested that the legislature give the people an opportunity to pass upon their possible modification.

The Massachusetts supreme court pronouncement came after the full bench had upheld the conviction of a film theatre manager on lottery charge in connection with a Bank Night.

Jean Hersholt Initiated

Jean Hersholt became the first motion picture performer to be initiated into the Saints and Sinners when he was accepted into the organization at a luncheon held at the Hotel Astor in New York on January 10th. Several hundred members of the Circus society and their guests were present. The RKO delegation at the luncheon was headed by George J. Schaefer, president.

Australia Looks to Documentaries

by R. J. O'LEARY
in Montreal

Signs that Australia is stepping into line behind Great Britain and Canada in the production of documentary films were seen in the report from Ottawa that John Grierson, Canadian Government Film Commissioner, leaves soon on a trip to the Antipodes, to examine the film business there at the request of Australian and New Zealand governments.

Mr. Grierson two years ago came to Canada—twice in fact—at the request of Transportation Department officials. The ultimate result of his visits were the passage of the National Film Act, the establishment of the National Film Board to coordinate all film making and distributing activities of the government, and the eventual appointment of Mr. Grierson as film commissioner. Prior to this debut he had been one of England's leaders in the documentary film world, and director of the British Government's Film Centre.

When Mr. Grierson came to Canada for a third time last fall he told MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S representative he was en route to Australia. A few weeks later his appointment to Canadian Film Commissioner was announced and the Antipodean trip was shelved.

Though Mr. Grierson will not confirm reports of definite plans of the Australian Government, it is believed they are working on a system similar to that of Canada. He said that should Australia plan any legislation on films which might bring a federal film body into being, the makeup of such a unit would have to correspond to Australia's particular conditions.

Mr. Grierson said he would sail from San Francisco on the Mariposa January 31 and probably would be away for three months. He will return to resume his position with the Dominion Film Board.

Judging of Columbia's Campaign Contest Held

Judging and selection of the winners of Columbia's nation-wide contest on "Only Angels Have Wings" took place on Wednesday at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor. The winner of the first award of $1,000 and the ten additional prizes of $300 each will be announced next week.

The judges were Martin Quigley, Jack Alicoate, "Red" Kann, A-Mike Vogel, Gertrude Merriam and Charles "Chick" Lewis. Columbia's home office was represented by Jack Cohn, A. Montague, N. B. Spingold, Maurice Bergman, Hortense Schorr, Frank McGrann and Frank Rosenberg.

The competition started May 25th and was open to all theatre managers and advertising men as an incentive to develop special campaigns, including advertising, publicity and exploitation.

BOX OFFICE SPURT SENDS ADMISSION TAX COLLECTIONS UP $1,300,000

Film Activities of Several Bureaus for Next Fiscal Year Outlined in Budget; Funds for "Trust-Busting" Campaign

Sky-rocketing Federal admission-tax collections in the last few months, reflecting increased box office income, have influenced the Treasury Department to make an upward revision of its original estimates of revenue from that source during the 1939-40 fiscal year, it was disclosed in the annual budget sent to the new session of Congress by President Roosevelt, in which he asked for $460,000,000 in new taxes to defray the expense of his emergency national defense program.

The budget estimated the return from the admission tax at $20,500,000, an increase of $1,300,000 over the original estimate made 12 months ago on the basis of then existing conditions, and figures the revenue for the 1941 fiscal year, which begins July 1st, next, even higher, at $21,600,000.

On Wednesday, Washington's Internal Revenue Bureau headquarters reported a drop of $1,327,892 in admission tax collections for the fiscal year of 1938-39, tax income totaling $17,096,415, for the year ended June 30th, last, compared with $18,423,307 for 1937-38.

Million Above Collection

The present estimate of receipts for the 1939-40 fiscal year is approximately $1,000,000 above the $19,470,801 actually collected during the 1939 fiscal year, which ended June 30, last, but still $300,000 below the $20,800,779 collected in 1938.

In asking that Congress provide $460,000,000 in new taxes, the President in his budget message made no specific recommendations as to how the money should be raised, but expressed the hope that Congress "will follow the accepted principle of good taxation of taxing according to ability to pay and will avoid taxes which decrease consumer buying power."

The budget—a 1,214 page volume—displayed no indications that the Department of Justice "trust-busting" campaign, initiated under Attorney General Homer Cummings, carried on under Attorney General Frank Murphy and to be continued under Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, will be hamstrung by lack of funds.

While the $1,209,000 allocated for "the enforcement of anti-trust and kindred laws" is $100,000 less than Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has for the current year, the cut is not expected to handicap him particularly, since it is aimed almost exclusively at the employment of outside professionals and experts.

Lower Film Outlay Seen

Departmental estimates disclosed that the Department of Agriculture will reduce its expenditures for motion picture production and distribution from $78,550 to $75,420. What other departments and agencies planned to do was not made clear, in most instances any motion picture activities which might be planned being lumped with other informational and educational operations.

Broadcast control will cost about $300,000 more than during the current year, the Federal Communications Commission being given a total of $2,125,000—not all of which will be used on broadcasting, since the commission regulates all forms of communication—with $300,000 earmarked for the modernizing of its monitoring stations, the more adequate preparation of cases relating to the issuance of licenses and the checking of interferences.

President Roosevelt's plans for emergency spending of some $577,000,000 on national defense during the current and coming years also is of interest to the film industry, since the budget foresees that the planned expansion of the Navy will require more pictures for the recreational service which provides programs for showing on ships and at shore stations.

$343,000 Annual Cost

This service costs about $343,000 a year toward which the Government contributes $85,000, the remainder being paid from profits of ships' stores. The $85,000 contribution was made for the current year and is provided for 1941, but in addition it is contemplated to appropriate an additional $40,000 immediately and an extra $50,000 for the coming year.

President Roosevelt's plans for greater cooperation between the American republics in cultural matters will get under way July 1, when the State Department will receive an appropriation of $291,940. The full program calls for the interchange of motion pictures depicting the various countries, but indications are that the film phase of the plan will not be put into operation initially.

Federal Security Films

Of considerable interest are the plans of the Office of Education of the Federal Security Administration for motion picture and radio work. The film and radio activities of the defunct National Emergency Council were transferred to the Office of Education last year and that organization was transferred from the Interior Department to the Security Administration under the President's reorganization programs.

For the current fiscal year, the office had an appropriation of $20,000 for its radio activities. The fund for the coming year will be $40,000. The office is to act as a clearing house for Federal radio activities, allocating to the various agencies the time on the air which they want, so as to ease the burden on broadcasters, and is also to prepare and supervise programs.

More important, however, are the plans for the long-considered centralization of Federal motion picture activities originated by the National Emergency Council but never effective because of the opposition of some of the departments.

The budget carries a fund of $106,000 for the establishment of a film service to produce pictures and arrange for their distribution. The pictures are to be paid for by the departments for which they are made, and the appropriation for the film service covers only the salaries of the staff of 27 which is proposed and necessary office supplies and expenses.

A break-down of the appropriation shows that the service will be headed by a director at a salary of $7,500 a year, with an assistant director at $5,600, a script adviser, educational adviser, script writer and chief of distribution, each receiving $4,600, and an assistant chief of distribution at $3,800.

There will also be a film technician at $1,800 a year and an assistant film technician at $1,620. An informational specialist will receive $3,800, and the remainder of the staff will comprise the administrative and clerical force. The total payroll for the 27 employees will be $71,880 a year.

Kramer Gets Patents-Copyright Post Of Sirovich on House Committee

Chairmanship of the House Patents Committee, for several years held by the late Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, this week was vested in Representative Charles Kramer, of California.

The most important legislation to come before the Patents Committee this session will be the copyright bill, containing several controversial provisions of much importance to film producers and exhibitors, as well as to radio broadcasters.

Senator Thomas on Tuesday introduced the copyright legislation recommendations of the so-called Shotwell committee, although considerable delay is expected to attend the consideration of new copyright legislation in both Senate and the House.

U. S. copyright authorities in radio, films, and the legitimate theatre, as well as the literary world, are expected to participate in an inter-American copyright conference to be held in Montevideo, in February, to seek, in conjunction with representatives of other American republics, to set up standards and copyright protections.

It's "Florian" on the Nose But Not as a Horse Film

Winfield Sheehan Calls Lippizan Symbol of Old Austria's Glory

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

CAMERAS stopped grinding on "Florian" last week and Winfield Sheehan relaxed a little (see Pictorial Section), thumbed through the top hundred press clippings on his desk and said "Hmmmm." The stack of clippings was big enough to get an "Ah!" out of any producer, a "Wow!" from most, but this man, nourished on newsprint during ten turbulent years on the New York World at the turn of the century, doesn't measure publicity by the pound. He wants to know what it says. So he found out and said "Hmmmm."

Box-Office Instinct

It wouldn't be accurate reporting to say that the producer of "Florian" was displeased with what he read in the clippings. You can't love a horse the way he does and begrudge it a good notice. Especially if you own the horse. More especially if it's one of the only six of its kind in this hemisphere and you also own the other five. No, Producer Sheehan didn't "Hmmmm" because the newsmen had played up the Lippizan but he'd have liked it all a little better if they hadn't forgotten to tell what the picture is fundamentally about. Box office instinct.

No million dollar picture in long and long has received such extensive and elaborate attention from the press. The syndicated columns, the wire services and the feature writers have been shouting "Florian" at the reading public ever since word got around that a Sheehan picture was on the MGM agenda. And when they weren't shouting "Florian" they were shouting "Sheehan," for a film from the hand that wrought "What Price Glory," "Cavalcade," "Seventh Heaven" and so on is hot news in Hollywood.

"Florian" is not, be it said without further delay, a horse picture. It is a picture titled after a horse that is in it, and the horse that is in it is a symbol of the glory that was Austria under the Hapsburgs, and the glory that was the Hapsburgs' Austria is what the picture is fundamentally about. It is about that glory at its peak, the first days of its decline, its dissolution in the broil of war and in the boil of revolution, finally its utter extinction.

The story of "Florian," as its producer tells it eloquently through a haze of cigar smoke and, he makes you sure, will tell it as eloquently on the screen, opens in 1910—remember?—when Vienna was the gayest capital of Europe, proud of its thousand year-old royal house, jealous of its traditions, secure in its finely organized economic system and happy in a social stratification everybody understood and subscribed to. The boy of this story is born far down the social ladder, the girl high up, and if you remember your imperialism you know how things were with folk like them back then.

War, Peace, America, Reunion

About the only thing the boy and the girl had intimately in common, in the beginning, was the horse, for he tended it and she rode it, and the horse knew nothing about caste and that softened the circumstance some. Later on things happened. There was a war. There came a peace. There came an end of empire, an end of Hapsburg regime and all that it stood for, and there came a revolution and all that that stood for, and finally—but don't tell the customers this; let them pay to find it out—there came a coming to America, there came a coming together of the boy and girl, and the horse, and there was no more stratification and there is no more Austria, but there is a great story.

Tentatively for March

"Florian" is in the cutting room, tentatively scheduled for March release, and the folk around the MGM studio who've seen pieces of it are telling each other that this is a typical Sheehan production. They mean a number of quite definite things by that, to wit:

They point out that this particular million dollars' worth of investment is in uncommonly large part production investment. They compare the cast payroll with that charged to the average million dollar picture and predict that the players employed and the director responsible are doubtlessly due to find themselves thrust up into a higher income bracket within no time at all after the film gets into circulation. They name the numerous great who were not until they played in a Sheehan hit. It has long been an open secret that the Sheehan trick of putting the bulk of a budget into production and depending on the whole to do the big job, instead of hitching a rickety wagon to a team of high-stepping stars and praying they don't stumble, is one of the best ever performed in Hollywood.

The producer confesses that he believes he has some talent surprises in store for the customers. He expects Irina Baronova, brand new to pictures, to dazzle with her personality and charm as both dancer and actress. He thinks Robert Young has given him his finest performance and feels that Helen Gilbert, the find introduced in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," will be near the top, or there, after "Florian" has got around. He considers Charles Coburn's character portrayal among the best he ever has witnessed. Any producer might say as much for his cast. This one said as much for such as Janet Gaynor, Shirley Temple, Spencer Tracy and Robert Taylor when they were unknowns on his payroll.

First in Three Years

"Florian" is the first Sheehan picture in three years. They were not idle ones. And how does a producer keep his hand in when he isn't making pictures? Maybe you'll be surprised. Among other things, such as searching out stories like "Florian," he skimmed off the top 100 pictures each year and sat through them, studied them, broke them down.

It's a good bet that there will be more Sheehan pictures. He has five more story properties he thinks he'd sort of like to produce. He doesn't know, yet, when, where, or even whether. He says he doesn't care about "just making a picture." He made "Florian" for MGM on a one picture deal at what he considered precisely the right time to make it. He is well satisfied with the film as is. It is of record that when he has been satisfied with a picture the audiences have been pretty well satisfied in their turn and that when he has not been satisfied with a picture the strain on studio walls has been terrific. Doubtlessly he'll make the next one at such a time and place as he considers precisely right. For the present, your correspondent gives you, straight from the feedbox, "Florian" on the nose.

Picquet Adopting Road Show Policy

Charles Picquet, managing director of the Pinehurst Theatre, Pinehurst, N. C., is formulating plans for a return to a regular road show policy for his theatre in the resort center.

Focusing attention on a phase of the product problem, Mr. Picquet said that recent experience proved that he could not expect to avoid deficits except in the case of special attractions. Because of the requirements of the patrons of the resort center who are principally visitors from leading cities along the northeastern Atlantic seaboard, with the heavy majority coming from New York and vicinity, the Pinehurst theatre does not play the smaller attractions.

With bookings confined to special attractions and the in-between pictures it has developed that the subjects in the latter classification invariably fail of profitable engagement, he pointed out. Substantial patronage of the theatre is reserved exclusively for the special attractions.

"It is only on the special attractions," said Mr. Picquet, "that the Pinehurst theatre can hope to operate out of the red. For some time I have tried to maintain regular operation by spotting the lesser 'A' pictures in among the special attractions. But this policy is not working out.

"Of course, I would like to operate regularly, if not every day of the week at least on certain specific days, but I have found efforts in that direction unprofitable. Because of the scarcity of really strong attractions and because of the irregular appearance of these, I see no solution except a return to a road show policy under which I will announce an attraction and open the theatre when and if a worthwhile production comes along. There is no point or profit in trying to put on shows which this public has no interest in.

"My requirements in this resort community are, of course, unusually strict, but at the same time it seems to me that many theatres must be facing in some degree the same problem which I face. It is all very well to try and operate regularly, but it is exceedingly plain that to do so successfully a theatre must have pictures regularly that reasonably satisfy its patrons' requirements. If such pictures are only available to us from time to time, it seems only sensible that we should plan on opening the theatre and showing such pictures when they come along—just as we did in the old days with road shows."

Mr. Picquet operates the Pinehurst theatre, in Pinehurst, and the Carolina theatre in Southern Pines. For fourteen years he was president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina.

Omaha Keeps Price Scale

Admission prices in the Omaha distribution area, including Nebraska, Eastern Iowa and southern South Dakota, are expected to remain "as is" for 1940. Exhibitors hold that there can be no price change until business conditions and the crop situation improve. More and greater giveaways appear to be the trend for the new year. The most recent is a Food Shop at the new State, in downtown Omaha.

65 “WIND” DATES; SET “BLUEBIRD,” “LINCOLN”, “69TH”, “GRAPES”, “PASSAGE”

Playdate List for Selznick Film Increases; Some Complaints Over 70% Rental Terms in Chicago and Detroit

With the big-ballyhoo business of “world premieres” over for the moment, and first tests on merchandising concluding, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is now going full steam ahead to place David Selznick’s four-hour screen show of “Gone With the Wind” in every key spot in the country. Already it has rolled up 65 dates in 61 cities for openings up to and including February 17th.

Some difficulties are being reported by Metro’s sales managers in some spots in placing the longest-film-in-the-history-of-the-business at the 70 per cent rental terms demanded, as in Chicago and Detroit, but, for the most part, the rapidly growing playdate list points to smooth procedure in negotiations, say the executives.

Meanwhile other large distributors are giving “spotlight” attention to important new releases, principally Twentieth Century-Fox, which is concentrating on “The Blue Bird,” opening January 19th, and “Grapes of Wrath,” on January 24th; RKO Radio, which has “Abe Lincoln in Illinois,” coming up on January 22nd; Warner Brothers, which is planning a banquet to introduce its “Fighting 69th,” on January 24th; and, United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, having “Of Mice and Men” and “Northwest Passage,” respectively.

More "Wind" Dates Set

Besides the dates already published for “Gone With the Wind” others include:

January 17th—Sheridan theatre, Miami.
January 18th—Olympia, Miami.
January 24th—Orpheum theatre, Denver.
January 25th—Capitol, Charleston, W. Va.; Paramount, Omaha; Wilson, Detroit; Lincoln, Lincoln, Nebraska; United Artists, Detroit; Apollo, Atlantic City; Palace, Albany; Oriental, Chicago.
January 26th—Midwest, Oklahoma City; Paramount, Des Moines.
January 29th—Gloria, Charleston, S. C.; Paramount, Salt Lake City.
February 1st—Rialto, Williamsport, Pa.
February 2nd—Orpheum, Minneapolis; Orpheum, St. Paul.
February 16th—Garrick, Duluth.

The Selznick International production will be shown on a twice daily reserved seat basis at the Sheridan, Miami Beach; Wilson, Detroit; Rialto, Williamsport; Orpheum, Denver. The other theatres will show the picture three times a day, with only the evening performance reserved. “Wind” will be shown twice on Sunday, with both showings reserved, at the Midwest, Oklahoma City, and the Lincoln in Lincoln, Neb. After a seven-day run at the Palace, Albany, the picture will move over to the Harmanus Bleeker Hall for an indefinite run.

Large advance sales were reported in all cities where the picture is scheduled to open soon; $1,500 for the Newark and Jersey City engagements had been received before the tickets were put on sale. The Century in Baltimore had $3,700 worth of orders before the sale began. At Loew’s Rochester the figure was given at $6,500. The advance report from Philadelphia was $22,000. Seats went on sale January 8th for an indefinite run of “Gone With the Wind” at Warner theatre in Pittsburgh, according to a report by Harry Kalmine, general manager of the Warner Brothers Tri-State circuit. The picture is not to play Loew’s Penn because it was decided that the Warner theatre, 2,000 seats, would be more suitable for long-run business. This switch was made possible on account of the booking pool between Loew’s and Warner theatres in Pittsburgh.

EXTENDED RUNS ON "HUNCHBACK"

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" has been held over 100 per cent in all its pre-release and regular runs to date, according to RKO Radio. Full week hold-overs have been established in 35 major key situations.

The film was held for a second week at the Radio City Music Hall where on the Sunday of its first week it established a new all-time box-office record for a single day at the theatre.

Chicago, Detroit "Wind" Bookings

MGM and its regular customers in Chicago and Detroit could not come to terms over “Gone With the Wind.” In contrast to this difficulty deals have been concluded with three Paramount theatre partners. Balaban and Katz, in Chicago, could not agree with the distributor on house expenses figured in MGM’s profit guarantee of 10% of the gross. A straight 70-30 proposition was also not acceptable. So “Wind” was sold to the Oriental, a Jones, Linick & Schaeffer theatre. It was at first announced that the Wood theatre, Essaness house, would be the second Chicago theatre simultaneously playing the picture. This statement was cancelled and then it was reported that the Esquire would be the two-a-day theatre. The Esquire is operated by Harry and Elmer Balaban, whose circuit is not connected with Balaban & Katz.

A similar situation arose in Detroit, where the United Detroit theatres, also a Paramount affiliate, could not agree with MGM on terms. Negotiations with the Fox operated by David Idzal for National theatres were not successful. The picture goes into the United Artists. One reason advanced to explain why the regular accounts are not playing “Wind” in Chicago and Detroit is that Balaban & Katz and the United Detroit Theatres do not wish to tie-up downtown theatres and cause a product jam. It was also said that the circuits felt that more money could be made by playing other pictures rather than playing “Gone With the Wind” at the terms and policy required by MGM.

Advance ticket sale began January 7th at Loew’s theatres outside of New York, where the production opens January 26th. The first newspaper ads appeared that day. The same scale of prices as published for the New York runs is in force all over the country.

“Gone With the Wind” continued capacity business in its third week at the Capitol and Astor in New York. For the second consecutive week, the gross at the Capitol was estimated at $80,000, and at the Astor the figure was estimated at $22,000. The week before Christmas at the Capitol was under full capacity, but the Astor has been a complete sell-out since the picture opened.

A program of “carefully selected shorts” is being presented at theatres showing “Gone With the Wind” on a continuous run basis. Theatres showing the picture on a two-a-day, all reserved seat basis, are not confronted with the problem of filling the program so that the three presentations of “Wind” can be made at the best hours. Short subjects and newsreels are being used to complete the program.

MGM gave consideration to the type, number and length of shorts to be used with “Gone With the Wind” in theatres operating on a continuous basis. Theatres that will open “Wind” this month are almost all operated by Loew’s and it is probable that a similar “shorts policy” will be used throughout the country. The company decided that first of all the shorts must not be in color so that they might serve as a contrast and break from the three hours and forty-five minutes of color in the Selznick International production. Further it was determined that the subject matter should be of such a nature that it would blend with the feature. Cartoons and comedies and romantic shorts were barred.

The Capitol theatre in New York, the first theatre to show “Wind” on a three-performance, continuous basis, is presenting a special shorts program to accompany, and to space out, the presentations of the picturization of Margaret Mitchell’s novel. A newsreel is being shown three times each day, but the two shorts are being presented only twice. A first run theatre presenting a normal-length feature usually runs about a half hour of short subjects, plus ten to twenty minutes of newsreels:

The short subjects shown at the Capitol are “Pound Foolish,” one of the Crime Doesn’t Pay series (running time 20 minutes) and “Forgotten Victory.” The two-reel short is based on the smuggling of otherwise reputable citizens who try to avoid paying United States Custom duties and the investigation and conviction by the Treasury Department. “Forgotten Victory” is a John Nesbitt production showing Mark Carleton’s contribution to the American wheat industry. Carleton was a grain expert for the United States government and introduced Kubanka wheat into the country.

A patron of the Capitol theatre, following the advertising—“come in any time and see a complete show”—and going to the theatre in the morning or afternoon, must remain approximately four and one-half hours to see the whole program One woman in Los Angeles protested against being in the theatre from 9:45 a. m. until 3:00 p. m. to see the shorts that preceded “Wind” and the picture itself.

Additional "Wind" News

Oscar A. Doob, advertising and publicity director of Loew’s theatres, sent wires to the film critics in cities on the circuit announcing the playdates for that city on “Gone With the Wind.” He reported that nearly half of the wires resulted in page one announcements in at least 25 of the some 40 cities on the circuit.

$200 in awards will be presented by Selznick International to theatre staffs for the best letters on presentation of “Gone With the Wind.” $100 is offered for the best letter from a house manager on “How I Exhibited ‘Gone With the Wind’ ”; $50 for the best letter on how the picture was projected; $25 on how ushering problems were handled and a like sum on “How I Assisted the Exhibition” open to employees who are not eligible for any of the other awards. The letters will be judged on the basis of their value for future exhibitions of the film and will become property of Selznick International.

Selznick Receives Trophy

David O. Selznick was made a member of the National Education Association's Committee on Motion Pictures, Department of Secondary Education advisory board. Dr. William Lewin, committee chairman, announced that "Gone With the Wind" was responsible for the special honor and Mr. Selznick was presented with a trophy from the NEA.

"Blue Bird" Roadshows

Following the opening of the New York roadshow engagement of Darryl Zanuck's color production of Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird" at the Hollywood theatre on January 19th, roadshow engagements will open in Detroit and in San Francisco. The picture opens January 26th at the Adams theatre in Detroit and will be presented at the St. Francis theatre in San Francisco.

Darryl Zanuck will arrive in New York on January 18th for the premiere, which will be attended by stars of stage, screen and radio and prominent members of New York society. Shirley Temple is scheduled to make her first stage appearance in connection with the opening of "Blue Bird" in San Francisco. Other players from the studio will also be at that opening.

Johnny Russell, who plays the role of Tyltyl, Shirley's brother in the picture, has arrived in New York and will be one of the screen stars at the opening January 19th.

Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century-Fox, announced that the newspaper advertising campaign for the New York engagement would start this week and be the heaviest ever carried by the film company for a single engagement.

A benefit performance of the picture "The Blue Bird" on January 30th will open the campaign to raise $75,000 to erect a police memorial, according to announcement of Mayor LaGuardia. Henry Rogers Winthrop, a broker, is chairman of the fund committee.

"Lincoln" in Washington

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will have its world premiere on Monday, January 22nd, at the RKO Keith theatre in Washington, D. C., under the sponsorship of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is scheduled to be the guest of honor.

Representatives of the executive, judicial, legislative, diplomatic and social groups of the nation's capital will be present. A large group will travel from New York to be at the opening.

Tickets will sell at $5.00 and $2.50. Proceeds will go to the Newspaper Women's Club charities. Among those invited from Washington society are: Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who will be honorary chairman of the patronesses; Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of former President Theodore Roosevelt, honorary chairman of the premiere committee; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Times Herald, chairman of the hostesses for the reception; Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis and Mrs. George Sutherland.

Following the opening the picture will play on a continuous run policy from 11:00 a. m. until 7:30 p. m., at which time the house will close preparatory to the evening reserved seat performance. Admission scale will be 55c in the morning, 75c for the afternoon, and evening served seats $1.10, loges $1.65.

CLAIM RECORD FOR "HEIGHTS"

Samuel Goldwyn's "Wuthering Heights," which started a second engagement at the Plaza theatre, New York, last Saturday, had greater box-office receipts over the week end than during its original run at the theatre, according to the company. The increased business, the company said, was due to the fact that the picture won the New York Critics' Award as the best picture of 1939.

The Newspaper Women committee includes Helene Livingston Kravatz, chairman. Other members of the premiere committee are Katharine Brooks, president; Katharine McKiever, Harriet Ventress Heald, Sophia Pool Kepner, Margaret Germond and Alice Hutchins Drake.

The Southern States premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will be held in connection with the fiftieth anniversary celebration on January 27th of Lincoln Memorial University of Harrogate, Tennessee. Governor Prentice Cooper of Tennessee, Governor Keen Johnson of Kentucky and Governor James H. Price of Virginia are scheduled to act with President Stewart W. McClelland as hosts for the premiere.

Raymond Massey, star of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which Max Gordon and Harry Goetz produced for RKO Radio release, attended the University's commencement last June and will return for the premiere if possible. Admittance will be by invitation, with no admission charged. Invitations have been sent to Frederick H. Meserbe, collector of Lincolniana; to state governors, senators, publishers and benefactors of the university, Henry Ford, Mrs. Robert J. Randolph of Washington and Lincoln Isham of New York, respectively grand-daughter and great-grandson of Abraham Lincoln.

"Fighting 69th" Dinner

"The Fighting 69th," Warner Brothers picture, will be shown for the first time at the Waldorf-Astoria on January 24th in connection with a dinner celebrating the first entrance of the second division into the front line trenches of the World War, in the Luneville sector in January 1918. Past and present members of New York's famous Fighting Sixty-Ninth Regiment (the 165th U. S. Infantry of the Rainbow Division) will be present at the dinner. The picture was made from the World War annals of the regiment and of the Rainbow Division.

Jack Warner, vice-president; S. Charles Einfeld, advertising director; James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, stars of the film, will attend the dinner.

Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, has accepted an invitation to be one of the guests of honor at the dinner and motion picture preview. The anniversary assembly and preview is being sponsored by Col. John J. Mangan, present commander of the regiment, and Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Anderson, of the New York National Guard. Col. William P. ("Wild Bill") Donovan, war-time commander of the Fighting 69th, will be another guest of honor.

Simultaneous get-togethers are being arranged by other chapters of the Rainbow Division in Chicago, Montgomery, Cleveland, Youngstown, Detroit and throughout the country, and requests have been made to broadcast the New York celebration to link the various meetings.

Tickets for the dinner-preview of the "Fighting 69th" are on sale at the 69th Regiment Armory, Lexington Avenue and 26th Street, and at the regiment's special headquarters in the Waldorf-Astoria.

"Grapes of Wrath" January 24th

Darryl F. Zanuck's film version of John Steinbeck's novel "The Grapes of Wrath" will have its world premiere at the Rivoli theatre in New York on January 24th, according to announcement of Twentieth Century Fox. A press preview is scheduled for the Normandie theatre on January 23rd. Following the premiere at the Rivoli theatre the picture will be shown at popular prices for an extended run. Mr. Zanuck and other studio executives will come from Hollywood to attend the premiere.

Considerable controversy was aroused by the book "The Grapes of Wrath." According to the film company, some said that the producer had bought the book to keep it from the screen and others threatened boycotts if it were filmed. Mr. Zanuck's answer to both sides is called by the company a picture of great power, which faithfully followed the book, so much so that Steinbeck, who was the first to see the film, approved it without reservation.

The picture was directed by John Ford in guarded sets and Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the screen play, has given it an ending which has been kept secret. The cast includes Henry Fonda in the leading role and Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Charley Grapewin, Doris Bowdon, Russell Simpson, O. Z. Whitehead, John Qualen, Eddie Quillan and Zeffie Tilbury.

"Of Mice and Men" Broadcast

A special radio presentation of Hal Roach's "Of Mice and Men" has been arranged for 4:30 p. m., Sunday, January 14th, over the Columbia Broadcasting System. The dramatization will be on the "Pursuit of Happiness" program. Three leading male characters of the picture are to be in New York for the broadcast and play the same roles as in the film. These are Burgess Meredith, as "George"; Lon Chaney, Jr., "Lennie," and Roman Bohnen, "Candy."

The program will be available to all of CBS's 118 member stations. Twice daily announcements are being made all this week prior to the broadcast. The United Artists and CBS have worked out a publicity campaign to reach newspaper readers. Interviews with Meredith were arranged for the Associated Press and the United Press, with the stories serviced to the 2,000 member newspapers. Coverage, stories, pictures and mats were serviced to 700 newspapers and magazines throughout the country.

Burgess Meredith, star of "Of Mice and Men," and Monroe Greenthal, United Artists exploitation director, were in Cincinnati this week to attend a trade screening which was held January 8th for critics of Cincinnati and neighboring cities at Dayton, Columbus and Indianapolis. The showing was sponsored by Ike Libson, RKO theatre head in Cincinnati. A press reception followed the showing at the Netherland Plaza.

"Northwest Passage" Opening

"Northwest Passage" will have a world premiere in Albany on February 22nd at the Fabian's Palace theatre, according to Ralph Pielow, MGM branch manager. No indication has been given if the Albany opening is to be the only premiere or if it is but one of many in selected spots all over the country.

Johnson Heads General Register

E. Bruce Johnson has been elected president of the General Register Corporation, in New York, to succeed Captain P. C. Passman, who is retiring to return to England for war service. Captain Passman has been president of the corporation for the past two years. He will remain for several months in an advisory capacity. General Register manufactures ticket-issuing machines, both manual and automatic, as used in theatres and elsewhere, and as sold through theatre supply dealers and others.

The change in management was effected by Cyril Foster, treasurer of the Bell Punch Company, Ltd., of London, who came to New York to conduct the annual meeting of the stockholders and who was re-elected treasurer of the General Register Corporation. D. H. Finke of Chicago was re-elected vice-president and Charles C. Butler was re-elected secretary.

Mr. Johnson, who returns to New York from San Francisco to take over the presidency of the corporation, has been for the last four years manager of the company's operations on the Pacific Coast. He is internationally known in the industry. Originally he was an officer of the Turner and Dahnken Circuit in San Francisco, and as their representative participated in the organization of First National Exhibitors Circuit. He served as secretary of First National during its early years and later took charge of foreign operations, establishing international distribution. After the sale of First National to Warner Brothers, Mr. Johnson went to London where he was in the film business for several years, later going to San Francisco.

Movietone News Shows Cruiser-Plane Fight

First news films of a warship-airplane battle at sea, in the present war, were released by the Movietone News mid-week issue, Tuesday. The films show a German bomber attacking a British cruiser in the North Sea.

In the 159 foot sequence, bombs are shown bursting near the ship; the latter's anti-aircraft guns roar; the plane disappears. Narration is by Lowell Thomas, who comments that the engagement fails to answer the military puzzle of superiority of ship over plane, or vice versa.

The shots were taken on 16 mm. film by an officer on the British cruiser. The newsreel purchased them in London, after they were censored.

Equity and Radio Artists Debate Television Scales

Actors Equity and other unions interested in television actors' wage scales appear still unable to agree on a common front towards the broadcasting companies. Representatives of the American Federation of Radio Artists and those of the Equity council were in heated debate on Tuesday, it was reported; though details were unconfirmed.

It is said that Equity, claiming jurisdiction over the field, wishes to start wage negotiations immediately; and that the AFRA wishes negotiations to be delayed until reorganization of the parent actors' body, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, a reorganization that awaits a comprehensive report by a special accountant.

Also, the AFRA has agreed, under its present contracts with the networks, not to attempt organizing television actors until August.

Another Four A's union actively interested in television is the Screen Actors' Guild.

"Chips" Wins in Reviewers' Poll

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips," made by MGM in England, was elected the best picture of 1939, by newspaper reviewers voting in The Film Daily's annual poll. Other selections were:

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia; "Pygmalion," made in England by MGM; "Wuthering Heights," Samuel Goldwyn; "Dark Victory," Warner Brothers; "The Women," MGM; "The Wizard of Oz," MGM; "Juarez," Warner Brothers; "Stanley and Livingstone," Twentieth Century-Fox; "The Old Maid," Warner Brothers.

Six of the above "10 best" pictures of 1939, according to newspaperman opinion, were "costume" pictures; five were adapted from stage plays; "Stanley and Livingstone" is the only original story; only "The Wizard of Oz" is in color, though a sequence in "The Women" is in color.

Reade, Jr., in Ad Firm

Walter Reade, Jr., son of New York and New Jersey circuit operator, has entered the general advertising business. The firm of Reade, Obler & Daniels, Inc., with Reade, Jr., H. H. Daniels, Jr. and J. H. Greenhut as directors, has been formed.

Set Variety Artists Benefit

Olsen and Johnson, stars of the stage hit "Hellzapoppin'," will be in charge of entertainment at the annual benefit performance of the National Variety Artists at the Alvin theatre, New York, February 4th. George M. Cohan is chairman. Proceeds will be used for the welfare fund and to maintain the NVA clubhouse.

Nelson Eddy Signed

Nelson Eddy has been signed to a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. His current picture is "Balalaika," with Ilona Massey. He is now co-starring with Jeanette MacDonald in "New Moon" at the Culver City studios.

Richey Assails Unfair Zoning

"Unjustified clearance" has caused more damage to distributor and exhibitor than any other factor, and it is the prime problem this year, H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, told the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of West Virginia, in Clarksburg, that state, on Tuesday.

"That clearance in many instances is the product of selfishness, and has no economic justification, has been shown many times," he said, and added that a fair solution "must be based on price of film, admission prices, distance, area, natural barriers, policy, and other factors."

He also said: "Where unfair circuits hold up pictures an unreasonable time, preventing the pictures from being shown until they are too old, and have lost most of their box-office value, they injure the subsequent run exhibitor, and when he doesn't make a profit, the industry loses."

He urged the motion picture industry to take advantage of the arbitration machinery in the defunct trade practice code, saying it needed little revision, and that most exhibitors wanted "speedy, enforceable, and fair" arbitration.

He also urged every exhibitor to read the Neely Bill carefully, and to tell his Congressman his opinion.

The convention of the West Virginia unit of the National Allied was held at the Waldo Hotel. An informal dinner closed it.

On the same day, in Washington, officers of the National Allied States Association announced that the board of directors will meet in that city's Carlton Hotel, on January 17th and 18th. A meeting of Eastern regional officers is to be held at the same hotel on January 16th.

In New York State, the New York Allied this week formed a grievance committee for the Buffalo territory, comprising Herman Lorenz, chairman, Paul Grümmett, Marvin Atlas, Herbert Hoch, and Raymond Pashley.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut are scheduled to meet for the second time this year, next Tuesday, at Ceriani's Restaurant, New Haven, with President Arthur Lockwood presiding. The state Bingo Bill and the Neely Bill will be discussed.

The Allied Theatres of Connecticut will meet the same day, at Martin's Restaurant, same city, with A. M. Schuman, president, presiding. E. Thornton Kelly, in charge of the membership drive, will report.

The Allied unit, the Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, on Tuesday, in Philadelphia, reaffirmed its unconditional support of the Neely Bill; re-named Sidney Samuelson as its business manager; and elected its board of governors, comprising E. B. Gregory, Harry Pearlman, Charles Steifel, Thomas Lazarick, Harry Chertcoff, and George Ickes. Alternate governors are Normal Lewis, J. Segal, and Max Corr.

In Boston, on Tuesday, the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., Allied New England unit, elected Francis Lydon, president; and re-elected N. L. Levenson as first vice-president, and E. Harold Stoneman, as treasurer.

Zanuck Heads Council

Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox producer and vice-president, has been appointed chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, succeeding William Koenig.

FOX SETS 52; LASKY, LEVY WILL PRODUCE; MONOGRAM'S SALES DRIVE

Lasky Plans Three Features Using "Gateway to Hollywood" Talent; Monogram Management Personnel Changes Effected

Fifty-two features from Fox for 1940-41. This is the word brought to New York from Movietone City over the weekend by Herman Wobber, general sales manager, who added that while budgets had not been determined, in view of the international situation, "the company will spend courageously and will maintain quality production," despite curtailments of foreign revenues. Equally optimistic was the expression from Sidney Kent, president, that "there are no problems within our industry that cannot be ironed out."

Equally advanced in the formulation of product plans, policy and personnel structure for the new year are most of the other large companies. Some this week made further progress, as in the case of Universal, which closed with Jules Levy to produce a series of features; Monogram, which completed arrangements to speed sales and bookings, through a national drive, and other companies with similar campaigns for contracts and dates. Management changes in personnel were effected Tuesday by Monogram.

Lasky To Make Three

The new season will find Jesse L. Lasky back in harness as a motion picture producer, making at least three features.

Twenty-four of the 52 features planned by Twentieth Century-Fox for next year will be made by Darryl Zanuck and a like number by Sol Wurtzel. The other four planned will be made in England by Robert T. Kane, who is conferring on the new line-up prior to early return to England.

Mr. Zanuck plans to complete the 1939-40 production by the end of February and then begin on next year's pictures. About 60 stories have been lined up. One of the big pictures planned is "Broadcast," with Alice Faye and Don Ameche.

Mr. Wobber said he had noted a strong box-office upturn since January 1st. This he traced to such pictures as "Gone With the Wind," "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Pinocchio," "The Blue Bird" and "The Grapes of Wrath."

A minimum of five color productions is on the tentative schedule for 1940-41. These are "Brigham Young," "Khyber Rifles," "Mark of Zorro," "South American Way" and "The Tanganyika Exploit." Other pictures in preparation which may be on next year's program are: "Breach of Discipline," "The Californians," "Connie Goes to College," "Dance Hall," "End of the Trail," "Father Duffy of the Fighting 69th," "The Great Commandment," "Henry Stanley in England," "Lady Jane," "Left at the Altar," "Marching as to War," "Maverick University," "The Postman Walks Alone," "Red Cross Nurse," "The Return of Frank James," "Rise of Disraeli," "Say It with Music," "Ministrel Man" and "Shadows in the Snow."

Sidney R. Kent in his New Year's message to executives and employees said that "this New Year will decide much that is undecided today" and that "bigger and greater entertainments than ever will be necessary to command the patronage that the industry must get."

"When we planned the budget for 1939-40," he said, "there was fear of war, but none believed it would actually come. Notwithstanding war, that budget based on domestic plus foreign expectancy, remains the same for it would be suicidal to sacrifice quality."

WAR STIMULATING UNIT PRODUCTION

The European War, with the added emphasis it places on the domestic market for American motion pictures, will stimulate unit production, according to Frank Lloyd, Hollywood producer of such pictures as "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Wells Fargo," "If I Were King."

Mr. Lloyd, now making "Tree of Liberty," for Columbia, said this week that although the effects of the war would not be as serious as were first believed, the trend towards making films more economically would continue, with added stress being placed on recognized marquee values both as to stars and stories.

The unit system of production, geared to concentration on one subject at a time, with all departments coordinated in working on the one theme, will be greatly aided by these factors growing out of the war situation, added Mr. Lloyd.

Levy Forms Mayfair, Inc.

Jules Levy, former RKO Radio sales manager, formed Mayfair, Inc., and left Tuesday for the Coast to produce a group of pictures. The first, "The Boys from Syracuse," will star the Ritz Brothers. Universal will release the Mayfair product.

Rodgers and Hart are writing special numbers to amplify their original score for the Broadway run of the George Abbott play.

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president; W. A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager; Joseph Seidelman, vice-president and foreign manager, and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, are on the Coast on 1940-41 product.

W. J. Heineman, Western sales manager for Universal, has left for conferences on circuit deals in Detroit, Minneapolis and Chicago and is due back at the home office on Monday. Mr. Heineman will conclude negotiations with United Detroit Theatres.

B. Bernard Kreisler, Washington branch manager for Universal, was the national winner of the $1,500 award and two-week trip to Hollywood to the Exhibitor-Sponsored Testimonial to New Universal. Mr. Kreisler is distributing the $1,500 cash award among his office personnel of 30. He joined Universal last year as a special representative in Boston and was named Washington manager last March.

Monogram Changes

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, and Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production, received extensions of contracts to March 1, 1945, at a board of directors meeting Tuesday in New York.

Edward A. Golden, former vice-president in charge of exchange operations, was made general sales manager, succeeding George W. Weeks. Mr. Golden is also assistant to Mr. Johnston. Mr. Weeks is planning to go into production on the west coast shortly for Monogram release.

The following changes were also made: Thomas P. Loach, vice-president of Pathe Film Corporation and a member of the Monogram board of directors, was elected treasurer. Leon Fromberg resigned his position of treasurer. Edward G. Schieber, of the accounting firm, Price and Waterhouse, became assistant treasurer. John W. Mangham, Atlanta, chairman of the executive committee of the franchise holders, replaces Norton V. Ritchey, general manager of foreign distribution, on the board of directors. Harry H. Thomas has been put in charge of the company-owned exchanges in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Monogram announced a five-week playdate drive from February 25th to March 30th. The slogan is "March for Monogram." Competition has begun among the 30 exchanges for the three cash awards for the best showing.

The drive has been set to coincide with release of a number of important Monogram features including: "The Fatal Hour," Boris Karloff; "The Secret Hour" with Frank Lawton and Anna Lee; "Chasing Trouble," Frankie Darro; "The Crime of Dr. Orloff," Bela Lugosi; "Son of the Navy," Jean Parker and Martin Spellman; "Tomboy," Jackie Moran and Marcia Mae Jones and "Hidden Enemy," Warren Hull and Kay Linaker.

Franchise holders representing 25 Monogram exchanges met in Chicago on January 7th with a home office delegation headed by W. Ray Johnston, president. The franchise holders pledged support. Scott R. Dunlap, chief of production, attended from Hollywood.

Lasky Returns as Producer

Jesse L. Lasky plans to return to production this year and make three pictures with new talent discovered through his Gateway to Hollywood radio program. Mr. Lasky expects to complete a deal with a large company for production and distribution shortly.

Mr. Lasky's radio programs for 1940 are planned in three series of 13 weeks each. Talent will be selected at the end of each period. Production is to start after the winners of each broadcast series have been picked.

The producer plans to select the stories and work at the Hollywood studio with which he becomes affiliated, borrowing there such stars and supporting players as are necessary.

Ned Depinet Drive

Herb MacIntyre, captain of the Ned Depinet advance guard, Cresson E. Smith, Western and Southern Sales Manager and Harry Cohen were to meet in Denver this week with the staff of J. H. Ashby, branch manager. Harry Gittleson, editor of RKO's house publication, is also in the delegation.

Columbia will hold a divisional meeting at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, Saturday and Sunday for the midwest and central divisions.

Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers' sales manager, conferred this week in Dallas with Robert O'Donnell of the Interstate circuit and Robb and Rowley, on product deals. Mr. Sears also was to go to New Orleans, Atlanta and Charlotte to meet branch managers and salesmen in connection with the annual Sears drive.

Warner Brothers, the first American company to resume production in England following the war, has completed "The Briggs Family, first of five scheduled at Teddington.

Sales Tax Threat Leads Legislative List at Albany

by DICK CONNORS
in Albany

Predicated on the critical condition of upstate communities, many of which are said to be close to their bonded indebtedness limit, the three per cent sales tax bill introduced in Albany last week by Senator William Bewley of Lockport and Assemblyman Maurice Whitney of Berlin commanded attention. In its present form, Capitol observers see little chance of passage, but at the same time nearly everyone concedes that a modified tax on retail sales is inevitable between now and July 1, 1941, when the Bewley-Whitney bill would become operative if approved by the legislature and Gov. Lehman.

Compromise Sales Tax

Highly involved in application, the bill is taken to exempt theatre admissions less than 51 cents, while imposing a one cent tax on each ten cents over 50 cents. This would affect only some first run houses in New York, Buffalo, etc.

However, since it is taken for granted that a compromise sales tax is likely in the next 18 months, exhibitors are considered far from out of danger.

One provision of the Bewley-Whitney bill that will make exhibitors who own theatre property cheer is that whereby real estate taxes must be reduced at least 10 per cent in the fiscal year preceding the levy, for communities to get their "fair" share of revenue. It is believed that any sales tax bill will have to contain some such comfort for property owners.

Leading the legislative parade recently were the Bewly-Whitney proposal; the Dunnigan-Penny enabling act to implement the pari-mutuel horse race betting bill passed by the voters last November; proposals to regulate fee-charging employment agencies, including those of the theatres; two bills to legalize lotteries; a measure which would make mandatory instead of permissive daylight savings time from April through October.

The Dunnigan-Penny pari-mutuel bill, sponsored by the Bronx Senate minority leader, John J. Dunnigan, and Assemblyman Norman Penny of Nassau County, would insure the state and the race tracks about five per cent gross revenue from bets, set up two zones for racetracks and greatly restrict operation by enforcing large seating and automobile parking facilities. Of great interest to exhibitors, however, who favor such restrictions, were a ban against unrestricted issuance of passes and a minimum $1.50 admission to guard against any gambling by people who cannot afford it.

A bill to legalize Bingo, initiated Tuesday by Assemblyman Aaron Goldstein of Brooklyn, would allow the game only under non-profit organization auspices, with restrictions, and upon payment of a permit fee. Cash prizes would not be permitted.

Taxes—and More Taxes

Collections from the Ohio admission tax in 1939 amounted to $1,645,147. Theatres in that state pay the three per cent retail sales tax, based on gross receipts.

Ontario is debating reimposition of the province amusement tax, lifted in 1937 by Premier Mitchell Hepburn. There have been suggestions, alternative, of an increase in the license fees, based on number of seats.

State figures indicate that Missouri's two per cent sales tax yielded $22,264,483 this year, compared with $20,375,730 in 1938.

STANLEY BECOMES WAR SECRETARY

The appointment of Oliver Stanley as Secretary of State for War in a political realignment of the British cabinet this week, removed a powerful figure from the British film scene. As president of the Board of Trade he was a central figure in the drafting and final passage of the present Films Act under which the Quota operates and in recent months he had been actively concerned with plans for the wartime reorganization of the film industry in Britain. He is succeeded by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, chairman of the British Iron and Steel Federation and a director of the Bank of England.

Even as Mr. Stanley assumed his new duties discussions of plans for financing wartime film production reached a point at which it was forecast that a Film Credits Bank would be formed, backed by British Treasury money but without the participation of London financial houses. Control of the Bank would be vested in a joint committee in which Government representatives would be in the majority and which would include financial experts and representatives of the Board of Trade and the industry.

Joint stock banks may ultimately participate in the plan on a loan basis but the Board of Trade or the Films Council would be the ultimate arbiter on loans.

Adoption of the plan, it is believed, will be delayed until Mr. Stanley's successor has had an opportunity to study the financial plans so far proposed.

Sunday Films Win Thrice

Theatres of Aniston, Alabama, have reopened on Sundays, following a decree by Circuit Judge R. B. Carr, in a declaratory judgment brought against the city by the company operating the city's three theatres.

A jury of five in Danville, Virginia, recently ruled that Charles L. Abercrombie, manager of the State Theatre, was not guilty of law violation by operating his theatre on Sunday. The ruling is being taken as a precedent.

The Halifax Board of Trade has endorsed the movement for opening of local theatres on Sundays, for the duration of the war.

"S.R.O." Ban Loses

The city council of Wilmington, Delaware, this week tabled a proposed ban on theatre standees. The Chamber of Commerce had backed theatre men in opposing the ban. The Department of Public Safety had endorsed it.

Blumenthal Joins Hentz

A. Pam Blumenthal, formerly associated with the business management of Warner Brothers, has joined the firm of Hentz & Co., of the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Blumenthal had recently been with Ely & Co.

Fairbanks UA Stock Disposition Up To Executors

Douglas Fairbanks' one-fifth stock interest in United Artists may be disposed of at the discretion of the executors and trustees of his estate. The stock of the Elton Corporation, personal holding company which owns the stock, is not mentioned in the will, which was admitted to probate in the surrogate's court in New York last week. It is reported probable that the ownership of the United Artists stock will pass to the widow, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, and his son, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

The executors and trustees are authorized to liquidate any part of the estate necessary to set up a $2,000,000 fund out of which specific bequests are to be made to the widow and family after initial bequests of a total of $95,000 have been made. Dennis F. O'Brien, Fairbanks' attorney, filed an affidavit that trust funds aggregating approximately $1,700,000 and real estate and investments in West Coast Studios may be sufficient to meet the specific bequests without a sale of the United Artists stock.

Initial bequests are: $10,000 to the Motion Picture Actors Relief Fund; $10,000 to Charles L. Lewis, Los Angeles, "friend and employee"; $37,500 in trust to Mrs. Adelaide Crombie, Los Angeles, and $37,500 in trust to Kenneth Davenport, Hollywood.

The $2,000,000 fund is to be established from the residual estate of this one-half, but not to exceed $1,000,000 is left to the widow; twelve-fortieths, but not to exceed $600,000, to his son; two-fortieths, not to exceed $100,000, to Robert Fairbanks, a brother and one-fortieth, not to exceed $50,000, to Norris Wilcox, a brother. Also one-fortieth share, not to exceed $50,000, are left in trust for Flobelle Burden, Mary Margaret Chappellet, Letitia Fairbanks and Lucille Fairbanks, nieces. Another one-fortieth, not to exceed $50,000, is left to Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., for distribution to persons in amounts designated by a private letter. All the remaining property is to be divided equally between the widow and son.

J. R. Mahan Appointed

VAUDEVILLIANS PUSHING FOR UNION SHOP IN ALL THEATRES, NIGHT CLUBS

Trying to Eliminate 5 Per Cent Booking Fee by Employers, Says Jean Muir, Acting Secretary of New Guild

The vaudeville actors union, AGVA (American Guild of Variety Artists), is pushing ahead with plans to have every performer in every film-vaudeville theatre in the country, and, in every place wherein variety artists perform, carry a union card with benefits and concessions as set down under the code recently completed.

"There is nothing in our code which says that the agents' 10 per cent fee is to be split. They may have as much as 10 per cent, but what we are trying to do is to eliminate the five per cent booking fee by employers; we are trying to eliminate the practice whereby the employers—bookers, and others—take back part of a man's salary because they do him 'the honor' of employing him."

Heckling Charged

Speaking thus, on Monday, in the New York offices of the Guild was Jean Muir, screen and stage star and its present acting secretary. She was commenting on an essential point in the new AGVA code, still to be ratified by the membership, and then to be submitted to the circuits.

The previous day, Sunday afternoon, at the Palm Gardens, New York City, there had been a verbally broiling meeting, attended by about 300 actors, at which, it was charged supporters of Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors (which Miss Muir says is "now merely a social organization"), did some "heckling."

Miss Muir was optimistic regarding her still-organizing union, declarative about the "new deal" which the code will imply and about the duty of actors to be union-minded.

Cites Radio Artists' Success

She cited the unified battle of the American Federation of Radio Artists for increased wages and better conditions, against the advertising agencies, sponsors, and broadcasting networks, last year.

The AGVA is the "variety artists" union of the Associated Actors and Artists of America. It was formed last summer, after the expulsion of the American Federation of Actors from the "Four A's."

Last week it was reported that the vaudeville union had appealed to the Screen Actors Guild, in Hollywood for the temporary services of its executive secretary, Kenneth Thomson. Mr. Thomson was said, early this week, to be prepared to fly East and help the AGVA, as a representative of the "Four A's."

Claims 7,000 Members

"We have 7,000 members now," Miss Muir asserted. "Three thousand of them are paid up; another 1,500 are partially paid up. And when we get 12,000 members, which we are going to do shortly, we are going to have 12,000 members who take part in activities."

All circuits booking out of New York—Paramount, Interstate of Texas, Loew's, Keiths, and some 36 independents—already employ AGVA members, she said.

She estimated that 100 vaudeville-film houses in the East were employing her actors.

At the Sunday meeting, Frank Gillmore, president of the "Four A's", stressed the importance of the union movement. Henry Jaffe, attorney for the AGVA, asked members to bring complaints of unfair treatment by employers, to the organization, and cited the successful battles by the AFRA against employer intimidation Executive secretaries of the other "Four A's" unions, on the platform, were introduced. Jay C. Flippen, president of the guild, opened the meeting.

The heckling came in the "open forum," on a charge of intransigeance of a Philadelphia local of the independent AFA, on and the loan of $30,000 to the Guild by the other "Four A's" unions. It was denied by AFA supporters in the audience that the Philadelphia AFA unit had failed to sign a "first class" night club; and they also asked for an accounting of the $30,000.

There was to be another meeting of the AGVA Sunday, this to be closed; but there will be more "open membership rallies," Miss Muir said this week.

The AGVA Code

Following are some salient points in the AGVA code:

Employers to recognize the guild as the exclusive bargaining agent, and to employ only guild members.

All disputes arising out of a guild contract with the employer to be submitted to the American Arbitration Association.

Fifty dollars a week is the minimum salary for principals; $40 for chorus members; $10 per day for principals, and $7.50 per day for chorus members; daily rate of $7.50 extra for traveling shows.

Not more than 30 performances a week, with some exceptions.

Pay for rehearsals, according to classifications of work.

A forty-hour week, to include all the time of a full performance, implemented by rehearsal time, one hour per day dressing room time during performances, and any other time a performer must be present.

Rehearsal conditions.

Two weeks' notice or two weeks' pay for a performer not dismissed in the first three rehearsals, provided the engagement is for two weeks or more. Full pay or full salary if the engagement is for less than two weeks.

All Engagements for Pay

All engagements to be for pay; no docking of pay for omitted performances; no layoffs, except for certain enumerated conditions.

Written receipts for salary payments required.

Union dues and initiation fees to be checked off from performer's salary by employer, if performer agrees so, in writing.

The guild agrees to enforce contracts and discipline violators.

If employer is prevented by "act of God" from using performer, he may lay off same for one week without pay.

Total commissions must not exceed 10 per cent, and none may be assessed which would bring a performer's salary below the union minimum, except as provided by law (such as security taxes).

"Benefits" Limited

Contracts must be signed not only by booker, but also by exhibitor or independent contractor. Individuals signing for corporations are equally responsible with the corporations.

All existing contracts between performers and others must conform with the code, except when doing so would make working terms less advantageous to the performer.

Employers agree to pay legal expenses, if prosecution arises from performances.

Performers must not be compelled to play "benefits" without their wishing to do so; but if they so desire, the performance must be approved by the Theatre Authority.

No waivers may be granted for any provisions of the AGVA code, except with written consent of the AGVA.

THEATRICAL UNION RENEWS DEMAND

To circuits controlling 87 houses in Greater New York, the Theatrical Agents, Managers, and Treasurers' Union, on Monday sent registered letters demanding recognition as collective bargaining agency for managers and assistants. Simultaneously, the union suspended 83 members for non-payment of dues. This marked the start of the union's 1940 organization campaign. On Tuesday, at the New York State Labor Relations Board office, "front office" personnel of the Endicott circuit voted in the negative on whether they wished the union to represent them. The union recently won from the board the right to have the election called in the circuit, and to have its houses regarded as of one circuit, even though some are owned by others than the circuit's principals.

The Actors' Equity council, in New York, approved a committee report recommending more economy in the administration of the parent union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. The suggested specific economies were not disclosed.

In Boston, Thad C. Barrows, for 23 years president of the projectionists' union, Local 182, was reelected without opposition. In Yonkers last week, all the officers of the projectionists' union, Local 650, were reelected for four years, headed by president Arthur Martens. In Superior, Wisconsin, William Fiandt was named president of Local 457, projectionists.

In St. Louis, the fourth trial of John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the city's projectionists' Local 143, began in circuit court. Three previous attempts to try Mr. Nick on charges of extortion of money from exhibitors had ended in mistrials.

"Nazi Spy" Has First SA Showing

by PAUL BODO

in Montevideo

Marking its first showing in all of South America, "Confesions de un Espia Nazi" (Confessions of a Nazi Spy), was presented here and not without incident. The opening day of the picture the police prohibited further exhibition after the afternoon show "for fear of possible disorders and demonstrations during and after the show."

The press took exception to the police ban pointing out that it was contrary to the Uruguayan Constitution. Natalio Bertolini, manager of Warner Brothers of Uruguay, Inc., invited members of the Parliament to a private performance of the film in an effort to have the ban lifted. A few days later permission to exhibit the film was granted.

Thereafter the picture was played without any cuts simultaneously in two houses, the Rex and Cine Ariel, of the Glucksmann circuit, with two performances daily. More than 17,000 admissions were sold the first week, almost a record for first run houses. The film is now being shown in neighborhood houses with great success and without the troubles and disorders feared by the police.

Gift for Muni

The admirers of Paul Muni in Uruguay are sending him a gift, a simple but artistic album containing the photographs and autographs of the important personalities of our political and diplomatic life, in appreciation of his work in "Juarez." General Alfredo Baldomir, president of the Uruguayan Republic, heads the signers with a dedication praising Mr. Muni's talents. In addition the album contains the clippings of all reviews of "Juarez" published in the Uruguayan press.

World's Fair To Exhibit Film

Pan American International Films of Buenos Aires has completed a picture which has been made in Uruguay and which will be sent to the United States for exhibition next year at the New York World's Fair. It is a propaganda picture about our country which is so little known in other American republics.

Film Series Presented

Ricardo Salgueiro Silveira through arrangements made with the state-owned Estudio Auditorio, theatre of the National Broadcasting Service, has presented a series of short subjects, mostly propaganda, received from the diplomatic services of various countries. Included in the series were "La Escuadra Inglesa," on the British Navy; "Morelos," a Mexican picture; "The Great Boulder," and "Kujaslie," a Polish film. The exhibitions were free and the National Broadcasting Service lent theatre, staff and equipment free of charge to Mr. Salgueiro Silveira.

Linz Named Editor

LITIGATION HALTS GOLDYN DEAL

Samuel Goldwyn will not pursue negotiations for release of his new film, "The Westerner," by RKO, Paramount or Warner Brothers, with whom he is said to have had preliminary negotiations, until the courts have determined finally the status of his contract with United Artists, it was reported this week. United Artists attorneys were reported to have communicated with Warner and Paramount executives, advising them against concluding negotiations for release of the picture.

Mr. Goldwyn referred all inquiries to his attorney, Max D. Steuer, who said he had no comment. Meanwhile United Artists continued to draw up plans to take court action, if necessary, on the distribution of "The Westerner." The law firms of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery and Schwartz & Frohlich are working with United Artists on the action.

Dimitri Tiomkin, Russian composer, has been signed to provide the musical score for the picture.

Samuel Goldwyn was scheduled to return to the west Wednesday night. He was in New York to receive the Film Critics Award for "Wuthering Heights" as the best picture of the year. (See Pictorial Section.)

A total of 189 motion pictures were banned by the Nazis censors in the German Protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia, formerly Czechoslovakia, in a six weeks' period.

The subject matter of the film and the fact that one or more of the important players, or the directors, are non-Aryan were among the reasons for the ban. American neutrality is said to have saved American pictures from a complete ban; French and English product has been very hard hit.

The most successful recent American picture in Prague has been "Gunga Din."

The organization of the U. S. Film Distributors has been disbanded because of the Nazi regulation that all companies must be represented in the Central Film Organization for Bohemia and Moravia. Josef Hlinomatz, MGM manager and former head of the American film group, represents the American companies on the German film organization. MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO-Radio, Paramount, Universal and United Artists are doing business in the Prague territory

Jack Lamont, former district manager for Grand National in the south, has been appointed manager in charge of Monogram's Charlotte, N. C., exchange. He replaces M. L. Stevens, resigned.

Cites 'Model' of Film Appreciation

Donald A. Eldridge, director of Audio-Visual Education in the New Haven Schools, offers the eight-year old New Haven system of motion picture appreciation clubs as a model to schools in the Theatre News Service, "The Movies and the People Who Make Them". He states as the three-fold objective of such activity in the community (1) To develop a fuller appreciation of the motion picture as a form of art (based on the idea that fuller understanding leads to fuller enjoyment); (2) To encourage the application of worthwhile moral, social and ethical lessons, found in good motion pictures, to everyday living; (3) To encourage moviegoers to discriminate in their selection of motion picture entertainment.

The New Haven Junior Motion Picture Council, originated by Theatre Patrons, Inc., an adult appreciation group in cooperation with the Board of Education, consists of clubs established in each eighth grade, junior and high grade, as well as various clubs in the city. Student governors guide the work almost entirely, and faculty members serve only in advisory capacity and to help launch the work at the beginning of the year. Committees are appointed on radio, publicity, review, public symposiums, editing newspaper, etc. Radio programs are put on by students on movie subjects. The Board of Education makes a $50 annual appropriation to the work, and the students pay dues to their clubs.

New Haven film persons have given their cooperation in the form of study guides, stills, material for bulletin boards, special admissions for groups, etc. The director insists that boycotts are out and the approach must be constructive, if the students are to gain "the maximum value from the appreciation program." . . . "At the same time, this is the only basis upon which the exhibitors—the people who run the theatres and have to make their living at it—can be expected legitimately to cooperate with the schools."

Raymond Willie Promoted

R. J. O'Donnell of the Interstate circuit, Dallas, has appointed Raymond Willie general supervisor. Mr. Willie had been in charge of the smaller houses. That position is being filled by William O'Donnell, and Eddie Collins becomes city manager in San Antonio.

Shanghai Contract Signed

Asia Theatres, Ltd., operator of the Grand and Cathay theatres in Shanghai, has signed a new contract for the entire lineup of Warner pictures, including Vitaphone short subjects and trailers, for the 1939-40 season. The new contract provides for 15 per cent more playing time over last season.

The Cleveland Warner Brothers exchange has won the Group Certificate of Safety Merit awarded by the Industrial Commission of Ohio for the best record in the Greater Cleveland No-accident Campaign.

LAGUARDIA WANTS 27% OF FILMING; GIVES FILM AWARDS, FORGETS FRENCH

New York's Busy Mayor Predicts 125 Eastern Films in Two Years; His "Commissioner of Commerce" Unrolls Desk

by IRA WIT

New York's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia—"Little Flower"—had a busy day Monday, taking over the suburban Boston and Westchester Railway, pushing subway unification, discussing new low-cost housing for the Chelsea district, buying "Lakme" opera tickets for a children's benefit, soothing an indignant French film distributor (see column three), and moving the motion picture production from Hollywood to his favorite New York—again.

Sees 125 Made in East

The Mayor predicted Monday at a press conference at City Hall that eastern production would mount to 125 pictures annually within two years. He declared that his campaign to bring the film industry to New York would not be successfully completed until 27 per cent of the industry's total film output were produced in New York. The Mayor pointed out that the city was contributing 27 per cent of the entire U. S. revenue.

Asked whether the large companies were backing his program, he said some of the companies had approved the plan and others had not. To a direct question as to what executives would cooperate he replied that "some executives have vision, some haven't." So far as is known, no major company executives have openly expressed approval of a removal, while many have said that chances were decidedly slight.

Ten, Not 27 Per Cent

"Ten per cent, not 27 per cent," was the answer of some film company executies in New York this week, to the estimate by the Mayor that the industry derives 27 per cent of its revenue from New York. Company officials said the Mayor's figure was three times too high, on any of three bases of computation: boxoffice grosses, film rental, return on capital investment. They said that the entire New York area, including Westchester County, adjacent New Jersey and Long Island, might be figured as a 12½ per cent quota territory, and that the city itself could only account for approximately 10 per cent.

"We were told," the Mayor said, "that pictures could not be financed unless made in Hollywood. I want to say emphatically and definitely that we will get better financing here than in the west. There will be no difficulty in obtaining legitimate financing without the payment of extortionate or unconscionable bonuses." He did not say what financial houses in the city would provide the necessary funds.

The Mayor intimated that failure on the part of the large companies to cooperate with his plan would mean the organization of other large companies. "I want to say, in all kindliness, that the motion picture business hasn't in any way been preempted by the large companies," the Mayor declared. "Other companies may spring up in the near future. Bear in mind that the domain is open for others."

He stressed the point that production in New York would start modestly and gradually reach a peak, when, he said, parodying Hollywood terminology, "it is going to be stupendous, colossal and terrific." He continued by saying that "before long you will see individual pictures made here. These will be the foothills of our objective."

Labor unions have been consulted on every step of the campaign, he said, and they have given assurances that there will be no chiseling by unions. Only last Saturday, he added, a conference was held with representatives of all unions in the city interested in eastern production.

Discussions are being held on the advisability of promoting the construction of a cinema city in New York, he declared. Some say it would be located on the site of the New York World's Fair, at Flushing.

On several occasions during the interview the Mayor twitted Hollywood. In answer to one question he said: "I'm talking New York figures, not Hollywood figures. Mine are on the level." At another point he declared that pictures were going to be made "on an artistic basis with normal sized bathtubs."

The Mayor said pictures made in New York would be on a par with Hollywood product in production values. New York City, he added, expects to work in harmony with Hollywood, "but we will make our share as London makes its share of British pictures and we will not be satisfied with a fictional proportion."

Mayor's "Film Chief" Starts

Clendennin J. Ryan, New York's new "Commissioner of Commerce," as such in direct charge of the Mayor's movement to win part of Hollywood filming for the city, has opened offices in the heart of New York's film business, at Rockefeller Center, RKO Building, seventh floor. Up to Wednesday he had continued, successfully, to avoid telling just how and what the largest city of America was doing to bring the motion picture industry from Hollywood, "back to the city where it started."

Mr. Ryan declared the Mayor had secured land for a "Cinema City."

"Of course," he declared, "the producers will use the present facilities also: Eastern Service studios and the Brooklyn and Bronx studios.

Space would be leased by producers at the "Cinema City," Mr. Ryan explained. "It would be a service to them," he said. "Everything would be all set up, ready for them."

Neglects to Mention "Harvest", Adjudged Best Foreign Picture of Year by New York Film Critics; Goldwyn Attends

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's presentation of awards to pictures and personalities, selected by the New York Film Critics as the "best" of 1939, is finally done and gone, but not without its headaches.

Apologizes to the French

Ten days before the presentations, which were made Sunday in the Rainbow Room atop Rockefeller Center's towering RCA Building, someone at National Broadcasting Company slipped when he indicated that the Mayor would not be welcome on its networks when the award ceremonies were broadcast. That was straightened out with all due apologies to the Mayor, as previously reported. Now the Mayor is apologizing, to the French, for neglecting to mention their "Harvest," on the broadcast, as having received the Film Critics' commendation as the best foreign language film of the year. (Pictures in Pictorial Section.)

Andre R. Heymann, president of the French Cinema Center, American distributor of the film voted by the New York Critics to be the best foreign picture of the year, sent telegrams to the Mayor and to Kate Cameron of the Daily News, chairman of the critics group, refusing the award. He charged that an injustice had been done and his picture had been ignored "because of Hollywood politics." A protest was forwarded to the French Embassy in Washington. Mayor La Guardia took all the blame and chided Mr. Heymann for "getting excited." It was said, however, that the Hollywood part of the program took a minute and a half overtime and this caused the confusion.

On Tuesday the Foreign Film Distributor, a New York organization, wired the Film Critics' Circle, expressing "embarrassment" and "disapproval of Mr. Heymann's action, and asking the critics not to allow the incident to "reflect on the importers as a group."

Goldwyn Receives Plaque

Samuel Goldwyn, producer of "Wuthering Heights," traveled to New York for the broadcast to receive the bronze plaque symbolizing the first award, for "Heights." The producer thanked the Mayor for the award and expressed pleasure that "Wuthering Heights" had been selected as the best picture of the year by the New York Film Critics. Mr. Goldwyn said:

"No one man can make a motion picture. Therefore, no one man can take credit for it.

"So, in thanking the critics for this tribute, I also want to extend my appreciation to William Wyler for his brilliant direction; to Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur, who brought to life this great Bronte story; Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson, and the others of the fine cast—not forgetting the splendid cooperation of my entire organization."

Awards also were given to James Stewart for the best male performance of the year; Vivien Leigh, best feminine performance, and John Ford, for best direction. Scenes from "Wuthering Heights," the picture selected as best of the year, were broadcast from Hollywood by Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon.

FRENCH PRODUCTION AT STANDSTILL; RECEIPTS, ATTENDANCE REMAIN LOW

Financing Difficulties and Lack of Support Hold Back Producers; U. S. Companies Releasing Undubbed Film Versions

by SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Paris

After three and a half months of wartime, the French film industry has not shown the recuperative powers forecast for it last fall. All the plans for resuming production, described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD (for November 18th) are still plans, and in spite of the efforts of the film committee of the Ministry of Information, only one major film has been started since September. Two pictures on which production was interrupted by the war have been completed.

Financing Difficult, Receipts Low

This situation arises from many causes. One is that it is rather difficult to obtain special leaves from the Army for the technicians, artists, directors necessary to finish the pictures interrupted at the end of last August. Secondly there is also a matter of finances, which, due to the war, are more difficult to obtain.

Box office receipts have decreased 50 per cent from last year, but recent figures show an improvement over the two first months of the war.

Paris is most affected as many people have left the city and the blackout atmosphere is still not very favorable for theatre business.

There are now in Paris about 200 motion picture theatres in operation, out of a total of about 300. All these theatres are allowed to stay open up to 11 p. m. which is the closing time for all public places, cafes, restaurants, legitimate theatres, variety, etc.

The limitation of 300 people per performance has been dropped. The case of each theatre has been examined separately and the number of patrons allowed at one time fixed according to the capacity of bomb-shelters in the neighborhood. As a result many cinemas are reopening. The largest Paris cinema, the Gaumont-Palace, which has 4,800 seats, has been reopened for two weeks and is allowed 2,500 people per performance. Another important reopening was the Apollo Theatre, a first-run cinema for American pictures in the original language version which began showing the UA film "Captain Fury" on December 14th. The best first-run cinema of Paris, head of the Pathe Circuit, the Marignan on the Champs Elysées, reopened on December 16th with a French film completed only a month before the war, "Pieges" ("Traps"), starring Maurice Chevalier and Erich Von Stroheim

Another improvement is the fact that the policy of revivals which had been generally applied in first run and district cinemas of Paris as well as in the Provinces during the first two months of the war has been dropped. Producers and distributors have tried to release new pictures.

New Films Released

The American companies have tried to release new films in the original version in the specialized theatres of the Champs Elysées. Since September these have included: "Return of the Cisco Kid (20th Fox), "Made for Each Other" (UA), "Serg't Madden" (MGM), "Good Girls Go To Paris" (Columbia), "Invitation To Happiness" (Paramount), "Winter Carnival" (UA), "Hotel For Women" (20th Fox), "The Girl of the Golden West" (MGM), "The Affairs of Annabel" (RKO), "A Man to Remember" (RKO), "Second Fiddle" (Fox), "Susannah" (Fox), "Honolulu" (MGM), "Burn Em Up O'Connor" (MGM), "Captain Fury" (UA), "Cipher Bureau" (Grand National), "It's a Wonderful World" (Paramount), "Five Came Back" (RKO).

SCHOOL BOOKS ON DISNEY SUBJECTS

Eight states, according to RKO Radio, have officially announced textbooks for this year built around Walt Disney subjects as part of their regular Department of Education requirements. The newest book for school children which is expected to be included on the list is "Pinocchio", an adaptation by Dorothy Baruch from Walt Disney's production of the same name, soon to be released.

The school books, now in use in classrooms in parts of the United States and Canada, include stories of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, the Three Little Pigs, Goofy and other Disney characters. They are illustrated in color.

Two British films have been released since September in original version: "St. Martin's Lane" at the Biarritz, and "O.H.M.S." at the Cesar.

RKO will be the first company to release two big films, "Bachelor Girl" at the Avenue and "Nurse Edith Cavell" in another Champs Elysées theatre.

In the districts of Paris and in the Provinces the situation is not very different. It is only recently that general release of new pictures, already shown in first run, has started again. The general release of the dubbed version of "Stagecoach" marked the first general release of an American film in France since war.

Provinces Show Improvement

In the Provinces, while the east and north regions have been more affected, business is much nearer average in the western and southwest provinces where there are more people than before, including those who left Paris for the war and took refuge on the Atlantic coast.

Resumption of production is a different affair. In fact, since the war only one film has been completed, Edmond Greville's "Menaces."

The most important film to be produced since the war will be "Untel Pre et Fils" (Mr. So and So Father and Son"), a Transcontinental production distributed by Columbia Pictures which will be directed by Julien Duvivier, with an all-star cast including Louis Jouvet, Michèle Morgan, Renée Devillers, Suzy Prim. This picture which will be made in the South of France at the Nice studios will be a kind of French "Cavalcade," depicting the life of three Frenchmen, one having fought against Germany in 1870, the son in 1914-18 and the grandson at present.

The opinion of the French producers as well as of the people of the trade is that production cannot resume its previous activities while the domestic receipts remain at their present low. It is hoped that with Paris life slowly recovering, big pictures, and especially the French ones, will draw patrons. Morbid films, too sad and depressing stories, are not accepted by the public at present, no more than farcical comedies if they are too vulgar.

Financing Difficult

Producers generally must rely even more on the foreign markets than ever before for the amortization of their films. It is said that if many pictures interrupted by the war have not been resumed, although there are now five teams of technicians ready to work and a few studios have reopened, it is because producers of these films have to face new financial arrangements and they are not willing to release now as the receipts are too low. Some big French films completed just before the war have had their premieres in Belgium, Sweden and Switzerland and have not been shown in France.

The financial difficulties of the producers who cannot hope now for money advances from the distributors are being carefully studied by the Inter-Ministerial committee of the Cinema. It is expected that in a short time a bill will be issued which will reorganize the French film industry.

War had another effect on the film business—the bringing of a much more strict censorship on all films. Twelve American pictures are included in a list of 51 pictures banned in France for the duration of the war.

Films Date Back to 1933

The following American pictures are banned until the end of war hostilities, as reported by La Cinematographie Francaise, Paris: "Captured" (Capture) Warner Brothers, released August 19, 1933; "Outside the Law" (Derniers hors la Loi) Warner Brothers, released in France; "Crime School" (Ecole du Crime) Warner Brothers, released May 11, 1938; "Fraulein Doktor" MGM, an old picture; "Heroes for Sale" (Heros a vendre) First National, released July 22, 1933; "Illegal Traffic" (Illegal Trafic) Paramount, released November 2, 1938; "Black Legion" (Legion noire) Warner Brothers, released December 30, 1936; "Internes Can't Take Money" (Loi du Milieu) Paramount, released April 12, 1937; "The Informer" (Le Mouchard) RKO, released May 1, 1935; "Massacre," First National, released January 18, 1934; "Dawn Patrol" (Patrouille a l'Aube) Warner Brothers, released December 14, 1938; "Ronde des Pantins," MGM, an old picture; "Ever in My Heart" Warner Brothers, released October 13, 1933. "Nana" United Artists, released February 2, 1934, is one of the pictures temporarily suspended.

The pictures banned cover a great variety of subjects. Most of them are old and probably completed their runs in France and her colonies.

A circular has been addressed in France to the prefects of the zone of the Interior and zone of the Armies (except the reserved zone) asking them to examine, with the military and municipal authorities, the possibilities, wherever possible, to repeal: 1. The orders of requisition of motion picture theatres; and, 2. Suspension of the prohibition against theatres operating and to modify the restrictive measures which may be preventing the reopening of the theatres.

In addition to the newsreel material made by the regular companies in France, including Fox-Movietone, Paramount News and Pathe, a "journal of the war" is being formed from the majority of the material taken by the Film Service of the Army. It is said that only a small part of this material is used by the newsreels. The purpose of the compilation is that it will be regularly sent to foreign countries—so that neutrals may compare the German and French fighting.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Pasadena Presents

Hollywood, starting this New Year, as others, picked itself up after intervals with effervescent pick-me-ups, and moved in on neighboring Pasadena, some 20 miles away. There the blue-law town of the wealthy and retired offered an impressive double feature, the bill running from early morning through the afternoon.

The morning show, witnessed by more than 1,000,000, was dedicated to the 20th Century, as interpreted in terms of flowers in the 51st annual Tournament of Roses parade. The afternoon performance was devoted by 90,000 to the art and science of football, as played by the University of Southern California and Tennessee.

Taking almost two hours to pass a given point on Pasadena's Colorado Street, the Tournament of Roses parade began at 9:15 a. m. The audience had started arriving as many as six hours earlier. The first cars of the Pacific Electric, local transport, left for Pasadena at 4:45, amidst yawns.

Divided into five sequences, the parade included among its flower covered floats such diversified representation as the Salvation Army Band, Malicious, a racehorse of renown; floats from the Pacific Rose Society, the State of Tennessee, the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles County, Gay's Lion Farm, chief purveyor of lions to the film industry for jungle sequences; a dog and cat food manufacturer, a soft drink bottling works, and a bakery.

The Statue of Liberty, which dominates New York City's lower harbor, received recognition in the form of flowered replicas on the floats of Culver City, wherein are found the studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Burbank, which houses the Warner Brothers-First National aggregation.

The Culver City effort also boasted of two large white doves, made of chrysanthemums, with streamers bearing the words "God Bless America" extending from their beaks.

On the Burbank float rode four girls, supposedly representing different peoples of the world.

Heading the parade as grand marshal was Charlie McCarthy, splendid in an all white tailcoat and top hat, and superciliously oblivious of his alter ego, Edgar Bergen, sitting beside him. Faithful to the theme of the 20th Century, their float contained a portable broadcasting unit, enabling the splinter-wit to converse with children of all ages along the way.

Pinocchio, protagonist of the second and forthcoming Disney feature cartoon, was honored doubly, appearing in the City of Los Angeles float and also that of the Standard Oil Company, which was a "tribute to the motion picture industry." Representing a theatre, the Standard Oil creation was complete with miniature ushers, projector, seats filled with floral customers and a screen with Pinocchio's image in carnations and delphiniums.

PRODUCTION DROPS; SIX FINISH, TWO START

Hollywod's film production, with many a picture completed and "in the can" against far distant release dates, sloughed off this week. Six pictures were finished, two started and 26 were shooting, compared to the 15 finished, 6 started and 30 shooting of last week.

The number being prepared and edited remained the same as those of the week before: 17 in the first and 74 in the second category.

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer finished three: "Strange Cargo", "Florian" and "I Take This Woman", and had two shooting. Paramount started "Woman from Hell" and had one shooting.

RKO Radio completed "Millionaire Playboy" and had five shooting. "The House of Seven Gables" was started at Universal, where "My Little Chickadee" was finished and two films were shooting. At Warners, work was wound up on "Virginia City" and four were shooting.

Columbia had four shooting; Goldwyn, one; Republic, one; Edward Small, one, and Twentieth Century-Fox, four.

No short subjects were completed, and only one started, by MGM, which also had the only other one in work. Four were being prepared, one apiece by Columbia, MGM, RKO Radio and Warner Brothers. Eight were being edited, three at Columbia and Warners and two at RKO Radio.

Construction

Building construction on Hollywood film projects advances this week with news that the Paramount front gate, studio landmark since 1926, is being modernized; the conversion of the Dunningcolor plant has been completed, and the razing of the building on the site to be occupied by the new Warner Brothers exchange in Los Angles has been started.

The Dunningcolor laboratory has been converted from a research laboratory to a plant with capacity of 10,000,000 feet of three-color film, it is said.

The Warner exchange will occupy 14,000 square feet and be two stories in height.

Sees Brazil Limit On Chances for U.S. Independents

The insistence of the Brazilian government that all film exhibitors show at least two educational subjects (shorter than features) on each program has left no room for double features, and the film supply is excessive anyway, so that "the chance for the small independently produced film is gone," according to Ferdinand Luporini, distributor of foreign and American independent product in Brazil. Mr. Luporini was back in New York this week from six weeks in Rio de Janeiro. He represents Brazil-Jornal, Brazilian producers.

"There is a building boom, too; but the houses are good, and they want only the best pictures. Nobody wants westerns."

American films are greatly preferred, with the French second, he observed, noting that Mickey Rooney was "tremendous" draw in Brazil.

The only type American pictures opposed, he said, are musicals.

French product, and that of other European countries, has been regarded with some wariness lately by Brazilian exhibitors, he said, after too roseate descriptions by Continental producers, and so the showman prefers to receive his European product via American sources.

Mr. Luporini also had discussed with Brazil-Jornal an agreement now being negotiated with the Alexander Film Company, for exclusive distribution of Alexander advertising films to its 400-odd theatre accounts and co-distribution to these same accounts, by the two firms, of advertising campaigns by American companies, through Alexander.

Roberts Sees Better Latin America Trade

American film companies may expect increased bookings in 1940 for their product in Latin American countries, where business has been good the past year, according to Charles Roberts, Latin-American supervisor for Columbia Pictures, who returned to New York last week, after four months in Cuba, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru and Mexico.

He attributed the improved field to the slackening of European competition under war conditions and to the fact that French producers have been sending product of reduced quality. American pictures have most of the playing time on Latin American screens, he said.

Reorganization Nears for RKO; New Stock Moves

That RKO may emerge in reorganization from the supervision of the trustee and the District Court before the end of the month, was indicated Tuesday at a hearing held before Federal Judge William Bondy when the court was told that an order providing for the transfer of all assets from Irving Trust as trustee, to the new company would be submitted on Friday. Thus the company would emerge from proceedings under 77B practically on the seventh anniversary of the filing of its petition, on January 27, 1933.

To Be Signed This Month

The order, which becomes effective three days after the court's approval, will in all likelihood be signed before the end of January. In addition, a number of other orders providing for the virtual wind-up of other phases of the reorganized proceedings are to be submitted Friday by Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, attorneys for Atlas Corporation and the Irving Trust.

It was also disclosed Tuesday that applications for final allowances will be filed with the court before the end of the month.

Atlas, it is understood, will receive $102,000 as its compensation for underwriting the new RKO stock issuance. Rockefeller Center has subscribed for 163,629 shares and other creditors for 87,099 shares. The American Company, Atlas subsidiary, has taken 77,871 shares, leaving a balance of 171,401 to be picked up by Atlas as unsubscribed. RKO will receive $1,398,000 for the stock, of which Atlas pays $645,816 and others the balance.

Federal Judge William Bondy January 8th fixed January 17th for a hearing on the applications of George W. Alger, special master; the Chemical Bank and Trust Company and its attorneys, Wright, Gordon, Zachry & Parlin, for final allowances.

William Merrill, assistant to George J. Schaefer, president, was elected a vice-president of RKO Radio Pictures at a meeting Wednesday at the home office of the board of directors. Also elected were William Clark and O. R. McMahon, assistant treasurers, and J. Miller Walker and Gordon Youngman, assistant secretaries.

Library Sends Film Exhibit Throughout U.S.

The Cleveland Public Library, generally conceded to be the principal pioneer in effecting cooperative tieups between libraries and motion picture producers all over the country, is sending to other libraries in large cities a new exhibit showing the processes of filming important works of literature and the works of the many allied craftsmen and professions in motion pictures.

100 Photos Loaned

Designed by Frederick Myers, director of public relations of the Cleveland Public Library, and the MGM studios, to "encourage the public to start its reading early of books which will be made into pictures and shown during the 1939-40 season," an exhibit of 100 photographs tracing the process of making pictures from literary works has been loaned to the New Haven Public Library for display.

The director reports that the great interest in motion picture appreciation and the steady stream of folk of all ages into libraries to obtain books that have been filmed, has often taxed the libraries beyond their ability to supply enough copies. The Cleveland library in loaning the exhibit, makes the suggestion that a further tieup be made in displaying books about the professions and crafts represented in the making of pictures.

The series starts with a scene from a reading room, showing the reading department staff writing synopses of various books and reports on their picture possibilities.

List Salaries

Hal B. Wallis, head of Warner Brothers production, received a salary of $260,000 for the year ended August 27, 1939, according to the company's report to the Securities and Exchange Commission made public at the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday. James Cagney and Errol Flynn, Warner stars, received $243,000 and $181,333 respectively. On March 13, 1939, the contract of Joseph Bernhard, director of the company and manager of its theatre circuit, was renewed for three years. Mr. Bernhard's salary for the first year was listed at $1,750 per week plus $500 a week expenses. His salary for the second and third years was at $2,000 a week and $500 a week expenses.

Columbia Dividends

The directors of Columbia Pictures Corporation voted Wednesday the regular quarterly dividend of $.68¾ a share, and the balance unpaid of the dividend due for the preceding quarter of $.34⅜ a share was declared on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock of the company. ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The boys who drive for the motion picture studios in Hollwood resent being called chauffeurs. They want to be called drivers. Most of the actors call their drivers by name and chat with them. Recently a woman star, to whom a special car and driver were assigned by her studio, let a week go by without bothering to learn his name, and always addressed him as "Chauffeur." He thought a week was long enough, so he swung around in his seat, grinning, yet determined.

"Miss," he said, "I'm no chauffeur. I'm a driver."

"Why," she asked, "what's the difference?"

The answer was instantaneous and positive: "One hundred dollars a month and no dogs to wash!"

Hollywood's felines—cats to you—without resort to strike threats for improved conditions, have managed to attain some of the more luxurious things of life. This, of course, applies to the cat aristocracy, though even the alley cats have a shade more hauteur than their Eastern cousins, noticable in the plume of a tail, the arch of a neck.

Operating successfully is a hotel for cats in North Hollywood, which takes "guests" at a dollar a day—special weekly and monthly terms can be made. Felines without baggage pay in advance. Food is strained, but relationships, never, separate sleeping and plumbing facilities being provided.

Publicity Note: The trend is growing, Universal reporting that its Sigrid Gurie has established a "beauty parlor" for her pets, which include 12 Great Danes, two South American ocelots and a silver fox. The "parlor" has bathing tubs, spraying, clipping and stripping machines and a private medical cabinet.

A Hollywood press agent compliment is David Weissman's observation that, "The spark of genius is not very good without a plug."

Asides and Interludes recently carried a story about the report of an exhibitor to our "What the Picture Did for Me" Department, on Bette Davis in "The Old Maid," who credited Miss Davis with making many so-called actresses look like the "Cherry Sisters," and the subsequent inquiry of a reader who wrote to ask, "Who and what the hell are the Cherry Sisters?" A tag line on the item suggested that they might ask our own Jim Cron, who practically grew up with the Cherry Sisters, out in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Now Scott Leslie, our correspondent down at Tampa, Florida, comes through the mails with a suggestion that they had better ask George B. Peck, an old-time showman who one time managed several of Sparks Florida theatres and who is now retired and living in Tampa.

It seems that Mr. Peck was operating a theatre out in Iowa, way back in the Gay Nineties. In those days the theatres depended upon "actors in the flesh" and one day Peck got a request to book a local act called "The Cherry Sisters." The girls had seen "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and had produced an act along that line and were going to try to make a tour to gather money to pay off the mortgage on the old farmstead for old Pop and Mom.

So Peck gave the sisters a date and when they gave their first show the act was so awful it was good. The audience simply howled at the "ham" acting. So Peck decided to continue the run instead of cancelling, advertising it as the worst act in vaudeville. That helped, too, and they drew capacity business. Peck wired Hammerstein in New York about the girls, who saw possibilities and he had them sent on to his Victoria theatre. Following this engagement the sisters played all over the country, the usual custom being to have them close the show with a cover over the orchestra pit and the girls playing behind a net so the customers could shower them with ripe fruit, or whatever.

So she decided that she would marry the first man coming along with the moniker. She put ads in some newspapers, personal readers in others, and one day Oscar Crackerjack rode up in the mailman's bag. Mary Crackerjack married Oscar Crackerjack and she doesn't have to advertise in any more papers for any more crackerjacks. She now has bushels of crackerjacks, in fact, seven of them.

"What's that?" they inquired in wonder, when a Christmas tree was flashed on the screen.

Remember the Night

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

This, Ladies and Gentlemen, is what might be called a customers' picture, and you can take the phrase literally. It is not, perhaps, an artists' picture, because artists and folk who like to get arty about pictures would tell you that the small town in Indiana where a lot of the picture takes place exists nowadays only in the fond memory of the older generation, and they wouldn't agree that that's as good a place to have a picture story take place as any. Besides, location hasn't got much to do with it, because what happens in Indiana, and in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Canada and, first and last, in New York, could happen anywhere and it is to be devoutly hoped, does happen, not too infrequently.

You see, this is a story about a girl who steals a bracelet and gets arrested and comes up for trial just before Christmas, which is a time when juries don't like to lock people up, so the district attorney's assistant prosecuting the case gets a postponement until after New Years and then gets to feeling Christmasy himself, and puts up bond for the girl he intends to send to the penitentiary after the holidays.

With that start anything could happen, so the girl is brought to the young man's apartment and he's going home to Indiana to spend the holiday with his mother and it turns out the girl lives in Indiana, too, and hasn't any money to live on in New York until her trial comes up, so he asks her to let him drop her off in her town and she goes back with him and he drops her off but her mother doesn't want to see her so he takes her on to his own home with him. And while they're there everybody is nice to her and pretty soon she and the young man are in love. But they've still got to go back to New York for that trial, and they do, and the young man tries to throw the case but the young woman insists on pleading guilty, so it winds up with her going up the river and him promising to be waiting around for her when she gets back.

Now that kind of story could get pretty sticky in spots, but this one doesn't, and it could get dirty, but this one doesn't do that either, for which producer-director Mitchell Leisen and screen playwright Preston Sturges are entitled to special credit, in addition to the very large credit due them for excellent production, direction and writing throughout.

Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray make a great pair of leads for this not at all commonplace cast and it would be possible to write on indefinitely about other individual acting accomplishments. Willard Robertson turns in an attorney bit at the opening which is something the folks will be remembering for years, and when Sterling Holloway sings "Perfect Day" on Christmas Eve in an Indiana farm house you'll feel like a fool for doing it but you'll probably cry a little.

There aren't any places where a film like this doesn't belong, and there are as many places as there are theatres where it does. It is, as remarked at start of this report, a customers' picture. And the customer, you'll remember, is always right.

The Fighting 69th

(Warners)

War and Religion Piece

Warners' picturization of the life of Father Duffy, famous wartime chaplain, and of the action of the 69th New York Regiment during its World War career, comes to the screen as a preachment for patriotism which makes a plea for tolerance, while at the same time the unfolding plot delineates some stirring scenes of drama and adventure.

Cast without women, "The Fighting 69th" has for its top roles James Cagney, Number 10 in the Money Making Stars of the Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll of exhibitors, as the weakling whose cowardice leads to a massacre of a portion of his regiment; Pat O'Brien as the famed priest; George Brent as " 'Wild Bill' Donovan"; and Jeffrey Lynn as "Joyce Kilmer."

The "Wild Bill Donovan" of the play is none other than Colonel William Donovan, counsel for RKO-Radio in the New York anti-trust case.

War and life in the trenches is portrayed brutally in gripping pyrotechnics and through all the horrors of the conflict "Father Duffy" goes, calming hysterical men and praying for the redemption of the "one lost sheep"—"Plunkett," an arrogant lad from Brooklyn who has left his faith and refuses to reenter the church. "Plunkett," despised by his comrades, causes a massacre of a portion of the regiment by disobeying orders, and later shows fear while on patrol duty in No Man's Land. For this he is courtmartialed and sentenced to be shot. The remainder of the regiment moves up to the front to take a sector without artillery support. As they are discovered, the jail in which "Plunkett" is held is shelled and he escapes.

He dashes into a hospital being bombed, sees the wounded saying The Lord's Prayer, and joins them. Then he speeds to the front and, in a daring attack with a trench mortar, blasts a hole through the barbed wire, and the men capture their objective.

"Plunkett," fatally wounded, is given the last rite of the church and is hailed as a hero.

The picture fades out with a statue of Father Duffy in New York, and O'Brien's characterization is superimposed upon it as he prays:

"O Heavenly Father, hear, I beseech you, the prayer of this, America's lost generation. They loved life, too, O Lord. It was as sweet to them as to the living of today. They accepted privation, wounds and death, that an ideal might live. Don't let it be forgotten, Father. Amid turmoil and angry passions, when our worthwhile things seem swept away, let the tired eyes of a troubled world rise up and see the shining citadel of which these young lives formed the imperishable stones—America, a citadel of peace; peace forevermore. This I beg of You, through Christ, Our Lord, Amen."

William Keighley, the director; Norman Reilly Raine, Fred Niblo, Jr., and Dean Franklin, who wrote the original screen play, and associate producer Louis F. Edelman in their respective departments balanced well the comedy and the action and turned out able, craftsmanlike assignments. Hal B. Wallis was the executive producer.

Supporting players are Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan, Dick Foran, William Lundigan, Quinn Williams, Henry O'Neill, John Litel, Sammy Cohen, Harvey Stephens, DeWolf Hopper, Tom Dugan and Frank Wilcox.

"His Girl Friday" is a version of the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur stage play and the 1931 motion picture, "Front Page," as much improved, compared to its excellent predecessors, as 1940 film technology is improved over that of nine years ago.

Losing none of the bite and sting of the original, the present vehicle in addition has many a novel twist, as when Cary Grant, asked what the character portrayed by Ralph Bellamy looks like, responds, "Like the movie actor, you know, Ralph Bellamy."

Charles Lederer's screen play has made a woman of "Hildy Johnson," the star reporter who wants to quit and lead a normal life. As "Hildy," (or, to give her full due, Hildegarde), Rosalind Russell never has been seen to better advantage. Recently divorced from the hard bitten managing editor delineated by Mr. Grant, she comes back to tell him that she is going to leave the newspaper, marry an insurance salesman and settle down. But she agrees to cover just one more story, in return for a $100,000 insurance policy given her fiancee.

That one more story, and there's never been a more exciting one, proves to her that printer's ink is inescapably in her veins, as she hides an escaped murderer and exposes political corruption.

The unfolding of the screen play is primarily by means of dialogue, but dialogue of a caliber and pace which makes it the essence of action. Making the most of the myriad opportunities afforded by the script, the cast selected by producer-director Howard Hawks includes such performers as Gene Lockhart, Helen Mack, Ernest Truex, Cliff Edwards, Rosco Karns and Billy Gilbert, in addition to the three principals.

The picture never loses the impetus provided by a flying start, while its comedy and action sequences are so deftly interspersed that it stands on its own feet as a film as modern as tomorrow despite its basis in the Chicago newspaper days of the riotous 1920's.

The Invisible Man Returns

(Universal)

Sequel to "The Invisible Man"

Showmen who remember "The Invisible Man" as one of the more profitable novelty pictures of its time, 1933, will be pleased to know that this sequel is new yardage from the same bolt. It is fully as adroit in production, as expert in workmanship and, according to preview audience reaction, as impressive with regard to exhibition effectiveness. It thrills no less but amuses somewhat more, and it has a happy ending arrived at both logically and with fidelity to the thesis that crime does not pay.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke enjoys top billing, but plays the villain. Vincent Price, whose features are not disclosed until the finale, dominates the picture in the title role. Nan Grey and John Sutton handle secondary roles smartly, well selected members of a large cast sharing well distributed emphasis.

Joe May directed for associate producer Ken Goldsmith and shares story credit with Kurt Siodmak, who in turn shares screen play credit with Lester Cole, all proceeding with proper respect to the original "Invisible Man" by H. G. Wells, of which this is a wholly creditable sequel.

This time the drug which makes a man invisible is administered to an innocent man condemned to death, who, after effecting an escape, sets out to bring the real murderer to justice, an achievement nicely worked out and brought off without bloodshed.

Santa Fe Marshal

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

Harry Sherman, producer, and William Boyd, star, score again with "Santa Fe Marshal," which continues the adventures of "Hopalong Cassidy." In this Paramount release "Cassidy" joins a medicine show in order to enter a lawless town without the inhabitants suspecting he is a United States marshal sent to wipe out a gang preying on payrolls. A mild departure from the usual character depictions of Clarence E. Mulford is the injection of a stronger love interest. Bernadene Hayes is the feminine lead. The companion of "Cassidy" again is played by Russell Hayden.

Marjorie Rambeau enacts the role of woman leader of criminals who accepts "Cassidy" as an ex-convict. He tricks them into committing a crime which brings them to justice after the usual chase and gunfire.

Leslie Selander directed with vigor the screenplay of Harrison Jacobs, who turned out a well rounded job. Joseph W. Engel is associate producer.

Supporting players include Earl Hodgins in an outstanding part as the medicine show leader, Britt Wood, Kenneth Harlan, William Pagan, George Anderson, Jack Rockwell and Eddie Dean.

Slightly Honorable

(United Artists - Wanger)

Coffin Comedy

From the opening title to the final fadeout, Walter Wanger's "Slightly Honorable" is as funny a comedy as ever made in Hollywood, despite the fact that the underlying plot concerns several murders and an attempt by crooked politicians to "frame" an innocent person. It is hilarious, and the dialogue improves many of the situations of the popular novel, "Send Another Coffin," by F. G. Presnell, which forms the basis.

Pat O'Brien, as the young attorney whose first question of any attractive girl he meets is "Are you over 18?"; Edward Arnold, as the politician controlling road-paving graft; Ruth Terry, night club singer who displays indifference concerning lack of apparel; and Broderick Crawford, as the attorney's associate, are the chief characters.

Ken Englund wrote the swiftly moving, punchily told screenplay which sparkles with dialogue. John Hunter Lay and Robert Tallman adapted the novel.

Tay Garnett, who produced and directed the film, took advantage of an opportunity to combine comedy and suspense in correct proportions.

Supporting the leads are Alan Dinehart, Phyllis Brooks, Claire Dodd, Janet Beecher, Douglass Dumbrille, Bernard Nedell, John Sheehan, Willie Best and others.

"Webb" manages to divert suspicion from himself, while striving to find the killer. After a series of adventures, he uncovers the criminal, killing him in the fight.

Brother Rat and a Baby

(Warner-FN)

"Brother Rat" Later On

Much in the way they carried forward the lives of the principals seen in "Four Daughters" into "Four Wives," the Brothers Warner here have carried forward the principal personnel of "Brother Rat," with equivalent result. It is perhaps two years or so after graduation and the young men are variously engaged in trying to make a living, interest centering chiefly on an attempt to get one of them appointed head coach at the military institute of which he is an alumnus.

The cast, as the following list shows, is in the main the same as employed in the first picture. Eddie Albert is again the slow-moving object of his friends' overly enthusiastic assistance, and Wayne Morris is again the too resourceful young man whose well meant plannings complicate the lives of all.

The picture is as swift as the first one, maybe swifter, and some of the humor is as good, some not quite, some better. The baby mentioned in the title figures in the story mainly as accountable for a financial complication arising when he swallows a lady's ring.

John Monks, Jr., and Fred F. Finkelhoffe wrote the screen play, an original, and Ray Enright directed.

Emergency Squad

(Paramount)

Melodrama

This is the one about the girl graduate of a journalism school whose first story lands on page one with a by-line. It is also the one about the heroic work done by the police emergency squad. In putting the two together, the writers, Garnett Weston and Stuart Palmer, working from an original idea by Robert Musel and Michael Raymond, have conspired to have the girl instrumental in unearthing a series of criminally-inspired mine explosions, and to have her marry one of the members of the squad in the final footage.

William Henry, Louise Campbell, Richard Denning, Robert Paige, Anthony Quinn and John Miljan have principal roles in the story, directed by Edward Dmytryk, with Stuart Walker as associate producer.

Music in My Heart

(Columbia)

Comedy with Music

Tony Martin's singing and the music of Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra are the top box office merchandise offered showmen here. Five song numbers by Robert Wright and Chet Forrest are of the right sort for the Martin personality and for screen purposes, a pleasant combination of circumstances resulting in audibly favorable audience reaction to the musical portions of the picture.

The comedy content, the principal ingredient of the story and screen play by James Edward Grant, is spotty but adequate. It is at its best when Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore are on the screen. Rita Hayworth and Edith Fellows handle the feminine side nicely.

Joseph Santley directed the picture in workaday fashion, hitting his best stride with a bit of street music early in the picture. The Kostelanetz orchestra figures prominently in the closing minutes, broadcasting a CBS program with the CBS insignia prominently and repeatedly emphasized.

Tevya

(Maymon Film)

Yiddish Classic

The distinguished Yiddish actor and director, Maurice Schwartz, has done a most noteworthy job of this adaptation of Sholem Aleichem's "Tevya, the Dairyman." His direction and characterization of "Tevya," a Ukrainian Jew and a role he previously has essayed on the Yiddish stage, was obviously a labor of love. It is an artistic achievement that sets a mark for future Yiddish pictures to shoot at. There are English titles.

"Tevya" is a man of the soil, proud of his farm and family and of his religion. He is a self-educated, tolerant man and a good neighbor. But "Tevya" who has lived long and happily suddenly comes on evil days. His younger daughter "Chave" (Miriam Riselle) marries outside the Jewish faith despite parental objections. The marriage casts a pall over "Tevya's" home and is somewhat responsible for the death of "Tevya's" beloved wife. The final blow comes when "Tevya" is forced to leave his farm because of the Czar's pogroms on the Jews.

As the picture ends "Tevya" sets out for other lands with a heavy heart but happy in that his daughter has returned to him, she having been sorely treated by her husband's family.

Reviewed at the Continental theatre, New York. The film was well received.—P. C. MOONEY, JR.

Distributed by Maymon Film, Inc. Produced by Henry Ziskin. Directed by Maurice Schwartz. Based on Sholem Aleichem's "Tevya, the Dairyman." Yiddish dialogue with English titles. Photography, Larry Williams. Music, Sholem Secunda. Running time, 93 minutes. Release date, February 5, 1939. General audience classification.

The Shadow

(Columbia)

Serial Shivers

Transformed from pulp pages and air waves to the screen, the gentleman with that horrendous laugh signature will be dropping in weekly at cinema centers for a period of fifteen weeks and a regular crowd may be expected, if the pace of the first chapters is maintained. It is material for record citation that it was as "The Shadow" of the radio that Mr. Orson Welles did his preparatory work for scaring the daylights out of half a country's air audience one Sunday night in October of 1938 with his broadcast of a Martian invasion. In screen form Victor Jory essays his first chapter role as "The Shadow," besides tackling two subordinate parts as the scientist-crusader, "Lamont Cranston," and the Chinese merchant, "Lin Chang," assignments which act as blinds for the more important business of shadowing a gang of criminals who are beleaguering a city with a reign of terror. The ringleader of this clique is a spooky somebody called "The Black Tiger" who speaks through the electrified head of a cat. The actor playing this part is listed with a triple question mark, which should encourage audience attendance. With Jory in the cast are Veda Ann Borg, Roger Moore, Robert Fiske, Charles Hamilton, and Frank La Rue. James W. Horne directed from the screen play of Joseph Poland, Ned Dandy and Joseph O'Donnell, as based upon stories in "The Shadow" magazine. Release date, Nov. 24, 1939. Running time, 31 minutes first chapter, subsequent 14 chapters two reels each.

Screwball Football

Madcap Merry Melody

A little bit post seasonal as far as pigskin sport is concerned, but nonetheless filled with seven minutes of continuous chuckles, an ingredient that is always timeless, is this Merrie Melodie burlesque of big time gridiron football. Players and spectators are taken for a merry ride of kidding and the whole travesty lives up to the nonsense title of the subject. Sharp edged drawing and cleverly devised sound effects combine to effect one of the breeziest pen point portraits of the season. Collegiate circles and graduate pigskin partisans should derive the most enjoyment from the fun but general audiences should not be far behind in demonstrating their loud and laughing approval. Running time, seven minutes.

Xochimilco

(Atlas Film Exchange)

Traveltour

The floating gardens of Mexico City, playground since the days of the Aztecs, are recorded in the Max Urban production, "Xochimilco." The spirit of the daily carnival of marketing and dancing has been captured by the camera. There is no off-screen commentary, however. The introduction offers a slight but interesting history of Xochimilco.—Running time, 11 minutes.

New Horizons

A Color Parade

Alaska is the directional focus for this Color Parade contribution. As every school boy of American history can testify, this land, when purchased from Russia, received the name of "Seward's Folly." It is part of the business of this miniature to indicate that the buy was not such a spendthrift effort after all. Besides a glance around the Alaskan scenery of mountain and valley variety, there are some sequences detailing the agricultural and industrial life of the region. It should be a bit of a surprise for some spectators to view the country's rich farm lands and the fat, grazing herds at pasture, when the land was supposed to be fit for igloo dwellers and polar bears. In the light of current governmental plans for stocking the arctic outpost as a frontier defense post, the subject should be both timely and entertaining.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Young Tom Edison

Edison, Part I

The biggest news, exhibitor-wise, on "Young Tom Edison" is that its star is young Mickey Rooney, leading money-making star for independent and circuit theatres alike, attested by the latest HERALD-FAME poll.

The picture will have, as a forthcoming companion feature, "Edison, the Man," starring Spencer Tracy, third in the exhibitor poll. What the popular Mr. Rooney does is to take the life of the great inventor through the troubled school days and up to the time when his use of telegraphic code has finally made him a hero instead of the town scapegoat.

Assisting are Virginia Weidler, also teamed with Mickey in "Out West with the Hardys," here appearing as his sister; Fay Bainter, last year's Academy Award winner for her supporting performance in "Jezebel," as his mother; George Bancroft, recently seen in "Rulers of the Sea" and "Each Dawn I Die," as his father; Bobby Jordon, as his arch-enemy, and Victor Kilian, as the opponent's father.

Director Norman Taurog and producer John W. Considine Jr., who created "Boys Town," also worked together here. Taurog's latest pictures were "Lucky Night" and "Broadway Melody of 1940," Considine's were "Stronger than Desire" and "Blackmail."

Release date: To be determined.

Arouse and Beware

(MGM)

That Civil War

The dramatic conflict motivating "Arouse and Beware" is that occasioned by the clash of wills between an idealistic young Union officer and a cynical Union sergeant, both escaping from a Confederate prison camp in the Civil War.

The officer is played by John Howard, most recently seen in "Disputed Passage," while the sergeant is Wallace Beery, lately in "Thunder Afloat." Dolores Del Rio plays the part of a Russian girl who becomes involved in the escape.

Leslie Fenton, director of "Tell No Tales" and "Stronger than Desire," directed from an original story by MacKinlay Kantor. Edward Chodorov, whose two latest pictures were "Spring Madness' and "Tell No Tales," produced.

Release date: Feb. 16, 1940.

The Devil is Yellow

(Universal)

Murder Mystery

Ben Pivar, producing "Rigadoon" at the same time, had charge of "The Devil is Yellow" as well. Based on a novel by Frederick P. Davis, the screenplay was written by Harold Buchman and Roy Chanslor. The former collaborated on "The Forgotten Woman" and wrote "Hero for a Day," while the latter collaborated on "The Road to Reno" and wrote "The Devil's Party."

Directing was Phil Rosen, as he did on "Missing Evidence" and "Ex-Champ."

Wayne Morris is cast as an engineer who is suspected of his wife's murder, but ends up by solving the mystery. Playing opposite him is Margaret Lindsay, last seen in "Honeymoon Deferred."

The cast includes William Gargan, Roscoe Karns, Robert Emmett Keane and James Burke.

Release date: To be determined.

Referee Orders GN Liquidation; Trustee Named

Liquidation of Grand National was ordered Friday by Referee Peter B. Olney, and Harry Fromberg was appointed trustee in bankruptcy. This action resulted from the failure of Grand National to obtain a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or other funds for reorganization. The Creditors Committee unanimously voted to refuse the company permission to continue in operation to stop the $4,000 weekly loss.

Grand National's application for a $450,000 loan, according to Saul E. Rogers, GN attorney, was rejected because the Commission held the company had not demonstrated that the loan and other funds would enable the company to operate profitably. Grand National officials also attributed the action to representations made by small creditors that the company had no prospects of getting product on short notice to offset current operating losses.

Up to the last minute Grand National, led by E. W. Hammons, Educational-Grand National president, did everything to obtain financing and product. Negotiations were begun for immediate release of product of Producers Laboratories. J. T. Cosman, head of that company, had put up a certified check for $4,000 to help Grand National obtain a further postponement but the sum was withdrawn. Mr. Cosman's attorney said, "Too many objections have been raised by creditors and there will be trouble in carrying out any plan offered for the company."

Another attempt to help Grand National was made, just before the liquidation order, by Leon Bergere, who at a former GN hearing had identified himself as a representative of foreign financial interests and was a representative of MGM in Eastern Europe. Mr. Bergere said he had a plan under which a partial payment would be made to creditors and another attempt made to obtain a loan from the RFC.

Grand National ceased operations Wednesday when Harry Fromberg, trustee appointed by the court, discharged approximately 100 employees and closed the New York office. Fixtures and furniture of the New York office will be auctioned next Tuesday on Referee Peter Olney's order.

The bulk of the assets are expected not to be sold at auction but directly to some large concern. Joseph Danneberg, attorney for the creditors committee and named attorney for the trustee, refused to reveal on Wednesday what companies were bidding for the properties. The Underwriters Salvage Company will handle the sales.

Mr. Hammons, former head of the company, said this week that he might return to producing shorts if he could release through a large company.

Flora Finch Dies; Silent Film Star

Flora Finch, an outstanding comedienne of the silent motion picture, died January 4th at Good Samaritan Hospital, in Hollywood. At the time of her death Miss Finch was a stock player at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, drawing a regular salary for bit, extra and atmosphere roles.

Born in England, Miss Finch was educated in English private schools and began her stage career with the Sir Philip Ben Greet Players, although she had some music hall experience, too.

She began screen work with the old Biograph studios in New Jersey about 1907, a year earlier than D. W. Griffith. Under Mr. Griffith's direction she was the leading comedienne in the first comedy series called the Jones pictures. In 1910 she shifted to the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn. John Bunny, a top ranking stage comedian, shortly after joined the studio and he and Miss French were paired in a comedy called "The New Stenographer."

The comedy was so popular that more followed. After Mr. Bunny's death in 1915 Miss Finch returned to Biograph and in 1917 she formed her own company, Flora Finch Films. At the same time she started one of the earliest fan magazines. Her company lasted only a few years and she dropped into obscurity.

In 1924 she appeared in Hollywood and obtained bit parts in various films. A few of these were "Brown Darby," "The Cat and the Canary," "Quality Street," "Come Across" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which starred Marion Davies. One of her last pictures was "Sweet Kitty Bellairs."

Funeral services were held at Pierce Brothers Hollywood Chapel Monday with interment at Hollywood Cemetery.

IN COURTS

Tri-States Named in Sioux City Action

Tri-States Theatre Corporation and the Affiliated Theatres, Inc., have been named in a $20,258 suit filed in Sioux City, Ia., by P. H. Gelfand and Jack Gelfand, owners of the Garden Theatre at Sioux City. They charge the circuits with a conspiracy to deprive the Garden Theatre of business. The plan, it was claimed, was instigated in 1936.

The Gelfands ask $15,000 exemplary damages and $5,258 actual loss. They charge that when Bank Nights were started in Sioux City, they and several other theatre owners agreed to increase the admission price, but the Garden alone did so, and under compulsion.

Seek Suit Dismissal

Educational Films Company, Ltd., and Canadian Educational Films Company, Ltd., filed application in New York this week to dismiss the $10,000,000 stockholders suit of F. Regnault Fairchild for lack of jurisdiction. The application does not affect the suit against Educational Pictures and Grand National Pictures, other defendants named, on charges of waste and dissipation of assets.

Denies Paramount Application

Edward A. Conger, federal judge, in New York this week denied an application of Paramount Pictures to dismiss the stockholders' suit of Frank Jablow and Sam Acker which claims mismanagement by Paramount officials in transactions with American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc. Judge Conger, however, ordered the plaintiffs to file a bill of particulars to clarify parts of the complaint.

Drop Carnevale Action

A stipulation was filed in New York supreme court this week discontinuing the suit of John C. E. Carnevale for $500,000 damages against RKO Radio Pictures, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Columbia Broadcasting System, Jesse L. Lasky, Will H. Hays and the William Wrigley, Jr., Company. Mr. Carnevale had claimed misappropriation of his idea in the radio program, "Gateway to Hollywood."

Affirm Eureka Dismissal

The United States circuit court of appeals in New York this week affirmed a decision which had dismissed the suit of Eureka Productions, Inc., against Raymond J. Mulligan, former United States Marshal, for $5,300 damages claiming illegal confiscation of the film "Ecstasy." The dismissal had been directed by Edward Conger, federal judge, last June after a jury trial.

Hays Sues on "Harvest"

Arthur Garfield Hays through Frederic Griffin, an assignee, this week filed suit in New York against French Cinema Center for $500, which he claims is due him for legal services rendered in obtaining the approval of the New York Board of Regents for the showing of the motion picture, "Harvest," after its ban by the state Board of Motion Picture Censors. Andre R. Heymann, president of the French Cinema Center, distributor of the film, contends that Mr. Hays was not retained by his company but that Mr. Hays appeared in behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, who voluntarily took up the defense of the film. Mr. Hays is legal counsel for the Union.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BEWARE SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—Another smash hit from this man Columbia. They certainly have it on the balance of the producers when it comes to making good comedies. The spook house sequence was about the best we have had in our house in some time. It had them rolling in the aisles. Excellent. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Gentlemen, here is a knockout. About tops is this offering from Columbia in our situation. Good for any day of the week and it certainly wows them. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Ran it with 'Coast Guard" which made a good variety for double billing. Played November 19-21.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

COAST GUARD: Ralph Bellamy, Randolph Scott, Frances Dee, Walter Connolly—Drew fairly good business for Sunday and well liked. Ran it with "Blondie Takes a Vacation," which made a good variety for double billing. Played November 19-21. —E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

KONGA, THE WILD STALLION: Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson—Not a big picture but a good action show that grossed slightly over average business. Well worth playing. Played December 15-16.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Claude Rains, Eugene Pallette—And what entertainment this piece is. Capra never misses.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller —This is still the great picture it was when first released and will continue to be for years to come and it has an ending that just hits the spot that "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" lacks. Far be it from me to try to dim any of the lustre of this picture but after we have suffered with the hero as we have done with "Mr. Smith," we expect to be rewarded somewhat when he triumphs in the end. The least Mr. Capra could have done was to permit us to see "Mr. Smith" get the honors that his home town would bestow upon him. Now, in "You Can't Take It With You," after their troubles were all over, you see them feasting at the table and with proper gestures and speech gives it an ending worthy of a grand picture, but in "Mr. Smith" as soon as there is the sign that his troubles are over, bang, "the end" flashes on the screen.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A splendid, timely picture which pleased everyone. Did good business. Garfield is much better in this than in "Four Daughters." Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Jacqualin Carter, New Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A great picture enjoyed by all who saw it. Lane and Garfield click in any picture to make it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 17-19.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small town and college patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—A swell show. Our patrons went hook, line and sinker. Warner pictures have been the answer to exhibitor prayers and they are still going strong with the grand features scheduled for early release.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
Rockefeller Center, New York

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan, Louise Fazenda, Cecilia Loftus—An excellent production, the only criticism being some thought it too sad. Bette Davis gives a superb performance, I think her best. Her makeup deserves special mention, for one almost sees her grow old. The supporting cast is fine, Louise Fazenda and Cecilia Loftus being very good while Jane Bryan is fine in an unsympathetic role. Very good production in every way. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 30-December 3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Grand National

PANAMA PATROL: Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters—This picture has no action and is so weak I'm surprised the audience sat through it. Guess they were waiting to see the second feature. Played December 13-14.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—I did better than average holiday business on this one. Mickey brought them in but Judy stole this from Mickey. This should definitely bring Miss Garland to the top. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 24-26.—Al. Lienhardt, New Glarus Theatre, New Glarus, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds, Ian Hunter, Guy Kibbee—This is a very good show. Good is right for it has a fine religious background. Cast is good. Ian Hunter giving an outstanding performance, Guy Kibbee tops, as always, while Virginia Weidler is certainly one of the coming stars. This is not quite big enough to stand alone in most situations but is a very pleasing production. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 15-17.—Gladys E. McArdle. Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—No one could be as dumb as Stewart pretends to be and have a cute trick like Claudette Colbert fall for him. However, the picture was full of laughs and is good entertainment. Did good business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Jacqualin Carter, New Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr—Hedy Lamarr is sweet and does a splendid job of acting. Robert Taylor is an unconvincing lover and playboy. Pleased the younger set that admire Taylor. Business below average. Running time, 91 minutes.—Jacqualin Carter, New Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Victor McLaglen, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee—A real swell outdoor action drama. Nelson Eddy's singing seemed a natural part of the story and the patriotic angle worked in did not get in the way of the story. In fact, it helped it and the wind up with "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" was a grand climax to a swell picture. Business a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Lew Ayres, Greer Garson—Good picture; fair business. Robert Taylor don't draw any more. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Lew Ayres, Greer Garson—They will remember it alright as one of the mistakes of Metro and a bad break for Greer Garson in her first picture after "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." I understand Fidler panned the living life out of it and for once I agreed with him.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Lew Ayres, Greer Garson—The best Taylor picture in months. In fact, the entire case is perfection in a story that is entirely different. Audience reaction is excellent. We suggest it be played your best playing time as it is worth all you can give it. Have seen some poor comments but our reaction is the tops. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Bille Burke, Margaret Hamilton—I think the highest praise I can give this picture is to say it is as good as the press book says it is. Personally, I do not like this type of show and expected to be bored but it is so good in every way no one can help liking it. The Kansas cyclone was so realistic it made us wonder if our cellars were in good order, while the color is the best I have ever seen. Music is excellent. Had been shown in three surrounding towns so a great many had seen it. If one can play it fairly early, it should do outstanding business. Running time, 134 minutes. Played December 8-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THE WOMEN: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Phyllis Povah, Marjorie Main—Well, Leo is always trying something new and now it is a manless show. The cast is superb, acting beyond criticism, photography and recording good but it lacks something. Guess it must be men. It is a great deal too long for that type show. Cut to about ninety minutes it would be a wow but it gets decidedly boring after about an hour. Norma Shearer gives her usual charming performance, do not think I ever saw Joan Crawford in a better role, Rosalind Russell almost steals the show and Phyllis Povah is a riot. Of course, I must not forget that bright little starlet, Virginia Weidler. Marjorie Main is great. The animals shown in the introduction is a mighty clever innovation. The fight between Russell and Paulette Goddard is great. Altogether it is excellent but too long. Now, please, do not make a picture without any women, Metro. One a year as unusual as this one is all we poor exhibitors in the dust bowl can stand. Running time, 134 minutes. Played December 22-25.—Gladys E. McArdle. Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

GRAND JURY'S SECRET: John Howard, Gail Patrick—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played December 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

CALLING ALL MARINES: Donald Barry, Helen Mack, Warren Hymer—Good action picture; good business on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 66 minutes. Played December 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Picture did good business but isn't nearly as funny as their other picture. Story is insuperable and far fetched. Plenty of action for action fans and swing music for "them as likes it." Running time, 69 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Jacqualin Carter, New Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Full of good comedy and well liked but the poorest draw in months. Perhaps, too near Christmas. Played December 10-12.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—This little girl is a comer. A nice, pleasing show that gave the customers their money's worth. Play this one by all means.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Ginger as usual is grand. Walter Connolly is excellent in his role. This one grossed above average in spite of pre-holiday slump. Ginger is tops with patrons in our towns.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—It's a pleasure to play pictures of this type. Our patrons went big for this one. One of the most satisfactory grosses of the year. More pictures of this calibre is the answer to box office ills. RKO is certainly coming through as never before.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—Good picture; good business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Richard Dix, Gladys George—Millions may have acclaimed him according to the press sheet but, if they give Greene any more like this one, he will be in the ash can. So will the exhibitor that runs it. I have seen worse but not lately.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—The same old hackneyed story dressed up in color. Little girl goes to Hollywood with all the trials and tribulations to make good. I would not even guess how many times this particular theme has been the origin of a picture but I do know that this seemed to be one too many.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—A good detective story. The plot is well sustained and thrillingly worked out to a satisfactory climax. Business on this was not up to par. Maybe the title scared some of the ladies away.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville—Crude comedy but some folks seemed to enjoy it. However, I didn't take in film rental. Cold and stormy weather on this one. Played December 27-28.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—This is a grand picture but it seems to me that 20th Century is losing its appeal with the public insofar as pictures are concerned. Weekend business was below average but then let's give it a break by saying it's competition that held it down at the box office. Running time. 103 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Al. Lienhardt, New Glarus Theatre, New Glarus, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—People did not care much for this show and attendance was very poor. Should have been placed in lowest bracket for my town. Played December 3-5.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson—Musicals as a rule with us do not do business. Nelson Eddy, Durbin fail us. But this picture did real good business and was thoroughly enjoyed by all, making it a very Merry Xmas for everyone including the proprietor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—A very entertaining picture. Stories about Hollywood for the most part have been disappointing but in this they had a likeable story and good Berlin music, some swell comedy and a satisfying amount of Sonja Henie's skating. In my opinion, if they make more of this star's pictures and limit her skating, it would be like making corn beef and cabbage and leave out the corn beef. Folks don't tire of real, swell dancing. You don't put Nelson Eddy in a picture and prevent him singing. Why limit Sonja Henie doing what she does so well. Folks expect her to skate. Business on this was a fair average for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Personally we all thought this very outstanding but it did only normal business. It is one of the things in the show business you say: "I don't know what they want, if they don't turn out for this one."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—We have always enjoyed good business on Shirley but this one failed us. We're beginning to think she's losing her draw. Business only normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—The picture was O.K. but business was not so O.K. It seems that many movie goers just stay away from history pictures. By staying away from this, they as much as said: "Oh, we know enough about Lincoln without paying money to see more about Lincoln." It is to be regretted that so fine a picture should have been missed by so many of our patrons.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson—This is positively one of the best pictures in years. If you haven't played it, go back and pick it up at a fair price, then, advertise it strong and don't fail to see it yourself. That Louis Hayward is a real actor. Played November 5-7.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—Who the dickens is this "They" that shall have music? It isn't the audience because there isn't any. It isn't the exhibitor because after he digs for film rental and expenses there isn't any music of money jingling in his jeans. The picture is excellent for a violin student studying technique for the picture is a series of closeups from every angle showing Heifetz's perfect fingering. The school music supervisor, the band master, the local piano teacher and one or two with tastes like wine will want to see and hear Heifetz. Buy them a ticket to his next concert and spare yourself the expense and unpleasant time of sitting in an empty theatre listening to this badly recorded music. It's a poor picture; poor entertainment, poor recording and poor business in spite of the wonderful Heifetz. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 10-11.—Jacqualin Carter, New Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy, Robert Stack—This girl certainly brings results. She gets better all along. Book this one and pay off the mortgage. Universal, you're doing a fine job of it for us this year and they've got a lot of good coming all along.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings—Deanna Durbin always drew a pretty good crowd until this came along. I was very disappointed as it did not draw average business for Sunday. However, fairly good picture. Played November 26-28.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, C. Aubrey Smith—Played this late. Audience went for this one. Gloria Jean will replace D. Durbin as the top grosser from Universal this coming year. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 18-19.—Al. Lienhardt, New Glarus Theatre, New Glarus, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—The best entertainment in any spot. Nothing more can be said; if you miss playing this one, you are the loser. Running time, 10 reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—A prestige picture for the producer and a headache for an exhibitor. Revolution, firing squads, the leading figure that the onlookers learned to like executed in the end. Our second days receipts told us what those who saw it the first night thought of it. They must have told their friends to stay away, which they did.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Very beautiful picture but audience did not appreciate this one both at box office and those that attended. Running time, 106 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Al. Lienhardt, New Glarus Theatre, New Glarus, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—A fusty old story of a queen that I doubt if anyone in our audience even had the remotest knowledge of her career and the preponderance of dialogue and so little action made it a miss as far as our audience were concerned. The acting was topnotch. But, it is just one of those pictures that must be charged off onto the prestige side of the ledger and save me, oh Lord, from another one. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—A wonderful show from production standpoint but why give us this stuff? Our patrons just wouldn't accept it, even in spite of weak opposition.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Jim Cagney and Priscilla Lane do their stuff in this one and it's a grand piece of entertainment. Played against tough opposition and ran away with the business. It's great to be a Warner account in these trying times.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—A thrilling show of the Birds of the American Navy. This one will either drag them into the Flying Services or scare them out. Good propaganda for the flying Corps, especially at this time when Canada is recruiting for these branches of the service. Plenty of action and good photography. Recommend it. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 30.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

RATTLING ROMEO: Broadway Comedies—Charlie Chase well liked here. Columbia knows their comedies.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CULINARY CARVING: Pete Smith Specialities—We had just played "Let's Talk Turkey" and then this one is too much on the art of cutting food. Plenty of comedy made this better than average. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAD FOR A DAY: Our Gang—Some laughs but by far the poorest Gang comedy I ever ran. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Am sure James FitzPatrick could not make a poor traveltalk and this is a very interesting description of the San Francisco Fair. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FAILURE AT FIFTY, A: MGM Miniatures—These Miniatures are all good and this one is excellent dealing in the early life of Lincoln. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—Another excellent cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MENDELSSOHN'S WEDDING MARCH: MGM Miniatures—Here is a short that deserves the best play dates, especially if you want to build up a weak feature. FitzPatrick again shows his artistry in this outstanding short. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY: Cartoons—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUAINT ST. AUGUSTINE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Just play this series for complete satisfaction. No comment can be given. Just tops. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialities—New bowling alleys were opened in this city about two months ago. So, with a little push this short brought quite a few extra bucks to a weaker program. Running time, nine minutes.—Al. Lienhardt, New Glarus Theatre, New Glarus, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BATTLE FLEETS OF ENGLAND: March of Time, No. 2—As a loyal British subject, you can bet your last dollar we were very proud of this subject. So proud we had a special show for all the kids and the Canadian legion. After seeing this, it should eliminate any skepticism that may arise. Thank you, RKO, for such a fine subject. We're more than proud to be playing these short subjects and looking forward to the playing of the one on Canada's part in the great war.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DONALD'S LUCKY DAY: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of the best of this series and Donald Duck is tops in the cartoon field.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARNYARD EGG-CITEMENT: Terry-Toons—When you play this one, you'll begin to realize there are others that can make cartoons as well as Disney's. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ICE POND, THE: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: I surely like this news. There is plenty of variety for everyone and the action scenes follow each other so swiftly and cleverly that it leaves nothing to be desired in a newsreel.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

SAND HOGS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very interesting. Well worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SKY FIGHTERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Good subject on airplanes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRING BEAN JACK: Terry-Toons—One of the best cartoons to come from Fox for many months. Don't be afraid to run it anytime and it's all in color.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Factory and mining patronage.

Vitaphone

BROADWAY BUCKAROO: Broadway Brevities—Red Skelton does a nice job. Fine entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—Tops in cartoons. This series has certainly made an about face in the new contract. We have not had a poor one from this company so far this season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT FUN: Merrie Melodies—Fine cartoon in color. Running time, one reel. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PORKY THE GIANT KILLER: Looney Tunes—A cartoon they forgot to finish. This is a bunch of junk. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SONS OF LIBERTY: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Every theatre should show this one. The hardships of our forefathers, their trials and tribulations encountered should be a lesson to us all.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

VAUDEVILLE INTERLUDE: Vitaphone Varieties—Three acts of vaudeville with one out of three worth mentioning made this a poor subject. Skip it.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A truly great band short. Do not

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Round Tablers Write An Editorial

"Just as publicity sells your merchandise, personal publicity sells the individual."

That's a quote from A. Kent Craig's letter, in last week's book. The manager of the Capitol, in St. Catherines, Ontario, was crediting his participating in Round Table activities for recent promotions. The resulting publicity in these pages had much to do with it, according to Craig.

The beginning of a new year is a good time to point out something to those readers who follow this department but have no part in keeping it rolling. The "something" is that wallflowers cash in less and a whole lot later than members who are being heard. It's a cinch that's true. Craig's case happens to be one of the many to prove it. Other letters in the same issue offer similar evidence.

Round Tabler W-Clyde Smith, for instance. Smith has been a consistent contributor for a neat span of years, during which time he has risen to the post of City Manager for Malco, in Hot Springs, Ark. Clyde credits his part in Round Table work for several advancements. In addition, he writes:

"Managers who fail to display their ability are neglecting an opportunity to acquaint the industry with their value. The Quigley Competitions are the show windows for displays of theatre managers' talents. . . . Numbers of showmen come here from all parts of the country and most of them call on me stating they know me through Round Table activities."

Now General Manager of the Pal Theatres, Vidalia, Georgia, Hobson Johnson bows in this direction for a hand up to the big job. This regular contributor writes: "The Round Table is the 'front page' to progressive showmen."

Regardless of how talented a star may be, it's the publicity buildup that makes for boxoffice fame. Theatremen know how that is done. They help to do it. If the procedure is successful in putting over the star, the same principle works in case of the manager. That's the job your Round Table does, a job that also has the backing of the bossman. Thus, from J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president, Famous Players Canadian, the following:

"We consider the Round Table of Motion Picture Herald one of the most stimulating factors in encouraging the managers of our circuit to work out merchandising and exploitation ideas, for the reason that the managers who are anxious to improve their position have a first-class medium to publicize their efforts and to benefit from the efforts of their fellow managers who are smart enough to take advantage of the opportunity given them to participate."

Members who have been recognized through their Round Table publicity will not object if we say that there are fellow-managers as able who are still to make the grade. Executives are only human. When men of equal abilities are in line for promotion, it has happened that the lad who has won praise from outside sources gets the nod. Mr. Fitzgibbons' letter indicates as much as do other communications in our files.

The old fear of "three-sheeting" should be completely scouted by now. Managers who are allowed to contribute but do not do so because of excessive modesty will take heart in the change of opinion from A. J. Kalberer, City Manager for M. Switow & Sons, in Washington, Ind.

"We have never been much on 'three sheeting' ourselves," writes Kal, "but since submitting material for the Round Table have overcome much of this feeling. Our employers have been quick to recognize Quarter-Master Medal and Citation in the form of sincere congratulations. We feel sure that our Awards will help us when the opportunity for promotion comes along."

Whatever bearing they have on the case is up to the theatreman himself to decide. But these facts are to be pointed out:

Of all promotions reported here, the greatest majority concern active contributing members.

Of those seeking jobs through this department, the majority are not active contributing members.

Of those seeking jobs, members who have been active contributors find it less difficult to connect with a satisfactory market for their talents.

Governor Endorses 'Drunk' Campaign For Circuit Drive

The exploitation of "Drunk Driving" as a circuit campaign in which various managers cooperated, was found profitable by the Loew New England theatres, the main promotions used widely to put over the dates. Topping the drive was a special screening for Governor Baldwin of Connecticut together with traffic officials and representatives of various insurance companies. As a result, the Governor's personal press representative wrote up a special release. In view of the fact that the Governor is interested in a "drive safely" campaign, he went on the air in Hartford and urged all to see the short.

An additional screening was held for the Southern New England Telephone Company, which brought special bulletin board announcements using the Governor's recommendation as the basis and ordered them placed on every bulletin board in their offices throughout the State. Space was left on announcement for local theatre name and playdates. Company officials also urged employees to see the picture.

Using the Governor's statement, a special trailer was made and run week in advance, and original letter was blown up for lobby display, and currently used outside. All newspaper readers plugged the picture.

Shannon's "Error" Contest

On what he chooses to call a "Find the Error" contest in conjunction with the lobby setpiece at the Brookline Theatre, in Brookline, Penna., Manager Chuck Shannon each week offers tickets to patrons detecting some error in the displays. One week it may be an inverted photo, another may be a photo not pertaining to the current show. All is designed to draw attention to the current as well as coming attractions, newspapers cooperate with gratis notices and stories.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS SELL COMING DATE

Seasonal greetings that sold the coming date were incorporated in the campaign for "Another Thin Man" at the Capitol, Calgary, Canada, with a decorated card distributed to patrons. Card read: "William Powell, Myrna Loy and Another Thin Man who are my guests for the week of December 25th, join me in extending to you the compliments of the Season."

Card was signed by F. Tickell, publicity director, who originated the stunt.

For his advance on "Elizabeth and Essex" at the Boyd Theatre, in Philadelphia, Everett C. Callow, director of advertising and publicity for the Warner Theatres in that sector distributed score cards at the leading university football games; reverse side carrying world premiere, date, time, theatre and picture plug. The Screen Guild Show, a coast-to-coast program was contacted to salute the opening of the picture. Highlight of his outside activities was the planting of title in electric lights on the city hall.

Postcards were mailed to all women's clubs signed by the President of the Motion Picture Forum and the Phila. Federation of Women's Clubs and Allied organizations. Girls from the Model's Guild were used in the lobby opening night dressed in Elizabethan costumes, distributing parchment scrolls signed by Bette Davis and Errol Flynn as a memento. Radio coverage included spot announcements over WIP, WDAS, WFIL, WABC, WTEL, WIBG and WHAT, in addition to an inquiring radio reporter stunt, on street.

Morton Uses Window Cards As "Deuces" Postcards

Bill Morton of the RKO Albee, Providence, R. I., put his window cards for "The Flying Deuces" to a unique use, addressing these to the theatre mailing list and placing them on top of mail boxes where they could be seen for some distance. As soon as they were picked up by the mailman, another set was mailed. A letter was sent with each card to the effect that if the card was brought to the theatre unfolded, passes would be awarded. Those who turned in window cards were permitted to keep them and carried along, they again served as a street bally.

Double Truck Promoted By Grundy on "Ninotchka"

Two weeks in advance of "Ninotchka" at the Strand in Muncie, Ind., Manager Melvin B. Grundy used teaser ads in local dailies, winding up with double truck, sold entirely by the theatreman tied up with "Garbo laughs." In return, Mel received streamer head, story and theatre ad gratis.

Jumbo window cards were used in surrounding territory, special lobby board was made up of pictures of Garbo laughing and clippings. Special art was planted in the society section of the Muncie Star opening day and special "Ninotchka" folders were distributed in all office buildings.

In addition, Pat received a gratis ad in the football program and the school reported an increase in their sales of the programs.

Gooch also took orders from all and gave them photos of Gene Autry, star of his Friday and Saturday western. Entire cost was rental of Kris Kringle's costume and Gooch reports the children's reaction and attendance well worth the effort involved.

"Schiners" Obtain Thorough Coverage For House Opening

Aimed at patronage in towns within a 30-mile radius was the comprehensive campaign put over for the opening of the new Paris, in Paris, Ky., by "Schiners" Lew Hensler, district manager, and John Makemson, manager. Well in advance, teaser window cards with "watch for" copy were planted over the drawing area, the same copy run across bottom of the regular three sheets. Jumbo cards carrying dates and policy copy were also used, as was additional posting with the same information. Large banner was hung across front week ahead followed with marquee copy carrying opening programs. Decorated sound truck made the drawing area for two days ahead and trailers run in other local Schine houses called attention to the opening.

All rural delivery routes were covered with postcards to boxholders and heralds distributed house-to-house. Papers in the radius carried copy and ad campaigns stressed in the two bi-weekly papers culminated in co-op pages in both, ahead and on opening day. Tieins were distinguished by front-page publicity detailing all the highlights of the new theatre, opening program, etc.

Mayor Addresses Guests

For the opening, congratulatory wires were obtained from various of the stars in Hollywood. These were posted on a 40 by 60 in the foyer. Added lobby decoration took the form of floral displays. On opening night, local drum corps paraded to theatre which was lighted up by special spots. Inaugural program included addresses by the Mayor and City Attorney, followed by talk from Makemson. Another standout promotion was a congratulatory wire from over 100 local merchants, addressed to the manager and staff, which was blown up and used for lobby display purposes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Samartano's "Smith" Ballots

Printed along the same lines as his city election ballots, which played coincident with his opening of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Joe Samartano at the Poli-Palace, Meriden, Conn., distributed these heralds along the streets, placed them under windshield wipers of parked cars, at all political rallies, etc. Copy on ballots read: "Vote regular entertainment policy, it's non-partisan. For Senator, the man of the hour." etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Harwell's Music Contest

NEW NAMES ADDED TO COMMITTEE

TED SCHLANGER

Zone Manager
Warner Bros. Circuit, Philadelphia

Accepting your invitation to become a member of the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards is like starting the New Year right. I shall be happy to serve again.

These Awards have a definite place in the industry, and knowing how anxious the men in the Philadelphia Zone are to win these Awards makes me cognizant of their value.

HARRY F. SHAW

Division Manager
Poli-New England Loew's Theatres

Many thanks for the honor you have bestowed upon me in appointing me to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

It has always been my sincere belief that the Quigley Awards have been the greatest incentive for competition that the Motion Picture Industry has. I am sure the men in my division feel the same as I do regarding same.

DAVID E. WESHNER

District Manager
Warner Bros. Circuit
Philadelphia, Pa.

Glad indeed to accept again appointment to the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

How can I refuse when the fact is that the Quigley Awards represent the finest spark-plug that the industry affords for sustained exploitation and showmanship efforts on the part of wide-awake managers throughout the country.

F. J. A. McCARTHY

Sales Manager
Universal Pictures, Inc.

I shall be very happy to act on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

LOUIS S. LIFTON

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Monogram Pictures Corp.

The Quigley Awards are unique in the industry and serve as a mine of practical information as well as an important incentive to theatremen who are really interested in their jobs. In establishing your annual competition you have built up a fine tradition of genuine usefulness.

NAT HOLT

Division Manager
RKO Cleveland Zone Theatres

I have your letter of December 8th, and will be glad to accept an appointment on your Judging Committee.

I consider the awards most valuable in stimulating keener interest amongst managers, and it certainly must call for the awakening of pride in the mind of every sincere theatre operator.

HARRY M. KALMINE

Zone Manager
Warner Bros. Circuit
Pittsburgh, Pa.

I shall be very glad to accept your invitation to continue to serve on the Judging Committee of the 1940 Quigley Awards. I still feel these awards are of prime value in stimulating managers toward smarter and more comprehensive showmanship.

HOWARD DIETZ

Director Advertising & Publicity
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Since you wish me to serve as a judge in the Round Table competition, I hereby accept the invitation.

I believe these awards have demonstrated particularly that well planned, original exploitation campaigns add to the box-office. That the competition should involve exhibitors only, in my opinion, is as it should be. The exhibitor after all is a local force and it is up to him to not only apply the suggestions that are provided but also to create angles which nobody could conceive of from a distance.

ALBERT DEANE

Director of Foreign Advertising and Publicity
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

I have been a Quigley Award fan for many years. Believing from the outset that it has been one of the most constructive forces for the advancement of practical and profitable film exploitation, I have encouraged to the limits of my position with Paramount the design, execution and submission of exploitation campaigns on Paramount Pictures from the nethermost corners of the globe. Some of these campaigns have won the top-flight prizes in the Quigley Contest, all have earned recognition for the exploiteers, publicity men and theatre managers responsible for them. The fact that several of these men have won deserved promotions because of the increased theatre business due to their Quigley Awards entries alone is magnificent justification for the perpetual continuance of the Award.

M. J. CULLEN

Division Manager
Loew's, Columbus, Ohio

I will be very happy to serve on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards.

I think your idea, from the very start, has been an inspiration to all managers in putting the extra push on all their campaigns.

NAT WOLF

Division Manager
Warner Bros. Circuit
Cleveland, Ohio

I will consider it an honor and a privilege to be on the Judging Committee for the 1940 Quigley Awards. Thanks very much for selecting me as one of this committee.

ARTHUR L. MAYER

Director
Rialto Theatre, New York

I will be happy to again act as one of the judges of the Quigley Awards. To ascertain my opinion of these competitions, please revert to letters which I have written to you in the past years, multiply by six, divide by one and you have my straight and conservative judgment.

HARRY E. LONG

Division Manager
Loew's, Cleveland, Ohio

It pleases me immensely to learn that you wish to again add my name to the list of Judges for the 1940 Quigley Awards Committee. Rest assured it is a real pleasure.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Numerous window displays were secured by Round Tabler Leo Rosen in advance of "Drums Along the Mohawk" at the Troy, in Troy, New York, foremost of which was window tieup in leading lending library which featured copies of the book. Background of window was devoted to blowups of scene stills.

Securing letter of endorsement from the Mayor on "Stanley and Livingstone," assistant manager James Wertz at the Strand in Greensburg, Pa. received space on all school bulletin boards and free mailing list from Boy Scouts. Also featured by the theatreman and directed at the Scouts and local boys clubs was an essay contest, prizes going to those submitting best letters on what equipment they would have taken with them had they joined the search for Dr. Livingstone.

Opening day of "Daughters Courageous" at the Varsity Theatre, in Lincoln, Neb., W. B. Knight ran his co-op page, each merchant's ad containing cut of one of the girls or scene still from picture. Through tieup with local spark plug dealers, tinted autographed photos of the sisters were distributed, ad on reverse side and entire cost being defrayed by stores.

Under the title "El Mago De Oz," did Hal Winston sell his date on "The Wizard of Oz" at the Metro Theatre, in Santurce, Puerto Rico, with double truck co-op ads in leading papers which ran four days ahead in addition to a full page devoted to the picture. Special preview was held for all school principals, numerous window displays secured and a half-hour gratis radio broadcast landed over WNEL, sponsored by the Escambron Beach Club. In addition an "Oz" dance was held at the club with promoted prizes awarded winners of an "Oz" dance.

Highlighting the celebration of Asbury Park's "Football Night" at the St. James Theatre, Manager M. H. Marshall presented from stage a trophy to winning team. Ward Wilson, of radio fame, was master of ceremonies. Other members of the squad, school band and cheerleaders were guests of the management. Band played school songs and cheer-leaders led the gathering. Stunt was covered by local papers which were generous with their theatre plugs.

Paper Uses "Quiz" Contest For "That's Right, You're Wrong"

A contest designed to provide theatre and picture with daily newspaper publicity and at the same time to give the public data on essential factors of "That's Right, You're Wrong" was worked out between Manager Claire Woods of the Paramount and the Salt Lake City Telegram, the City's leading evening newspaper.

The Telegram published three questions daily dealing with "That's Right, You're Wrong" and through a coupon the readers were asked to answer them, marking right or wrong, and at the same time submit three new questions relating to the Kyser musical show for the next day's issue. The person who submitted the three questions to be used was given $5 in cash with a grand prize of $10 for the best three questions submitted during the contest.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Invites Consul General To "Torpedoed" Opening

Addressing a letter to Great Britain's Consul General, Hugh Alexander Ford, in nearby Boston, Manager Bernard Stewart of the Gorman Theatre, in Framingham, Mass., invited His Honor to attend his opening of "Torpedoed." While the invitation was not accepted, the cordial letter of regrets received by the theatreman was used for publicity purposes, local papers printing the letter together with plugs for the picture.

Local merchants cooperated with Stewart on "Babes in Arms" by featuring window displays on the picture and offering merchandise awards to those sending in their names, addresses and photos of themselves, if they felt they recognized any Hollywood star. Contest enabled theatreman to also pick a Rooney double, whom he used for his street bally, local dailies covering the stunt with stories and photos.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Novak Aids Government In Emergency Problem

With a national emergency problem in the Province of B. C. due to the fruit growers being unable to sell their apple crop to Europe this fall, Bill Novak at the Capitol in Regina, Saskatchewan, joined in the campaign to dispose of the fruit by proposing an apple packing demonstration on his stage. Cabinet ministers introduced the drive and enlisted the public's support to help the farmers, etc.

In addition to gaining much good will from both the apple distributors and government officials, Novak was donated about 5,000 apples for distribution to patrons during the two-day drive as a courtesy of the theatre and apple growers. Two daily newspapers and radio stations aided.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Dresses Staff for "Right"

Special setpiece was created for the lobby of the Palace, in Canton, Ohio, for "That's Right, You're Wrong," consisting of giant cutout of Kay Kyser standing in front of back drop containing musical scores and gag cartoons. Entire staff was dressed in cap and gowns for the occasion ahead and during run.

(1) To emphasize the romantic thief background of "Raffles" at the United Artists, San Francisco, Charlie Schlaifer selected atmospheric shot of Niven circled by flashlight as the central selling appeal for his day-ahead 115 lines on 3 col. Large circle and borders were bendayed. Picture credits were reversed, with title and reclining figure below in overlay with airbrush.

(3) Building on the radio background of "Dr. Christian" to sell his date, Connie Spencer devoted most of this 65 lines on 3 col. to put over the second feature at the Tivoli, Hamilton, Ontario. Layout was arranged without sacrifice of balance with theatre copy at top and bottom also in reverse to carry out the general effect sought for.

(4) A leading exponent of white space and black-on-white, Hal Kopplin employed this 160 lines on 2 col. arrangement to call quicker attention to the premiere showing of "Slightly Honorable" at Wometco's Lincoln, Miami Beach. Personal appearance of Ruth Terry was ingeniously sold by halftone and copy in circle below, also used to attain decorative balance by tying in with similar figure and circle above.

(5) Assuming that the strength of "Invisible Stripes" would be best sold by the cast names, Ev Callow, zone ad head, spotted half-tones of the leads for the widest appeal in this 145 lines on 2 col. on the date at Warner's Earle, Philadelphia. As a follow up, the names were identified with their previous standout performances.

(6) For a different slant to sell "Ninotchka" and Garbo, in her new comedy role, the date at the Criterion, Oklahoma City, was built up with trick copy and layout simulating confidential circuit screening room report. Individual appraisals were in hand-writing of the Standard Theatres executives, signed by W. B. Shuttee, general manager, Pat Patchen, ad head, and the managers of the circuit's local first-runs. Size, 105 lines on 2 col.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

1939 Projects Reports Show Trend To Smaller Capacities; Total Is 542

NEW THEATRE projects reported during 1939 increased 26% as compared with those reported in 1938. Data compiled by BETTER THEATRES' Projects Bulletin Service shows 542 theatre construction projects reported for the year just closed, as compared with 429 in 1938.

New theatres were smaller—but somewhat more expensive. The national seating average for 1939 auditoriums was 672, whereas last year's plans called for seating capacities 12% larger, with an average capacity of 790.

In spite of their smaller size, 1939 plans indicated theatres no less expensive to build than those reported in 1938. Their average cost was $60,000 per theatre; $59,000 was 1938's average. This year's seat, in other words, represents a net construction investment of $89.00—last year's of $75.00. This trend incidentally, also was reported in BETTER THEATRES a year ago as becoming evident in the last six months of 1938.

In the light of the two-year perspective, the tendency toward smaller theatres shows up as a continuous process. The average seating capacity for 1937 construction projects ran very close to 900, a level which was maintained through the spring of 1938. In the second half of 1938, however, the average was only 686 seats per theatre, bringing the year's figure down to 790, and comparing closely with the average of 672 for the entire year of 1939.

Building Evenly Distributed

The year's construction projects were distributed fairly evenly throughout the nation. The brightest section was in the East North Central states, with a total of 116 new houses, Ohio leading with 37. The South Atlantic states reported 85; the West South Central and West North Central 75 each, the Pacific slope 59 and the Middle Atlantic states 46. The East South Central section with 39, New England with 21 and the Mountain states with 20, trailed.

In each section, however, one or two states usually outstripped their neighbors. California overcame all competitors even in the busy Middle West, topping the nation with 46 new houses, 9 more than Ohio's 37. Idaho and New Mexico were tied at 5 each in the Mountain region, Texas was far ahead in the West South Central area, tying Ohio with 37 and leaving Louisiana and Arkansas with 17 and 15, respectively.

Iowa with 32 was the leader in the West North Central section, where Kansas reported only 9, and Nebraska 4. Missouri did second best, with 20. Tennessee had a slight edge in the East South Central states with 12; North Carolina was busiest along the South Atlantic, reporting 22 projects and followed by Georgia with 19. In the Middle Atlantic territory Pennsylvania's 24 beat New York's 16 two to one. Connecticut was responsible for almost all the activity in New England, with 16.

Costs Appear Varied

Available figures on seating capacities appear to show the largest theatres are still being built in the South: thus the Texas average was 1,203 seats; that for Georgia was 1,000. The trend toward small theatres was strongly apparent in the West; the average for all California theatres reporting was only 455. Mountain states construction averaged only 545 seats per theatre. Large and small theatres were, however, spotted through all sections. In contrast to Texas, Oklahoma built to averages of only 383 seats, and West Virginia, in the same group with Georgia, averaged only 393 in contrast to Georgia's average of just under 1,000.

Construction costs, as far as reported, are equally spotty. The most elaborate new houses apparently are in the East North Central group, where construction costs average over $93,000; the South Atlantic states came next with $85,682; New England held up fairly well at $60,000; the Mountain states, where, however, theatres are also very small, reported an average construction cost of $25,100.

Sidelights from New England and the Middle West indicate that the year's mild building boom was even stronger than the projects reports indicate. Minneapolis, for example, would have added six projects to the Minnesota total if the city fathers had not seen fit to reject applications for construction licenses. Appeal has been carried to the city council by applicants H. L. Griffith, Irving Gilman, W. R. Frank (who wants to build two theatres), Rudolph St. Anthony and W. H. Donahue.

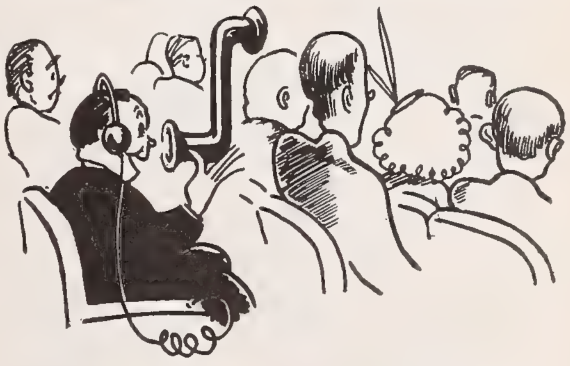
Connecticut, leading all New England with 16 projects for new theatres, has just recently reported twenty remodelling jobs, ranging in cost from $2,000 to $20,000; these got under the line before December 31st, and others are pending for early 1940.

Michigan reports that since July, 1937, a total of 44 new theatres have been built in that state, bringing the state's seating capacity up to 400,000. The average seating capacity of the 44 new houses is 610.

New Interest Seen in Providing Clear Vision

DIFFICULT TO measure exactly, but nevertheless definitely apparent in actual cases of theatre construction and remodeling, is a new interest in improved vision of the screen. The experience of leading auditorium chair manufacturers affords probably the best single indication of such interest and most of them report an increasing use of such devices as "bowled" floors (incorporating the so-called "reverse slope" principle) and staggered seating.

Use of the "reverse" floor set in a half-dozen years ago, and today is no longer a novelty. Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect who has read a number of papers before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers on "reverse" or "bowled" floors, estimates, partly from his own observations and partly those of seating companies, that no fewer than 200 new theatres have been built in the United States during the past five years with floors employing the central flat section and the forward upward slope.



The use of the stagger plan for the middle bank has also become noticeable. Such a scheme is now standard for all new construction of the Interstate circuit in Texas, while it has been applied to effect a better plan in a number of reseating jobs.

Efficient Cove Lighting Plans

ℭ Offering a general scheme for built-in illumination with minimum light waste

INDIRECT LIGHTING coves are constructed usually of a metal lath and plaster combination or of sheet metal. The plaster cove has the advantage of blending in with the plaster of the walls and ceiling whereas the sheet metal cove is apt to reveal an applied appearance due to the exposure of necessary joints and seams in the metal. Both the plaster and the sheet metal serve the purpose of a light reflecting material which the internal surface of the cove has to serve.

The metal has to be painted, but the plaster is best when left in the natural white finish on the inside surfaces since the common hard smooth white finish plaster is a most efficient light reflective finish, having a diffusive reflective characteristic which eliminates the appearance of bright spots reflected from the lamp filaments.

Reflecting Surface

The use of the inside surfaces of the lighting cove as the light reflecting element results in a most economical installation although it does not prove to be the most efficient as far as light production and maintenance of light reflection considerations.

The inside shape of the cove controls to a great extent the amount of light obtained by reflection other than the light coming directly from the lamps but even the most efficient shape is of little value when there is an accumulation of dust on the reflecting surface. A more costly method which overcomes this disadvantage consists of placing the lamps in unit reflectors or in continuous enclosed troughs, then the only surface needing cleaning is the glass cover over the lamps which is a comparatively small area and glass can be washed clean most easily.

The reflecting surfaces in the lamp enclosures are comparatively small and highly reflective, optically designed to reflect light in definite directions and at definite angles. These enclosed reflectors are of standard manufacture. The use of highly reflective polished reflectors is not advisable without glass covers because exposure dulls the surfaces in a short time.

Light Source Schemes

When the inside of the structural cove is used as the reflecting surface, the lamps are placed in a galvanized sheet metal wire way strip about 2 x 3½ inches in cross-sectional measurements. The strips are continuous and may contain the wires for various color and lamp size intensities. If fluorescent lamps are used the strip must be of greater dimensions to accommodate more than one color.

When the lamps are not placed in the enclosed reflectors, the light cove should not be placed at any height which would prove inaccessible for the purpose of keeping the internal surfaces of the cove and the lamps clean since frequent cleaning is necessary. The design of the cove should allow for visibility into the cove and the reaching of surfaces requiring cleaning.

For example, a cove of small dimensions placed too close to the ceiling does not provide for these necessary allowances. Cleaning of the lamps and the internal cove surfaces should be done approximately at about one month intervals. The internal surfaces should be painted a flat white about once every year.

Incandescent lamps having a standard base can be placed on centers of no less than 4 inches in the wire way strip when individual enclosed reflectors are not used. Lamps do not have to be placed as close as this unless there is to be more than one circuit of lamps in the one strip, in which case every other or every third lamp would be burning at one time.

When three circuits or sets of lamps are used in one strip the smallest centerings become necessary because the void caused by having some of the circuits off at any time must be minimized. In determining the proper distance between lamps all reference to center dimensions of lamps refers to the distance between the lamps of one circuit. For example, there may be three circuits in one strip with lamps placed at 4 inch centers, but the lighting design of the strip would have the effect of lamps burning for one of the circuits at centers of 12 inches.

Cove Dimensions

A safe rule for determining cove dimensions and lamp centerings is to maintain a proper relation between the dimensions A and B in the accompanying drawing, and the distance between lamps. The distance between lamps should never be more than one and one half times the shortest between the lamps and any cove surface near the lamps. Greater lamp spacings will produce dark areas or scallops on the illuminated area at and near the cove. Usual lamp centerings vary from 8 to 16 inches. A maximum distance A and B is desirable for smooth and even lighting.

An important phase in cove design is that of making the cove produce a maximum of light with minimum use of light energy. The placing of the lamps in relation to light shield shown on the accompanying drawing is an important factor in connection with this problem. The lamps should be placed as high as the sightline from below will allow. The sightline is drawn from the eye of the standing person who can be placed at the furthest possible distance from the cove.

When the sightline and lamp position is determined, it is then possible to fix the height of the light shield. The light shield should be made as low as the sightline will permit to insure the maximum escape of light and the furthest spread of light. If possible the light escape line should approach a horizontal line, or even a downward angle for highest efficiency.

Another Chapter in the Story of a Boy's Ambitions

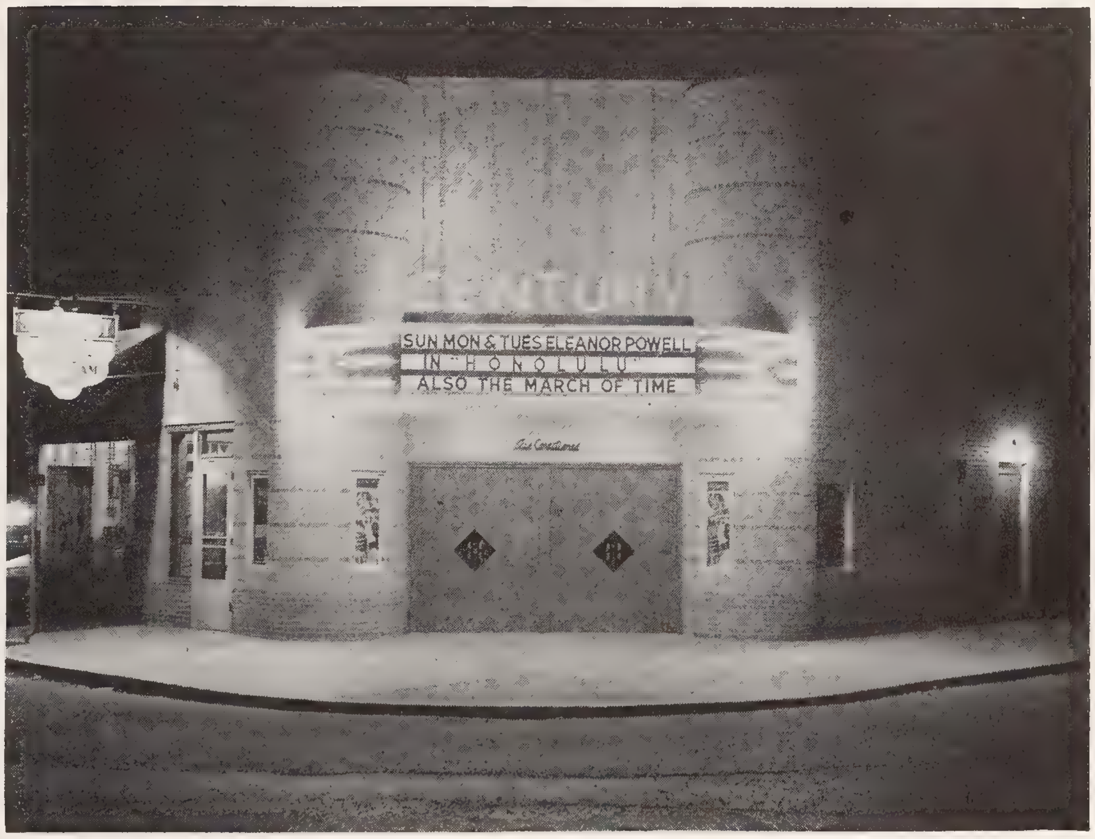
In presenting a description of Albert Hefferan's new Century theatre in tiny Coopersville

—let us first go back to the Owl theatre, the original Owl. That would be about a dozen years ago, when Albert Hefferan, whose home was in Grand Rapids, was just getting well started in his teens. Apparently born with the desire to be a showman, Albert was given a 9mm. camera and projector. He immediately organized a "company" among his chums, "photodramas" were devised and produced in the backyard, then shown at the Owl, which the lads (with the remarkable indulgence of Al's parents) arranged in the attic of he Hefferan home. However, they had to be good boys to get away with it—when the school marks were low, no show!

But the lads worked hard, both at school and as "showmen," doing odd jobs to improve their equipment, and finally acquiring a standard projector which permitted them to rent films, and the Owl was moved out to the garage, where they installed 60 regular theatre chairs, doubling the capacity. They had sound, too—made from parts of victrolas, with amplifiers, speakers, etc., bought with profits. They even had an organ, played by a music roll.

It was pretty sheepishly that they wrote a film exchange, asking for service. No one was more surprised than they when a salesman actually showed up. What was more, he assured them that they were eligible to rent films. They weren't first-runs, of course. But the lads got 25c adult and 15c children admission prices just the same.

But the boys were growing up. Finally Albert went to Junior College in Grand Rapids. But his ambitions remained unchanged. When he got through school, he looked around for a small town in which to begin his real career as an exhibitor. He decided on Coopersville, about twenty miles away. There he remodeled a building formerly housing a restaurant, doing all of the designing and much of the rebuilding himself.



Night view of Coopersville's new Century theatre, with its floodlighted upper facade.

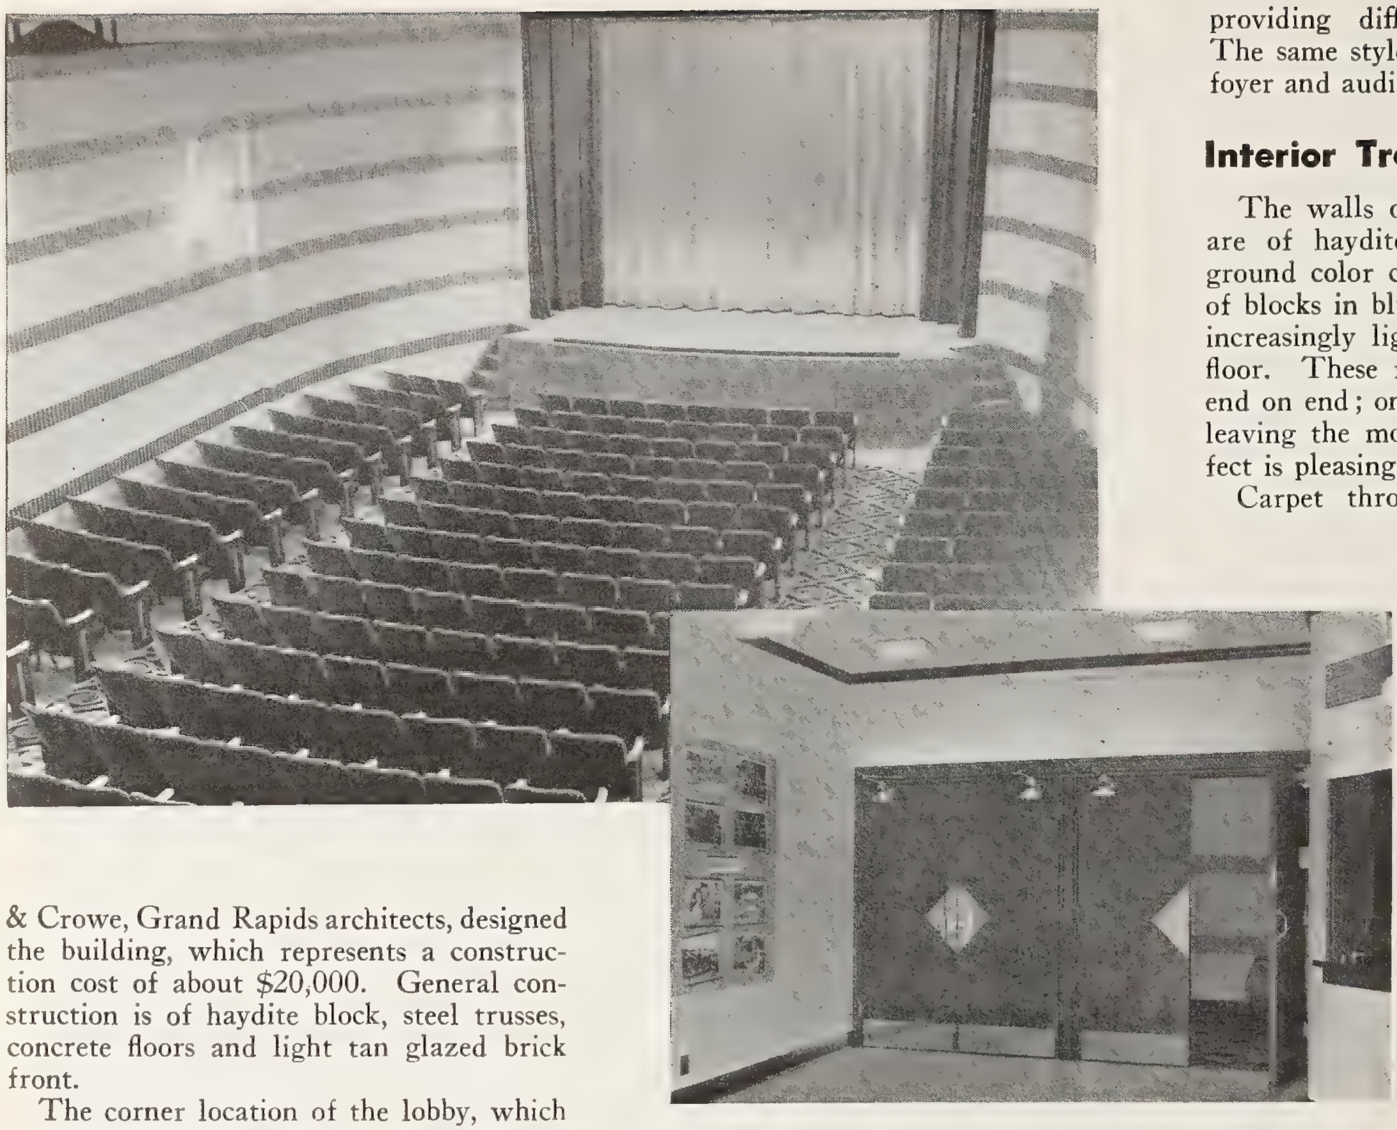
Now he had 150 seats. He called this theatre the Lynx. And it prospered. Obviously it prospered, for that was only in 1937, and already the handsome, 348-seat Century, opened late last fall, has replaced it. Mr. Hefferan himself describes the Century, beginning in the next column.

A view of Coopersville, photographed from the theatre during construction.

THE WAY Coopersville and the surrounding farmers turned out to patronize the Lynx theatre that I established there a few years ago—as pretty much of a gamble, for the population is only about 1,200, and it is just twenty miles from Grand Rapids—proved that my hunch had been right. The Lynx was my first venture in showbusiness since graduating from Junior College in Grand Rapids (the other "theatres" were boyhood affairs in my parents' home and garage, though they were "professional" enough in their way). The Lynx seated only 150 and had been built by remodeling a restaurant building, to which I erected an addition. But it was a starter, and it paved the way for the construction of the finer theatre that even then I was hoping for.

Besides the theatre, the building, which is owned and operated by the Century Theatre Company, of which I am president and manager, contains three small store spaces, two of which are occupied by an ice cream parlor and tea room that opens into the theatre lobby as well as onto the street.

The lot is on the main business corner of the town and is larger than was needed. The frontage of Main Street, 70 feet, was fully utilized, but the auditorium and stage section do not extend the full width, giving something of a blunt L-shape, with the theatre entrance at the corner. Applying my ideas on decoration and various operating features, Robinson, Campau



The lobby, looking into the foyer, and (at top) the auditorium.

& Crowe, Grand Rapids architects, designed the building, which represents a construction cost of about $20,000. General construction is of haydite block, steel trusses, concrete floors and light tan glazed brick front.

The corner location of the lobby, which seemed desirable, resulted in an odd-shaped lobby, but the box office was placed on the right side just at the jog in the wall, with the door to the ice cream parlor opposite. The foyer does not extend the width of the building, but has a vestibule leading to a side exit, to the right of which is the men's toilet. Two aisle openings lead into the auditorium, which is 33 feet, 8 inches wide inside.

Front Treatment

The style of the front might be called conservative modern. The general facing in light tan glazed brick is trimmed with horizontal stripes of a darker shade of brick. On each side of the entrance doors the walls curve in and have recessed poster frames. This curve is extended above the marquee on each side, with a brick pattern panel between. Floodlights on the marquee light up this panel at night.

The marquee has one face in a position to be seen from both streets. It is trimmed in green neon and has a large initial C on both sides. A row of clear lamps, spaced 6 inches on centers, extends around the under edge of the face and sides, and two recessed floods in the soffit light up the sidewalk after the rest of the marquee lights are turned off.

The lobby has plaster walls and is lighted by ceiling fixtures of modern style providing diffused colored illumination. The same style of fixtures are used in the foyer and auditorium.

Interior Treatment

The walls of the foyer and auditorium are of haydite block, painted, with the ground color cream and every fourth row of blocks in blue, these being graduated in increasingly lighter shades up from the floor. These rows are haydite brick, laid end on end; only the brick is painted blue, leaving the mortar cream color. The effect is pleasing, since it is not a solid band.

Carpet throughout—in the foyer and down the aisles and in a "cry room"—is Crestwood Velvet in red, gold and blue, blending with the walls and other decorations. The auditorium chairs (they are Ideal) have blue leatherette seats, coral mohair backs, and blonde-wood armrests. Drapes in the foyer and aisle arches, and the stage curtain, are dark blue rayon plush.

The ceilings throughout the interior are Celotex laid in a herringbone pattern.

The auditorium is lighted by fixtures like those in the lobby (they were furnished by the Modern Theatre Supply Company of Grand Rapids). Dim colors remain on and are connected with the exit light circuit. General illumination is by clear lamps in the same fixtures, operated on a dimmer, so that as the white light is dimmed, the colors seem to come up.

For sound absorption, in addition to the Celotex ceiling, the rear wall is of cinder block, which has some absorption qualities, rather than of haydite.

The stage is 22 feet wide with an opening 16 feet high, and 8 feet deep, permit-

Cleaning the Front for Both Attractiveness and Economy

• Suggestions as to methods and materials that safely, effectively and conveniently keep the theatre's "display window" fit for service

By S. BRAVERMAN

ALTHOUGH THE front of the theatre, and the vestibule, are exposed to the weather and dust-laden winds, they sometimes are subjected to less inspection and cleaning than the interior of the theatre. It is true that uncleanliness indoors is particularly obnoxious, but the entrance area is the show-window of the theatre and one thing it must not display—signs of neglectful management.

In getting around among theatres, as the writer does a great deal, one is struck by the wide difference between the cleaning policy of one operator and that of another. Some circuits, for example (the Century circuit in the New York area comes to mind, and there are of course many others), are almost fanatical (if one can be a fanatic on cleanliness) in their care of the front, vestibule, lobby, etc., while others seem to disregard the front, in particular, as a part of the house requiring regular cleaning throughout.

How often the marquee is allowed to gather dust and dirt around the lamp sockets and between little structural projections and on ledges (on the roof, too, but this will be considered in another article), and how seldom are the soffits of some marquees really cleaned! Nor is it uncommon to find fragments of banners still clinging long after almost all of the banner has been ripped off.

Cleaning the Marquee

The attraction board letters should of course be clean when put in the panel. Glass letters can be easily washed off with slightly soapy water; metal letters should be cleaned with a polishing wax or oil—wax is better, but oil is more convenient.

The metal frame of the attraction board also should be polished at suitable intervals (the period will vary according to local atmospheric and other specific conditions), while the glass panel of a silhouette-letter type board should be washed with soapy water containing a few drops of ammonia—or one can use a liquid window cleaner, spraying it on and wiping the panel dry with a soft rag.

Stainless Steel and Chrome Trim

There seems to be a notion more or less prevalent that stainless steel and chromium do not need cleaning. They definitely do, or the finish will corrode, and once this begins, only replacement or refinishing will restore proper appearance.

Such trim can be easily maintained by cleaning it, whenever inspection shows that it is collecting grime, with very fine pumice powder gently applied with double- or triple-O steel wool. Caution: If the surface is merely plated with chromium, steel wool should not be used; the pumice powder can then be applied with a soft rag.

Lamps and Neon Tubing

When cleaned regularly, lamps and neon tubing may be kept absolutely clear by merely wetting a wash rag with soapy water containing a little ammonia and wiping the glass. Socket rims and sign channels should be similarly cleaned.

Keeping Sidewalk Neat

You may have noticed that some porters, after sweeping the sidewalk dirt into the street gutter, leave it there, thinking the dirt disposed of, ignoring the fact that slight breezes, or even normal air currents, are likely to carry such matter as cigarette butts, bits of paper, etc., not only back onto the sidewalk, but into the vestibule. Sidewalk dirt and waste material should be swept into a pile in the gutter and substantially all of it should then be scooped up into a receptacle and burnt. (If neighboring stores are a nuisance in this respect, perhaps a good-natured explanation of how their dirt blows into your vestibule will suffice to reform them.)

Gum can usually be scraped off the sidewalk and vestibule floor with a putty knife or similar implement. If it doesn't yield entirely, remove the remainder with a little carbon tetrachloride (if your cleaning supplies do not include this, your projectionists doubtless have some, or your druggist can supply it as such or in the form of a clothes cleaning fluid).

Removal of Snow and Ice

There are two ways of keeping the sidewalk clear of snow and ice. One of course is to push it off to the curb, where it should be shoveled into a neat pile (and pending its removal by the city, why not tack a display card on a stick and mount it neatly on the pile of snow?)

The other way to keep rid of snow and ice is to sprinkle the sidewalk with calcium chloride (it is available for just that purpose under various trade names) when the snow begins to fall. The snow will immediately melt, and the water will not freeze. This substance, which is about as cheap as table salt, is not injurious to carpeting or chair fabrics, so will cause no harm should there be any considerable amount of it dissolved in the water on a patron's shoes.

Cleaning of Rubber Mats

Rubber lobby mats should be washed every day or two—in bad weather, more often. Water and soap are all that is necessary—there are no tricks. Use only a neutral soap (containing no caustic); the safest way is to use a liquid soap in the water. Caustic soap hardens, or gums, rubber, and your lobby mats will "last quick" if you use it in washing them.

The mats should be scrubbed with a deck brush, which is stiff enough to clean out the grooves, yet will not harm the surface. After scrubbing, flood the mats with clear water through a hose, or rinse with a wet mop.

Incidentally, if you use your mats only in rainy or snowy weather, store only in a cool place when you take them up. Heat dries and cracks them. Also, be sure to roll them, not to fold them. [Other aspects of lobby mat care were dealt with in the October, 1939, issue of BETTER THEATRES.—THE EDITOR.]

Care of Display Cases

Display frames, whether of wood or a material like Formica, should be waxed once a week. It is, however, inside the case that neglect is most often found. Cards, instead of being removed entirely and disposed of, are sometimes lazily got rid of by slipping below or to one side of the lamps; that is not only sloven, but results in shutting off some of the light. Mats should be kept immaculate—that is only good showmanship. They should be dusted off regularly with a feather duster. Art gum will remove some blotches on paper board mats, while carbon tetrachloride will often eradicate soiled spots on fabric mats.

Cleaning the Box Office

If any element of the theatre should be kept cleaner than another, certainly Element No. 1 is the box office. Too often

KEEPING STEP WITH HIS TOWN

F. C. Martin's new theatre at Clifton, Ariz., recently built to replace his Princess theatre there, situated next door. Mr. Martin writes: "Clifton owes its existence to copper. It has no mines, but it was a smelter town and is six miles from Morenci, destined to be the largest copper camp in the state." Mr. Martin operates the Royal in Morenci, operated the Princess in Clifton for 28 years. His new Clifton house seats 500 and represents an investment of $35,000, exclusive of land. The building is of stone and concrete, the front being of concrete with a black porcelain-enameled metal base. The marquee, of prefabricated type by the Artkraft Sign Company of Lima, Ohio, also is of porcelain metal, and above it the front is trimmed in five projecting columns outlined in neon, which makes the columns appear at night as extensions of the marquee. The auditorium, also pictured, is finished in buff and gray Celotex, applied to form a decorative pattern. Mr. Martin also writes: "I can assure you that in planning the new theatre Better Theatres was of great help. In fact, I am one of your oldest subscribers, beginning when I operated the Empire theatre in Morenci. I have been in the motion picture business since 1908." The new Martin theatre, he adds, was built because general improvements in Clifton, and accompanying elevation of local tastes, made the old Princess outmoded.

modeling and renovation estimated to cost more than $15,000. Roy Champion, who has managed several units in the North Carolina circuit, has been named manager of the remodelled house.

Vinita, Okla., will have a new theatre with the remodeling of a bank building there. Richard Fryer, Sr., and his son, Richard, Jr., will operate the house.

George Pace has reopened the Rio at Rodeo, Calif.

March Brothers Theatres have opened the Pix, at LeMars, Ia., replacing the old Elite. The house, which has been almost completely rebuilt, seats 270.

Ray Harper and Frank Boeck have opened the Friant at Friant, Calif., site of one of the huge dams of the Central Valley water project.

Greater Chicago Theatres, lessee of the Embassy in Neenah, Wis., contemplates improvements to the house at an estimated cost of $30,000.

Jesse Jones of Portland, Ore., who operates the St. Johns theatre there, has acquired the Granada and Roseway theatres from Walter E. Tebbetts, who is retiring from show-business. Archie Holt, former GB branch manager in Seattle, will be associated with Mr. Jones in the supervision of the two houses. Both houses will be remodeled.

The Valerie theatre at Inverness, Fla., was damaged to the extent of $10,000, by a fire starting from an overheated heating plant. Patrons witnessing a performance at the time of the blaze left the theatre without mishap.

With the opening of the new Princess in Harriman, Tenn., Ray Moore has been appointed assistant manager for both the Prince theatre there, and the new house.

Melvin Sparks has been named manager of the Guild in Crystal City, Tex.

The Ritz in Oklahoma City is scheduled for early reopening, according to Walter B. Shuttee, general manager of Standard Theatres. The house has been closed since last February and during that time has been remodeled. Standards has eight theatres in Oklahoma City.

The newly incorporated Empress Amusement Company of Columbus, Ohio, has taken a 20-year lease on the 600-seat Empress, from the Hamilton Realty Company. Wallace B. Ingram, manager of the Champion theatre, is president of the new corporation, with Walter P. Miles, projectionist of the state censorship office, as vice-president, and Mrs. Ethel Chesbrough Miles, manager of the Garden theatre, as secretary and treasurer. The Empress previously was a unit of the Chesbrough circuit, operating in Columbus.

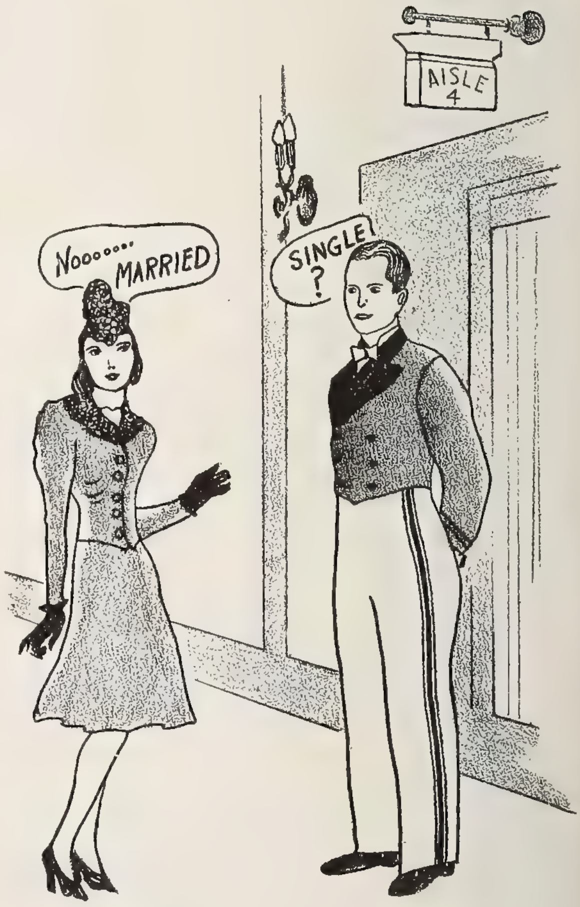
Plans for enlarging and modernizing the Pickfair in Kernersville, N. C., have been announced by James J. Justice, owner and operator of the house.

Joe Malmuth, formerly connected with the Hurly Screen Company and the Dictagraph Products Corporation, has joined the Amusement Supply Company, New York, as sales engineer.

Sylvan Goldfinger, formerly with B & K, is the managing director of the Telenews theatre in Chicago, recently opened as that city's first newsreel house.

The newly remodelled Senate, operated by Kerasotes Brothers in Springfield, Ill., has been opened. The house, said to be oldest theatre in the city from the point of continued operation, was modernized from the box office to the screen.

Plans and specifications are being prepared by Kaplan & Sprachman, architects of Toronto, for a new front, box office, marquee, and interior decorations for the Palace theatre in Hamilton, Ont., Famous Players Canadian house.



Why not say, "Single SEAT"?

Thus does C. J. Haney, chief of service of the Orpheum theatre in Madison, Wis., use his talent for drawing to bring out a defect which he has observed among ushers in some theatres. And we may assume that his boss, Hugh Flannery, quite agrees, for it was he who sent it in. Mr. Flannery is city manager for the Ashley Theatre Company, which operates four theatres in Madison.

OBSERVATIONS

of the editor

WHY THEATRE OPERATORS HAVE ENTERPRISE—THAT DESIRE TO MAKE MONEY

ALBERT HEFFERAN, now a full-fledged exhibitor but once a kid who merely wanted to be one, and whose new Century theatre is dealt with elsewhere in this issue, cited in a letter accompanying his description of the Century, a story about his boyhood theatre that appeared just a decade ago in Exhibitors Herald-World, the Quigley publication which was consolidated with Motion Picture News to make Motion Picture Herald. In the files we found the issue; the editorial blurb introducing the story began: "The future of the motion picture theatre in America is assured if the remarkable work of the youngsters in charge of the Owl theatre at Grand Rapids, Mich., is any criterion."

We don't think that was an attempt at prophecy; it was merely an application of common sense. Sophisticated show people perhaps regard guys like Al Hefferan as a yokel. And any way you take it, he is a small-time operator. He has only one theatre! In a town of 1,500! But all any business, any industry, is made of is enterprise, ambition, a willingness to work and learn and do better. The energy of our business, as of any other, is that of our manpower, not of financial resources, money-bigness, alone.

Hefferan started with a terrific yen to be a motion picture exhibitor. He and some other boys rigged up quite a neat little semi-play theatre in the Hefferan home. Later they took over the garage in the back yard. And finally Al built himself a theatre in a small nearby town. Now, a few years later, he replaces this with the much larger, finer Century theatre.

Here is enterprise, a willingness to work and to learn, and ambition. But despite his deep-rooted interest in showbusiness, we don't think that Mr. Hefferan's enterprise is entirely the result of that interest. We think that a big part of the incentive lies in the desire to make money, and the expectation that being a theatre operator will permit him to do so. Not necessarily a vast amount. But enough.

Enterprise throughout the fabric of the motion picture theatre business will be with us just so long as the profits of this billion-dollar-a-year business can filter through that fabric. Manpower is what we need, but it will fail to be developed, or will peter out, unless there are enough of the old vitamins (shekels to you) to go around.

By the way, will someone explain to us how an industry doing a cash business of from 800 million to a billion dollars a year, can ever consider itself "un-prosperous?"

Of course, we're kind of touchy on the subject of theatre net income. We want to see theatres properly maintained, and improved as advancements come along. And this being the business it is, repairs and improvements come out of cash receipts over and above those necessary for fixed charges, salaries and film rental. Mostly, if not entirely, depreciation is a bookkeeping charge—money is not set aside for replacement. When the picture does business, and the percentage on it is enough to pay for the last couple of "turkeys" with a little to spare for the grocer, Willie's new bicycle and the bank account, then we can think about getting those new projectors. If not, we struggle along with the old jalopies we have. Big or small, independent or circuit, that is essentially the way our theatres are operated.

Yet it seems likely that the public will think no more of the motion picture, as an institution, than we ourselves think of it. Every theatre that is not equipped and manned to present motion pictures effectively, and is otherwise below the standards of its community, is undermining the position of the film. Any spread of low-standard operation jeopardizes the business of theatres of high standards. And another thing—

Well, enough of that. Suppose you've heard about the correct pronounciation of Vivien Scarlett O'Hara Leigh's last name. It's pronounced Lee. Which certainly spoils a couple of gags we've heard. Incidentally, how are things in your neeborhood?

Economy in Cooling Methods Today

¶ Discussing several developments and air-washing in the light of results and costs

By CARL F. BOESTER

TO BROADEN the application of air-conditioning and to make it possible for all classes of theatres and a great variety of commercial establishments to take advantage of its benefits, new methods have been developed.

One such development—and a very intelligent one—has been made in the direction of the use of cooling tower water through coils to take up a great percentage, and in many cases all, of the air-heat of a given air-conditioning load. This has been made possible through recent research on the earliest type of finned, or extended surface, coil which was developed for, and is still used extensively today as, the core of your automobile radiator. In all probability, no more efficient heat transfer surface will ever be developed.

There are two reasons why this type of coil has not been used generally in air-conditioning applications up to this time. The first is that it is a low-pressure coil and therefore not suitable for use with refrigerants other than water. By this is meant that the coil will not withstand an internal pressure of more than 50 pounds. The second is that only recently have methods been developed for testing (with water flowing through) this type of surface for capacity and performance as to heat transfer. Because it is very low in first cost, and exceptionally efficient, it will undoubtedly soon find wide application to comfort air-conditioning.

Applying Water Coil

If the space to be conditioned is to be maintained at an 80° temperature, and we have 60°, 65° or 70° water available for absorbing heat, a considerable quantity of surface in the form of fin coil is required to effect the heat transfer necessary to absorb the heat. This is because the slight temperature difference makes the rate of heat transfer rather slow (the greater the temperature difference between the warmer and the cooler object, the faster the rate of heat transfer. Thus, in our example, it takes an exceptionally large quantity of surface to effect a given heat transfer). Since this "new" coil surface is exceptionally efficient and since it is by far the lowest in first cost of any type of surface, it admirably fills the bill of absorbing air-heat.

If the cooling load on a typical theatre is 50 tons, and 40% of the load is in the from of heat which can be absorbed by, say, 60° water from a cooling tower, this means that instead of putting in a 50-horsepower compressor to handle the load, we need install only a 30-horsepower compressor. A cooling tower to handle 20 tons of load of sensible heat, plus this new type of coil surface, is considerably less costly than 20-horsepower of refrigerating equipment.

Water Availability Factors

In some places city water is cheap enough to run through this type of coil, and in other places well water is available. In the case of either city or well water, before the water is wasted, it goes first through the cooling coil and then is used as condenser water in the condenser of the refrigerating equipment. In this manner it does double duty. Incidentally, this type of coil is by far the most efficient for use with well water as it gets the last bit of work possible out of the well water.

It is probably needless to say that this type of coil is placed in the entering air stream ahead of any refrigerant and dehumidifying coils. These coils are equally capable of dehumidifying (removing air-moisture) when the water used is cold enough (below the "dew-point" temperature of the air circulated over them); However, seldom is well water low enough in temperature to do sufficient dehumidifying, and rarely, if ever, is city water of suitable tempera-

ANNOUNCING:

J. T. Knight, Jr., will resume writing in Better Theatres

Beginning with the February issue, J. T. Knight, Jr., will return to the pages of Better Theatres, contributing regularly on air-conditioning, heating, etc., and on various phases of theatre operation and maintenance. An accredited engineer in several fields, Mr. Knight has managed theatres, while for over fifteen years he has been directing the physical operation and maintenance of theatres of all sizes and classes. He was a feature of each issue of Better Theatres. His articles and "Maintenance Tabs" were regular features of each issue of Better Theatres from 1933 to 1938, and we are most happy to be able to announce that with the February 10th issue he will begin "where he left off" two years ago.

Fewer parts to wear. (1) No shaft seals to develop leaks. (2) No belts. (3) No pulleys. (4) No couplings . . . to adjust or replace. Direct drive conserves power. Grit, moisture, rust, corrosion . . . sealed out. No ventilation needed. All this means EXTRA years of trouble-free performance.

Today air conditioning is a positive business builder. People go out of their way to enjoy its comfort. Some day air conditioning will be a defensive necessity. Install now! Every day you wait you lose this "plus PULL" advantage.

ture. (Obviously, cooling tower water never is below dew-point temperature, which is the temperature at which moisture in the air condenses out of it—just as dew is formed on summer nights when the air become cooler.)

These coils are now rated for a complete air-conditioning perfomance with chilled water, such as ice from ice-actuated systems, chilled water from storage refrigeration systems, or from any other source that will produce 40° to 45° water.

Cooling Tower Development

A great aid to this type of application is the recent development of a cooling tower that can supply water leaving the tower at a temperature below wet bulb temperature. This means that, whereas in the past cooling tower water has been available from conventional cooling towers at temperatures approaching the prevailing wet-bulb temperature, it is now available at temperatures approaching dew-point temperature—as much as 10° to 15° cooler. This new type of tower is commercially available and makes it possible to handle a still greater part of the total load, thus contributing to a still further lowering of cooling costs.

It also makes possible increased capacity from refrigerating plants because with colder water available for heat rejection, a refrigerating plant has increased condensing efficiency and is therefore able to do more work for a given amount of energy. This reflects tremendous savings in first and operating costs.

In some cases, particularly in dry regions where high temperatures and low humidities prevail throughout the warm months, the combination of this new type tower with the radiator type coil surface can provide a cooling system for the theatre. In those areas the theatre owner is indeed fortunate.

The Absorption Method

In the November and December, 1939, issues we discussed the action of mechanical refrigeration equipment, using water or a chemical agent like Freon. Such equipment is usually necessary in smaller or larger capacity to obtain positive and effective comfort cooling. We also referred, in the preceding article, to absorption refrigeration, and for sake of comprehensively covering the air-conditioning methods so far developed, we will give a brief account of this means of removing excessive heat from the air of a building.

Its outstanding advantage is that there are no moving parts. In some respects it is quite like a conventional refrigerating system in that the refrigerant is admitted to the cooling coil of conventional design through an expansion valve, after which heat is absorbed in the cooling coil. The heat-laden refrigerant vapor is then carried over to a device known as an absorber, containing a substance with an affinity for and the ability to absorb the refrigerant vapors.

THIS article not only concludes the group by Mr. Boester on air-conditioning mechanical facilities, but it ends as well the entire series begun in the issue of April 29, 1939, as a sequence of "plain talks" on just what we are after in theatre air-conditioning, to which Mr. Boester began to contribute in the September, 1939, issue. In this article he considers a number of more recent developments, notably in heat transfer coils and cooling towers; and also the place of air-washing equipment among comfort cooling devices.

Example of Operation

To illustrate: One of the more common combinations is that of ammonia and water. As you know, ammonia and water have a great affinity for each other, so that if ammonia is used as the refrigerant, water is used as the absorbing agent, the refrigerant vapors being absorbed by the water in the absorber. If some of the Freons are used, absorbing liquids having an affinity for those gases are employed. The liquid, ammonia-saturated water is then pumped out of the low side by a pump—often a gravity type pump—and transferred into a generator, which is nothing more than a coil to which heat is applied. This heat can come from coal, oil, gas, steam or electricity. The heat drives the lighter and easily evaporated ammonia gas out of the water without ever boiling the water. The ammonia gases are then carried over to a condensing coil, where cooling tower water is circulated, and the gas is condensed back into a liquid ready to go back into the cooling coil and absorb more heat.

In addition to the heat absorbed from the air that is conditioned, the heat from the generator must finally be dissipated. On those applications cooled with city water, the water consumption necessary to reject this total heat is terrific. However, with the advent of efficient cooling towers and the use of evaporative condensers, this water consumption problem becomes no longer a great problem.

Engineering and Equipment Problem

The main disadvantage of this type of absorption system is that it requires an engineer well versed in the art of absorption refrigeration to size, design and apply this principle properly to a given application. There are not many engineers around the country familiar with the method and only a few sources of supply for the equipment. Where a theatre owner is convinced of the advantages of employing a consulting engineer, frequently the application of this type of refrigerating equipment is the happy solution. Do not attempt it, however, unless you are satisfied that the particular engineer working out the application is qualified to do the job.

Evaporative Cooling

The matter of washed air or evaporative cooling is of tremendous interest to many theatre owners since in years past, a large percentage of the theatres that have installed some kind of air treatment equipment for patron comfort in summer, have bought such equipment. It should be remembered, however, that washed air cooling cannot change the total heat content of the air. It merely changes the heat balance of the air.

Suppose one says to a theatre owner: "It is 95° in temperature outside and the wet bulb temperature is 75°. A single-bank air washer will cool the air 65% of the difference between the wet- and dry-bulb temperature. The difference is 20° and 65% of this is about 13°. A 13° temperature drop is well worthwhile."

What we have failed to say, however, is that in the process the humidity goes up, leaving the air still uncomfortable.

Effective Temperature Factors

In the articles appearing in last Spring's issues of BETTER THEATRES, the significance of Effective Temperature was most clearly explained by other writers. Assuming that you have a thorough understanding of the term "Effective Temperature," by referring to the Effective Temperature chart that was published in that series of articles, you will find that 95° dry-bulb, and 75° wet-bulb corresponds to a 92° Effective Temperature. Now, with the air-heat dropped temperature from 95° to 82°, and the wet-bulb temperature (air moisture reading) staying at 75° the Effective Temperature becomes 86°—a net improvement in comfort conditions of 6°, and not a 13° difference!

The reason for this is that a portion of the water from the sprays was evaporated into the air as the air passed through the water sprays. We have seen in this series that it requires heat to support moisture in the air, and that to support this moisture in the air the heat had to come from the air itself. Thus, as we dropped the sensible temperature from 95° to 82°, we increased the amount of air-moisture, or the Relative Humidity.

Local Humidity Effect

To show this more clearly, the Relative Humidity for a temperature of 95° with a wet-bulb temperature of 75° is 40%. But with a dry-bulb temperature of 82° and the same wet-bulb of 75°, the Relative Humidity is about 72°. So you see that the net improvement in Effective Temperature is negligible. Furthermore, rarely is there such a wide difference between the wet- and dry-bulb temperatures as the 95° and 75° of our example. This ideal condition exists only in the dry areas where 20% and 30% Relative Humidities prevail. In those localities there is justification for the use of such equipment in theatres otherwise adapated to it.

To find out whether washed air is suited to your locality, it would be best to refer to a U. S. Weather Bureau map showing prevailing temperatures and Relative Humidity levels (a simplified form of such a map was published in the June, 1939, issue of BETTER THEATRES, with the humidity levels indicated by lines on the map, and temperature ranges by shaded areas). From such a map any air-conditioning engineer or dealer organization can tell you what Effective Temperature you could expect from a washed air system.

[The author, who is an air-conditioning engineer with offices in St. Louis, has had wide experience in the designing of air systems for theatres. He has authorized BETTER THEATRES to state that he will be glad to answer any question regarding specific application of the methods which he has discussed in this series, to which, beginning with the September issue, he has contributed the articles on equipment.]

ting small acts. The screen traveller is silver and gold; it is hand-operated, but the main curtain is controlled by Vallen equipment from the projection room.

Heating is by circulated hot air. Ducts lead to two openings in the auditorium ceiling, and a return duct leads from openings at the stage to the blower unit, which is located overhead backstage. Outside air is mixed by means of a five-point switch in the box office, which controls shutters in the intakes at the back of the building. Incorporated with the blower unit are heating coils supplied from an oil-fired boiler located to the left of the stage.

The rest of the building, and the stores, are heated either by hot-water radiators, or by circulating (fan) heating units, both being supplied by the boiler supplying the blower coils.

For summer operation we use well water in the same coils used for heating, plus another one, and the same blowers and ducts of course do the circulating job.

The projection room, located above the foyer, is reached through a poster room and office at the head of stairs leading up from the box office. The projection room has concrete floor and ceiling, and haydite walls. It is feet wide and 10 feet deep.

Projectors are Super-Simplex with Strong low-intensity lamps supplied by a Baldor rectifier. The sound system is Simplex. Accessories include a Goldberg enclosed rewind, and Neumade film cabinets and table. A public address system, and non-sync turntable, are connected to the main amplifier. Most of the equipment and furnishings were supplied by the National Theatre Supply Company's Detroit branch. The projection room port shutters, however, were supplied by the Modern Theatre Supply Company of Grand Rapids.—Albert Hefferan.

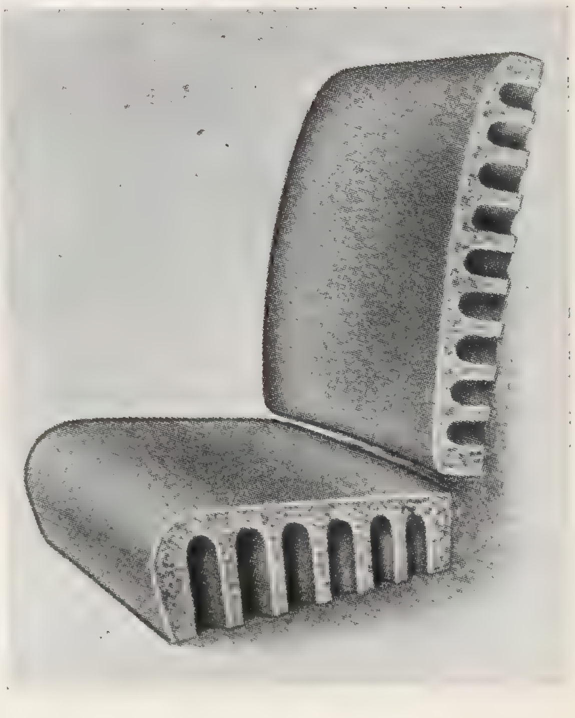
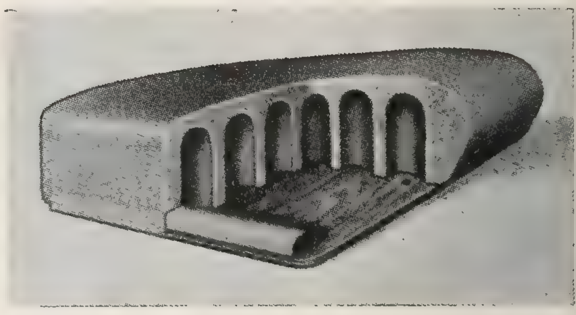
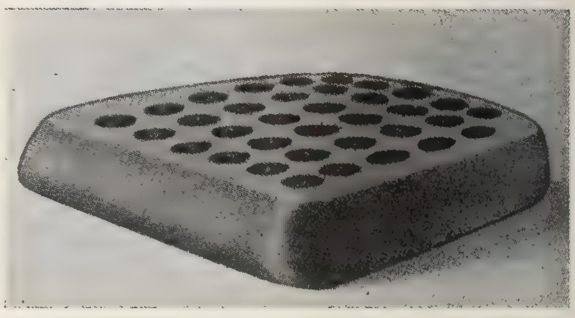
Application of Foamed Latex To Auditorium Chair Cushions



Cross-section of seat and back cushions.



Cushion mounted on ventilated board.

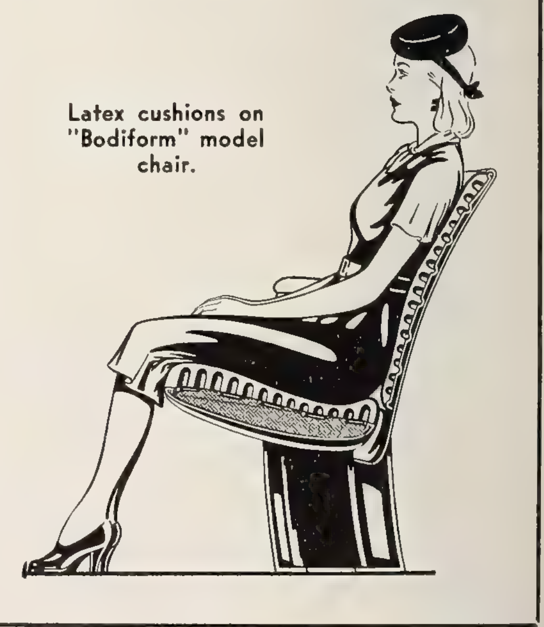


Cushion upside down, showing channel openings.

IN THE USE of foamed latex sponge—or, as it is sometimes called, foam rubber—for the cushions of auditorium seating, the United States is far behind some other countries, notably England and Australia. That is not to say that spring construction of present-day type is to be considered as being superseded, in good practice, by the latex cushion; the reference merely means that only in recent years have manufacturing and commercial conditions in this country been favorable to its adoption.

Since the establishment of these conditions during the past year or two, the application of foamed latex sponge to theatre seating (it has been widely used for bus seats, etc., for quite a few years) has been steadily increasing, yet the majority of theatre operators, perhaps, are still without first-hand knowledge of the manner in which it is applied. The nature of the material itself was described in the March, 1939, issue of BETTER THEATRES; explained here, principally in picture, are its applications to theatre seating.

Latex cushions on "Bodiform" model chair.



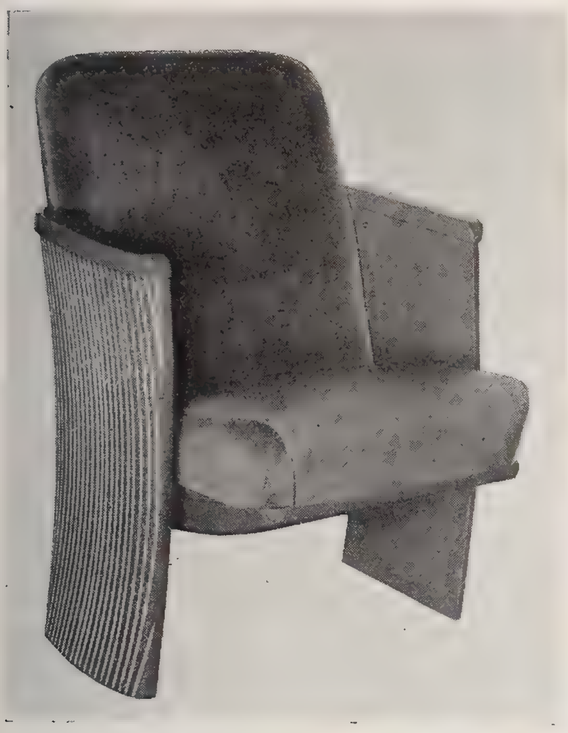
The illustration of seat and back cushion, in cross-section, indicates the general form into which the latex sponge (the material is not rubber, as such, but a specially prepared substance having as its base the milk of the rubber tree, or pure latex) is poured to required shape (the molds provide cushions to exact specifications for each style and width of chair).

Also shown is a seat cushion mounted on a wood veneer panel, which is the method of attachment for most types of auditorium chairs. The board is ventilated, for the reason indicated in the view of seat cushion with the underside turned up, showing the openings of the channels, which penetrate almost to the top surface of the cushion. The cushion is porous to a high degree, and the channels increase the ventilation by which the material keeps itself, so to speak, in a clean and "healthy" condition.

In distinction to the usual method of seat attachment employed, and the consequent shape of the cushion, is the method used by the American Seating Company for its "Bodiform" chair, as illustrated in the drawing of such a chair with a girl seated in it. Here the cushion, made to proper dimensions, is affixed over the no-sag type springs used in this type chair.

At the same time, the sketch with the seated girl may be said to indicate accurately the uniform flexibility of properly manufactured foamed latex sponge cushions, with their gentle response to each part of the body in immediate contact with it.

THREE NEW "STREAMLINE" MODELS



The "Aristocrat"

A NEW GROUP of auditorium chairs, each representing a certain price classification, but all characterized by a typically modern flow of line, particularly in the rearward curvature of the end standards to effect a unity of design with the back, have been added to the line of the Ideal Seating Company. Identified as the "Streamliner Group," the series consists in three models, with that in the top bracket named the "Aristocrat," the next the "Mercury," then the "Challenger."

All have die-formed steel back panels and seat pans, and are available with either spring or padded backs, and with spring-edge seats.

The back panel of the "Aristocrat" extends low enough to provide protection for the seat fabric when the seat is raised, and it has rolled edges to protect the back fabric at both the top and the sides. The seat pan, which is relatively deep, follows a slight curvature from the turned-up front edge to the rear, the purpose being to provide increased leg room when a seated patron draws back or stands.

Similar to the "Aristocrat" in general design and construction, the "Mercury" has steel, ball-bearing hinges with six cushioning stops, and one positive stop, while the ball bearings are fully enclosed and packed in grease at the factory. The steel back panels turn at the upper corners to form a fabric-protecting flange at top.

The "Challenger," designed for the medium-price market, has a back panel with a protective flange and ball-bearing hinges of simplified construction.

Low-Cost Color and Brilliance

ONE OF THE most elaborate applications of roundel-reflectors using lamps of extremely small wattage, is that recently made by Balaban & Katz in remodeling the front of the United Artists theatre, prominent Loop house. With a marquee dominated by a colorful and scintillant sunburst effect, the entire installation, including corner ornamentation, attraction board border, soffit, and an attraction panel across the entrance, employs 5,915 Sparkle-lite reflectors of the newer type developed by Smally Products, Inc., of Canton, Ohio.

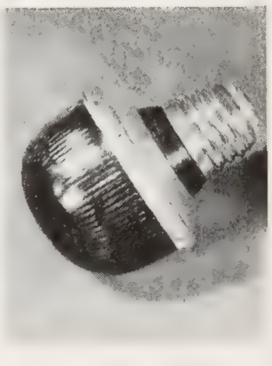
This type of reflector consists in a polished reflector element equipped with a standard socket, and its glass cover, or roundel, which is attached to the reflector, enclosing the lamp. Unlike an earlier type of reflector developed by the same manufacturer the Sparkle-liet has a somewhat bowl-shaped roundel, with a fluted, or ridged, interior surface giving lens-like properties. The fluting also contributes decorative values, so that the reflector has characteristics of a tiny lighting fixture (it may, in fact, be used as a fixture in corridors or similar areas adapted to low or medium levels of illumination). The roundels, which are available in red, blue, amber and green as well as white, are threaded for attachment to the reflector. The reflectors are made in two sizes, one for 7-watt lamps, the other for 10-watt lamps, both with candelabra bases. The 7-watt white reflector is rated to provide the equivalent of 25 watts; the 10-watt, the equivalent of 40 watts.



Sparkle-lite reflector

To create the sunburst effect with rippling borders on the United Artists theatre marquee, as shown in the accompanying photgraph, a total of 3,515 reflectors are used, in red, green, and both light and dark amber. The lamps used throughout are C7 Mazdas (7 watts, clear glass, rated at 2,000 hours, and costing 10c).

Front Harmony In Modernization And New Designs

WITH THE marquee now so definitely an architectural element of the theatre front, or facade, rather than a mere appendage, the problem of determining its shape, size, trim and lighting is integral with the whole problem of front styling and selection of materials. The experienced theatre designer is used to this and, if not too greatly handicapped by budgets, will usually achieve a front treatment all of a piece. Where the problem becomes very tricky is the existing theatre, and it is especially difficult when the front is of a definitely older style. Here again experience and ingenuity play a big part—in this case, very often, being supplied by a marquee manufacturer, rather than an architect.

A marquee properly designed, nevertheless, can go far to effect substantial modernization of an existing front if the general architectural style is not too ill-suited. This is well demonstrated in the effect attained by the new marquee of the Patio, a Great States house in Freeport, Ill. Spanning a one-story building, with a relatively heavy vertical sign as part of the structure, this marquee follows sufficiently the outline of the building to blend well with it and therefore does not appear really out of scale.

traveling border lamps on 4-inch centers, and one line of red neon. The decorative pieces joining the marquee to the building are outlined with six vertical powder-colored tubes and eight rows of flashing lamps. Powder blue tubes also trim the vertical sign, which is 25 feet high. This sign, incidentally, is served from a swinging scaffold which, running into the sign and automatically closing the upper part, allows the service man to contact any point without injury to any part. A total of 28 Jefferson neon transformers are used, and the Wagner silhouette-letter attraction panels are of flashed opal glass, which is lighted by lamps set against a metal reflector. Construction is of heavy-gauge stretcher level galvanneal.

The Vista theatre in Storm Lake, Ia., presents an interesting example of harmonious adaptation of the marquee to a new design. Operated by George R. Norman, the Vista was designed by Wetherell & Harrison, architects of Des Moines. Except for wings in architectural brick, this front is faced in K-Z-S (Kawneer) porcelain enamel—wine-color for upper striping and panels, cream below—and glass blocks. Red and green neon illuminate the glass blocks (the whole front is flood-lighted), while powder blue neon outlines the sign letters, and the marquee carries red and green neon trim. The Wagner attraction boards carry three lines accommodating 6- and 8-inch letters.

Both of the marquees and sign work illustrated are by the Boy Hansen Lustrolite Company of Davenport, Ia.

Notes on the Equipment Market

Metal Reflector Installations

IT IS REPORTED by Heyer-Shultz, Inc., of Montclair, N. J., that more than 300 installations have already been made of their metal projection arc lamp reflectors. The installations include groups of theatres within circuits, and represent nearly all sections of the country. Installations also have been made at two studios—Warner and Universal.

New Service Contract

A NEW FORM of contract has been introduced by Altec Service Corporation on a nation-wide basis. The new contract covers the furnishing of repairs and replacement parts for projector mechanisms, arc lamps, arc supply generators, rectifiers, and related equipment. Its adoption follows a nine-month trial period in selected theatres. . . . Altec also reports closing of a contract with Lichtman Theatres, Inc., for servicing both the projection and sound equipment of the 22 theatres operated by this circuit in Washington, D. C., Virginia and North Carolina.

Projectors Presented

SOME OF THE rewards of popularity were recently realized by Jack Benny, radio and screen comedian, in the form of two DeVry 35-mm. sound projectors, presented by his agents; and to join in the presentation, according to C. H. Roloff of the DeVry Corporation, Chicago, employees of the DeVry organization, apparently all Benny fans, signed a large scroll expressing their admiration.

Cleaning the Front for Both Attractiveness and Economy

the ledges along side windows are cluttered up with odds and ends of this and that, including the cashier's personal belongings. Such things should invariably be kept in a drawer, or on a shelf out of sight.

The deal plate is ordinarily kept clean; however, it should be kept bright. Brass deal plates need daily polishing with a good grade of brass polish—one that does not contain too much abrasive, for excessive abrasive will scratch it. During the warm months sweaty hands will cause cloudy spots on the deal plate; these should be wiped off by the cashier with a soft rag as they appear.

One also occasionally notes box offices disfigured, and the theatre accordingly made to look dumpy, by torn curtains, and by ragged or dusty or faded price signs. Sometimes the curtains can be mended, or the signs cleaned up with thorough dusting (perhaps wiping with a damp rag), or with art gum; otherwise the only remedy, and it should not be postponed for long, is replacement.

As for the cleanliness and neatness of the cashier, that, supposedly, can be left to her, but it certainly is a matter that should be checked up on, visually.

Care of Entrance Doors

The doors leading into the building from the sidewalk or vestibule should be cleaned daily. The glass is to be cleaned in the same manner indicated for glass attraction panels. The hardware should be waxed, not polished with an oil, for any remaining film of oil gives a greasy feeling; moreover, the oil may get on patrons' clothes.

Kick plates are often neglected, despite the fact that if cleaned only once a week or so, they are susceptible to scratches, hence corrosion. A suitable metal polish should be used.

Cleaning of course won't take the place of paint or other necessary refinishing (incidentally, a material like Formica has advantages in this connection), but regular use of water and polishes will go far to postpone such refinishing. Here are some items that are to be emphasized in your cleaning instructions and practices, for they are notoriously neglected:

Sides of doors: Commonly thought to need no attention; however, drafts pull in an immense amount of dirt to collect on both the door edge and the jamb.

Door checks: Drafts also draw dirt into this mechanism, as well as along the top of the door.

Door saddles (thresholds): Metal saddles will tarnish if not kept clean with a suitable metal polish. But neglect here most frequently consists in failure, when polishing, to remove the polish from grooves and along the floor edge of the saddle. All liquid metal polishes contain chalk or a silicate, which dries white and looks sloppy when it collects in grooves and along the floor edge. Such polishes are of course available in various colors so that they won't show—but isn't their very use something of a confession? The dry polish can be quickly and easily removed merely by the application of a tooth brush.

In concluding this discussion of front cleaning, we offer this reminder: There is no substitute for water in general cleaning—water and elbow-grease. Soap is to some degree a solvent, but it is especially a lubricant—it makes your rag or brush slide easily. It's the water, mostly—the water and the rubbing—that does the job.

UPPER LEVEL SEAT SPACING

GREAT care should be taken to adhere to the dimensions given below as a minimum for the back-to-back spacing on stepped platforms of upper level seating. The required back-to-back dimension should increase as the difference in levels between seating platforms becomes greater, owing to the fact that the overhang of the chair backs directly ahead in these instances occur at a more encroaching position as the stepping heights increase.

Difference in Seating Platform Levels	Minimum Back-to-Back Spacing
4 inches to 5 inches	32½ inches
5 " " 6 "	33 "
6 " " 7 "	33½ "
7 " " 8 "	34 "
8 " " 9 "	34½ "
9 " " 10 "	35 "
10 " " 11 "	35½ "
11 " " 12 "	36 "

The spacing indicated holds for chair back thicknesses of one inch or less. Additional thickness increases the above figures an amount equal to the added thickness.

Mezzanine Distinction

Although the table shows level differences of 9 inches and over, it is not advisable to design seating requiring such differences. Seating levels which are kept within approximately 8½ inches produce an upper seating tier which may be termed mezzanine or loge quality. Greater level differences cause a steepness remindful of a balcony classification, associated with less desirable seating. Platform level differences of 8½ inches and less do not require a sceond step riser between platforms. These second or intermediate risers have proven to be dangerous and most inconvenient for aisle traffic.

Mezzanine or loge quality seating can be a featured and desirable part of the theatre seating. It produces a maximum amount of good seating within a minimum of building cubage; however, it must be kept in mind that the recommended minimum platform level differences are possible only if the main floor slope, vertical screen position and the location of upper level seating are properly designed. Proper floor slope, screen and sightline design can reduce the internal theatre height about 30% below that which may be necessary if a rule-of-thumb method of determining the floor slope is used.

Noise Reduction in Areas Near Auditorium

IN the design of small theatres seating from 600 to 800 persons on one floor, the lounge and the standee space are sometimes combined, to afford as much flexibility as possible within the limits of a relatively compact plan.

Bringing the lounge and standee space together as essentially a single unit of the theatre involves a noise problem which must receive careful attention in the early stages of planning. Conversation is the principal source of annoyance and often proves very distracting to patrons sitting in the last few rows of seats.

Lounge at Rear of Auditorium

The lounge portion of a standee area (obviously a major source of interference) can be shielded physically and acoustically from the main seating area by the use of a partially dividing partition. Acoustical treatment is the second consideration and requirement in an auditorium design of this type. Carpeting of the entire lounge and standee area naturally furnishes a limited amount of sound absorption, but by no means the total quantity needed in the average case. Acoustical material is also required, and several methods of treatment may be employed, depending upon the artistic effect desired. The ceiling of the standee and lounge space may be covered with an efficient acoustical tile.

Selection and Use of Materials

The wood fibre materials available in board and plank forms and precolored or textured, may also be used to very good advantage. These materials are, of course, only moderate absorbents and for that reason it may be necessary to cover both the wall and ceiling areas in order to gain a percentage noise reduction equivalent to that which a highly efficient acoustical tile used only on the ceiling might yield.

The dividing partition referred to above, for separating the lounge space from the main seating area, can also be constructed of an acoustical material which will act to absorb noise on the lounge side and to eliminate sound reflections on the screen side. —C. C. P.

ACOUSTIC NEEDS TODAY

"ACOUSTICAL SCIENCE has advanced farther in the past ten years than in the preceding ten thousand." This quotation from a recent issue of the Architectural Forum is especially pertinent to the present technique of theatre design.

A theoretical foundation for much of this work was laid some 30 years ago by Professor Wallace Sabine of Harvard. Not, however, until the critical requirements of such modern developments as talking pictures and radio brought us face to face with many new problems, did we become fully aware of its importance.

A Decade of Progress

Whether or not it was realized at the time, the motion picture industry was confronted with a major obstacle in presenting sound to the public before 1930, because more than 75 per cent of the theatres already built in this country were not suitable acoustically for the showing of sound motion pictures.

It is perhaps for this reason that the term good acoustics has become more or less synonymous with the use of acoustical materials. Architectural design also can aid in the assurance of good sound and, if the planning starts early enough, the design can greatly simplify the problem.

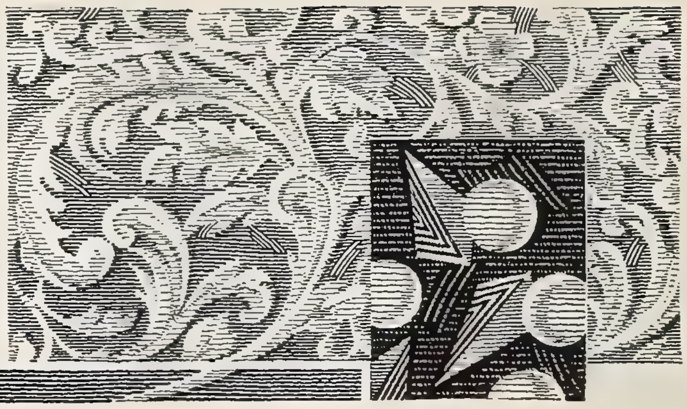
Better Use of Materials

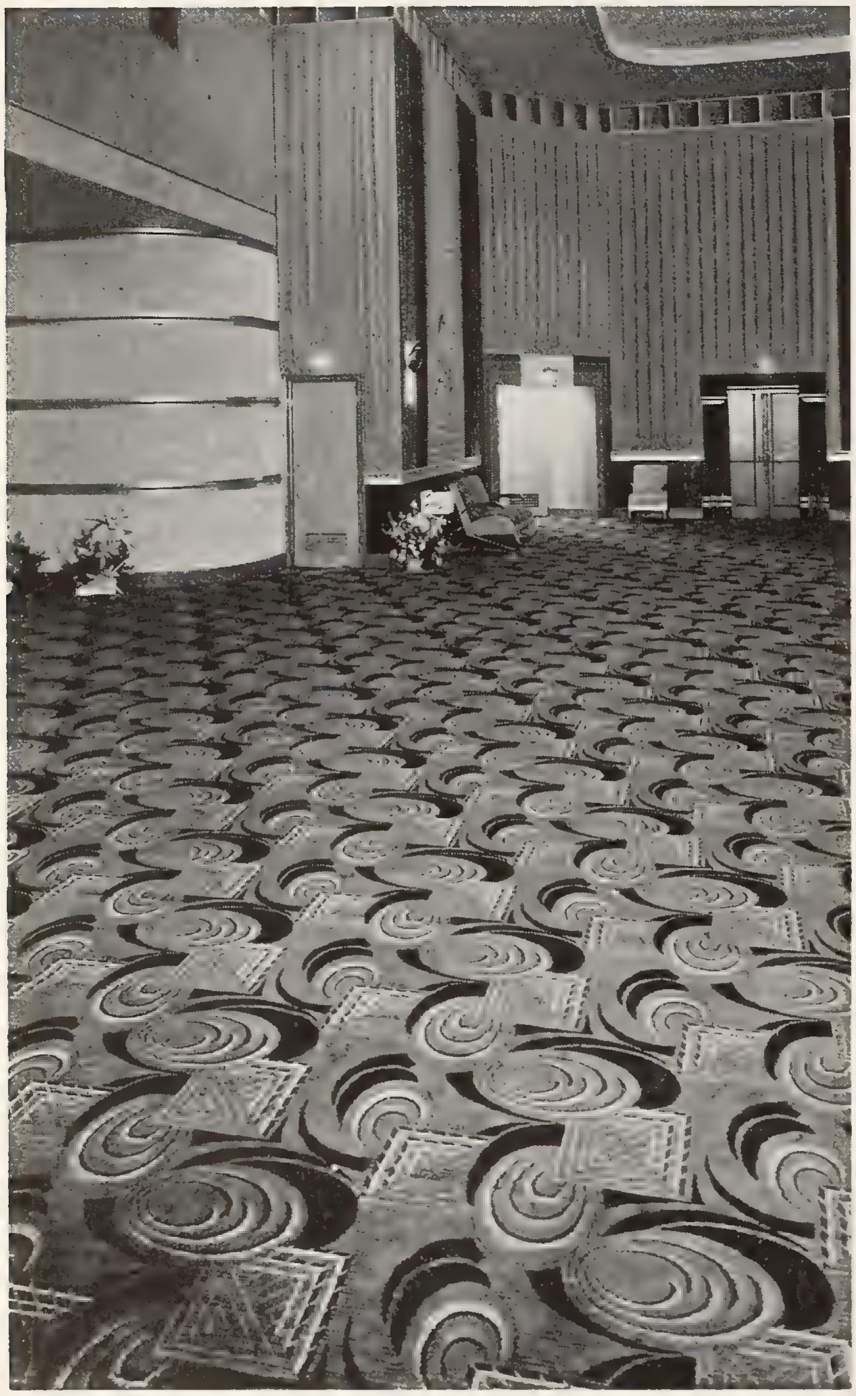
Both amount and placement of the material used is important; also of critical character is the kind for the particular auditorium conditions met with. Sometimes more acoustical material has been used than is necessary. In some cases the wall areas, and perhaps the ceiling areas as well, are almost completely covered with acoustical materials which absorb a very large percentage of the total sound energy striking their surfaces. These theatres sound "dead," fail to lend the "support" to sound that is so necessary for vitality, naturalness, and most pleasing reproduction. In other theatres too little material is used, or it is improperly placed.

True, we have come a long way since 1929 . . . the need for good acoustical conditions is more thoroughly understood and more widely appreciated. To meet today's sound consciousness and take advantage of recording and reproduction advances, acoustics must be given more measured attention, with the use of studied geometrical forms, and a more strategic placement of acoustical materials.

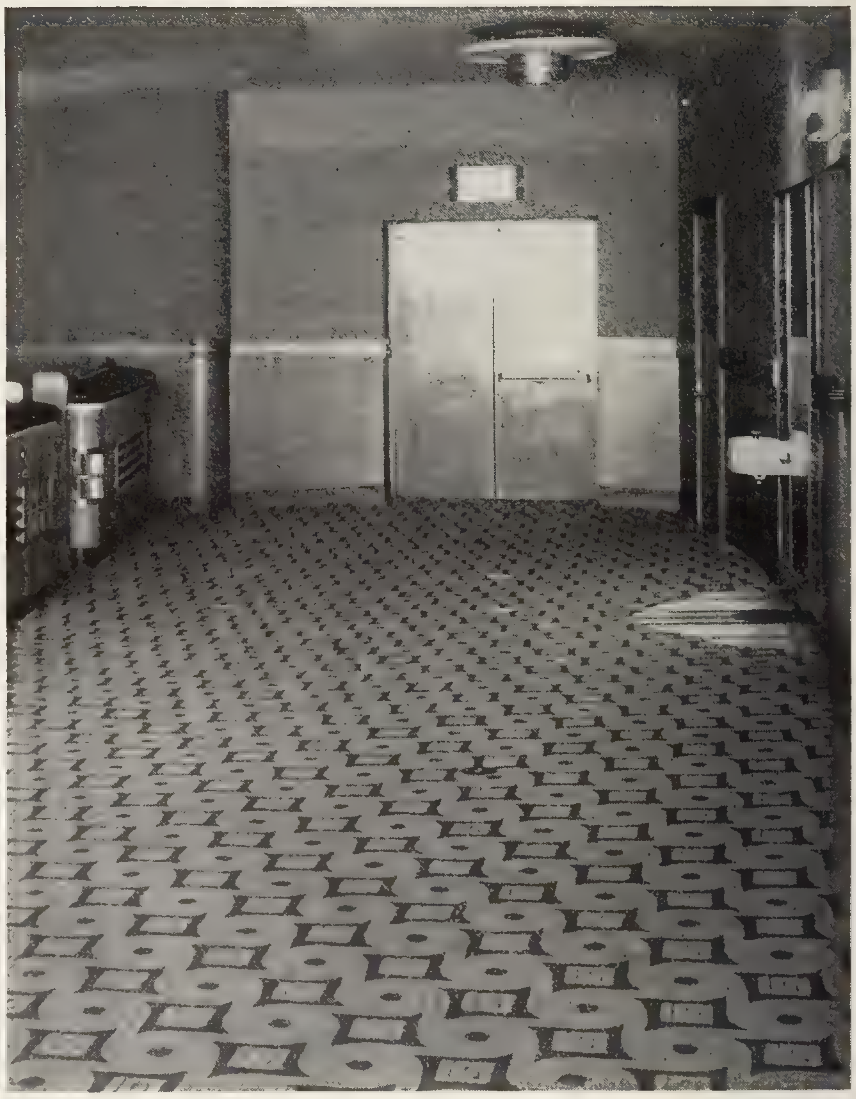
CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.





The Decorative Role of Carpets



WALK into your theatre sometime to note this: How, as you step into foyer from lobby or vestibule, the carpet occupies approximately two-thirds of the vertical arc of your vision. It substantially remains that conspicuous until you arrive relatively a few feet from the auditorium wall or standee rail, as the case may be. And of course in ascending stairs to a balcony, one's eyes are almost wholly upon the steps just ahead.

The visual prominence of carpeting in all of the public areas of the theatre except the auditorium-proper (or seating area), is a striking fact, and a highly significant one, not merely from the point of view of maintenance, but with respect to decorative treatment. The photographs above (the lefthand view is of the Shore theatre in Cleveland, the other of the Lane in Philadelphia, both carpeted in Alexander Smith Crestwood grade Velvet) illustrate the importance of carpeting as a means of introducing decorative pattern conspicuously.

This function of carpeting becomes particularly valuable for the creation of a luxurious, cordial, interesting interior with walls more or less plain—as so often, for sake of economy and modern styling, they are today—finished in pastel-tinted plaster, or possibly with wood or pressed-fibre veneer.

The larger the space—for example, a long or broad foyer, perhaps continuous with the standee area, as in the Shore theatre—the greater the role of carpeting as a source of decorative pattern. Walls are likely to be relatively distant, decorative details are lost. The carpeting, on the other hand, is always immediately beneath one's eyes, and usually predominant in one's vision for considerable distance ahead.

Controlling Power Line Circuits

● Pointing out installation and operating procedure for safety and efficiency in providing current supply to both projection and sound equipment

By AARON NADELL

POWER LINE arrangements used throughout the theatre, and more particularly in the projection room, are required to conform with certain elaborate and detailed regulations relating to safety. As a result there exists an excessive tendency to feel that the regulations take care of all requirements, and that nothing more need be done in connection with power circuits than to see that they meet the demands of the local code.

Unfortunately, there is wide space for good and poor practices within the limits of any code. Additionally, there are certain very common poor operating practices which, while not so intended, result in effect in temporary violation of some code provisions—and the word "temporary" as here used may mean for a period of several months or longer.

Poor practices with respect to power wiring can be divided into two general categories: those that produce unnecessary interruptions to the show, and those that add needlessly to the costs of operation.

Fusing Methods

Improper fusing is a conspicuous and very common fault in the first-mentioned group, and one that often extends to the point of definite violation of safety provisions. Faulty fusing has several causes. One is simple carelessness either in ordering fuse replacements, or in putting the fuses where they can be found instantly after they have been received. If replacements are not ordered in ample time, and a full stock of spares kept constantly on hand, there may be no choice when a fuse burns out except to substitute one of too large a rating. In this connection, it should be noted that when a short circuit burns out a fuse one of the first common steps in repair is to insert another fuse and see if that burns out also. In the course of further repairs several other fuses may be inserted and destroyed before the short is finally found and cured.

It is difficult to use fuses more economically because a short circuit may constitute an emergency in which the most important requirement is not to save 10c or so but to find and fix the trouble with the least possible delay. The consequence is that a single emergency, perhaps one of relatively slight importance, may seriously deplete the stock of spares. The necessity for carrying a very ample stock of spares at all times, and for ordering replacements promptly, is self-evident.

At the same time no stock of spares, however generous, is useful in an emergency if replacements of the right type and rating are not placed where all personnel concerned can find them instantly. The best place to store spare fuses is right inside the fuse box, switchboard or cabinet where they are used.

If the right spare is not in the theatre, or not instantly at hand, the natural and proper tendency in an emergency is to insert another fuse of the wrong rating—practically always of a higher rating. A man may do that intending to correct the matter later, after he has cured the emergency. In the course of further repairs, which fully occupy his attention, his thoughts are directed to other parts of the equipment and other and more elaborate problems. When he has finally fixed his trouble, as likely as not he has completely forgotten the oversize fuse installed at the beginning of the work. The result is permanent overfusing, perhaps to the extent of constituting a definite violation of the code.

Overfusing, whether within or without the code, is a definite threat to the continuity of operation. The nature of that threat can readily be understood by reference to the accompanying diagram.

In that sketch, showing a portion of the connections of a common type switchboard, the main line is fused at 20 amperes. At left is shown a power unit, which may be rectifier supplying loud speakers or exciter lamps, requiring 10 amperes and correctly fused at 15. At lower right is an amplifier taking 5 amperes and properly fused at 8. Top right is a lighting circuit carrying three 50-watt lamps, needing 1.5 amperes, and fused at 10. In that circuit, 10 ampere fuses are oversize, and in consequence if there is trouble in the lighting line, the amplifier and the power unit, in spite of being on completely different circuits, will stop working.

This is a matter of simple arithmetic. Under normal conditions a total of 16.5 amperes flows through the main line 20-ampere fuses. Now suppose some fault develops which causes the lighting line to short-circuit to the point of drawing, say, 8 amperes. The lighting line fuses, being of 10 ampere rating, will not burn out. Consequently there will be no obvious indication of trouble in that particular line. The lights will go out, but the amplifier and rectifier will also stop working, because under the circumstances named the 20-ampere line fuses will be called upon to pass 23 amperes. The switchboard will then present one of those so-called "mysterious" conditions in which the trouble skips the light line fuses and burns out the main fuses instead. No equipment connected with that switchboard will work. If 20-ampere fuses are put in again, they will burn out again. At that point there are just two things to do to restore operation. One is to take time out to run down the real nature of the difficulty. The other is try the effect of 30-ampere fuses in the main line. The latter is obviously tempting, with the show out of action, and represents what is generally done.

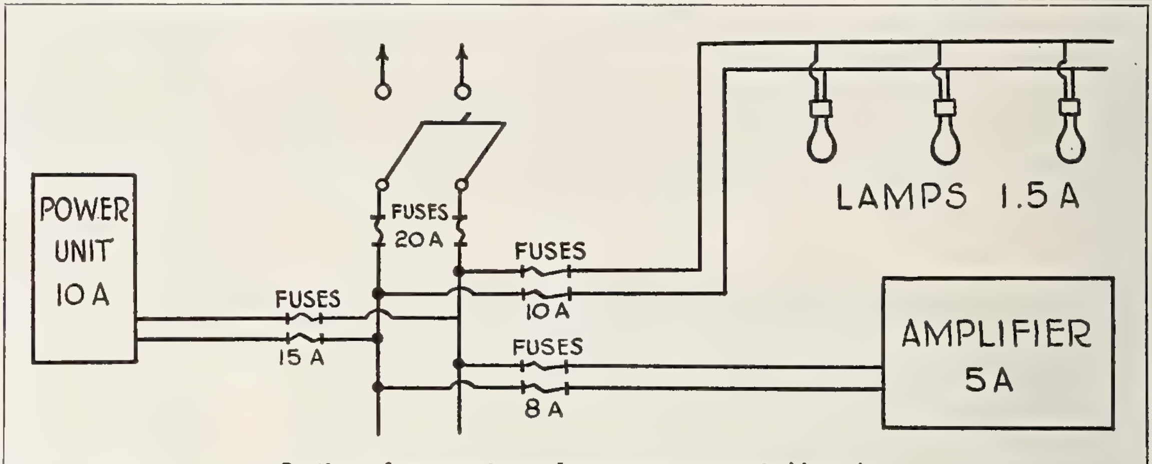
Supposing that 30-ampere fuses have been installed, operation will be restored of course, except that possibly one 50-watt lamp will fail to light. Chances are, someone will decide that a socket is bad, but why the light fuse didn't burn out and the main fuse did is just one of those mysteries. In very many cases nothing further will be done; the show will continue to operate with 30-ampere fuses in the line, and the condition of overfusing will have become just that much worse. The lamp line defect, unless it progresses to the point of causing another breakdown, will continue to waste power.

Overfusing in this sample instance may have resulted from some previous trouble in the light line, when the proper replacement (a 3-amp. fuse) was not at hand, and someone inserted a 10-amp fuse instead and left it there. There may, however, have been another cause—ignorance which is not the fault of any one individual, and not to be corrected by individual care, but arises out of basically inadequate operating procedures. Many power switchboards have spare fuse blocks to which additional circuits are wired from time to time, and proper notations are not always added to the switchboard blueprint. Often there is no blueprint.

It is easy enough to look at the diagram and add amperages, but the man confronted with a power switchboard that has undergone repeated modifications in the past may have no knowledge at all of how much current flows in each branch when the full load is applied, and no way of finding out without elaborate and prolonged investigation. He can only fuse such a board by guesswork, that is, by trial and error until all fuses hold.



Portion of connections of common type switchboard.

All switchboards and fuseboards should show connection diagrams or data, and not even the smallest change in wiring should ever be made without noting that change clearly, setting forth its details in such manner that it will be plain to new men at some future time when the entire personnel of the theatre may have changed. The trial and error method of fusing can only prevent underfusing. It makes overfusing almost a certainty.

Proper and necessary wiring records are so seldom made because men feel they can remember such things. In the course of years, as personnel shifts from theatre to theatre, the industry becomes overcrowded with theatres that have "mysterious" wiring arrangements.

A valuable precaution in such a theatre is to pay for a bit of extra overtime to trace out and diagram unknown wiring, until all its details are as plain as the diagram. The value of this precaution goes far beyond mere fusing. The information gained facilitates repairs of every kind, shortens the duration of emergency stoppages, and reduces the cost of future alterations and of installing new items of equipment.

Incorrect fusing, and failure to record full details of wiring changes, are the principle power faults resulting in unnecessary breakdowns. A third is failure to use voltage regulators when circumstances call for them. Theatre men often consider that excessive line voltage is a problem for the utility company to handle, which is true in a sense; but the power company would have to improve the voltage supply to an entire community, whereas the theatre would need only to add corrective regulators to certain circuits. Patents pending all principal foreign countries utility company to get around to financing the infinitely more elaborate equipment they would have to install saves no shows in the meanwhile. Further, theatres using apparatus some years old, which was designed for 110 volts, may find that their local utility company has followed the national trend of jacking up the supply to 115 or 120 volts, with consequent danger of damage to the theatre machinery. Here, again, voltage regulators are indicated.

Wiring Practices

Improper wiring practices inside or outside the code, which do not endanger the show, may nevertheless add to the long-time cost of operation. Among these are skimping on wire size, skimping on conduit size, failure to balance lines in some situations, and, again, failure to use voltage controls when needed.

Whenever wiring is installed the wire gauge should be not only as large as the code requires, but much larger. This costs more for wire, but no more for installation labor. At some future time the same wires can be used to supply power to an additional circuit; the subsequent installation is thus simplified and made much less costly. If no wire anywhere in the place is larger than just large enough for the work it is doing at the moment, new lines must be run from the switchboard for subsequent changes and additions, and the overall cost is likely to be several hundred per cent cent greater than the cost of using oversize wires to begin with.

Much the same is true of conduit. Where it is oversize, pulling through larger wires, or additional pairs, is very simple work and goes very quickly. Using pipe that is barely adequate means that sooner or later additional pipe runs will have to be put in.

Another point in connection with conduit is the advisability of including T fittings and C fittings where they are not needed but possibly may be needed sometime in the future. This adds very little to the cost of a given job, and detracts enormously from the cost of future changes. The extra fittings are, of course, effectively sealed in conformity with the local code until the time when they are put to use.

In some locations, the theatre may be buying power at a needlessly high rate because lines are not properly balanced as to load distribution or power factor. The power company, or the local utility regulating body, should be consulted whenever the theatre is paying more than the minimum local rate for a given type of service, and wiring changes made until the minimum rate is granted.

In some situations also, operating costs are greatly increased because of excessive line voltage, which can produce serious harm without actually causing a breakdown. It shortens the life of a great variety of electrical equipment, from lamp bulbs to amplifiers and motors. There are not a few situations in which the long-time cost of installing regulating controls is small compared with the eventual cost of omitting them.

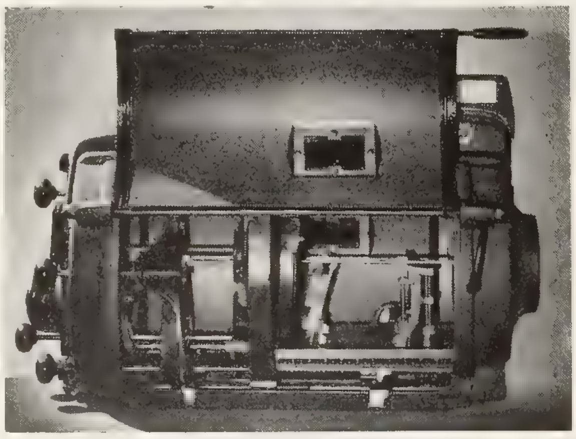
Medium Capacity D.C. Lamp Using Special Power Unit

A NEW MEDIUM capacity d.c. projection arc lamp designed for theatres of from 400 to 800 seats, and for screens up to 18 feet in width, has just been placed on the market by National Theatre Supply Company. Known as the Simplex "High," the lamp is intended to deliver a service intermediate between those obtained from low-intensity, and from low voltage high intensity (suprex carbon arc) sources.

Its features of construction and design include use of a specially made carbon, association with a power supply rectifier to constitute a coordinated electrical unit, carbon feed in which the motor acts as its own relay, and unusual concentration of the magnetic field directly upon the flame.

Approximate output of the lamp is said to be 2,000 lumens, which places it nearly midway between comparative estimates of 1,000 lumens for low intensity and 3,500-3,800 for low current high intensity arcs.

In addition to a standard 7 mm. low current high-intensity carbon, the lamp uses a 6-mm. Orotip C carbon of new design, which it is asserted, will not develop carbide at its tip. The light is reflected from an 11⅜ths-inch reflector of 4 inches working distance, placed 30 inches from the aperture, and rated at an optical speed of F. 2.5, magnification, 7½.

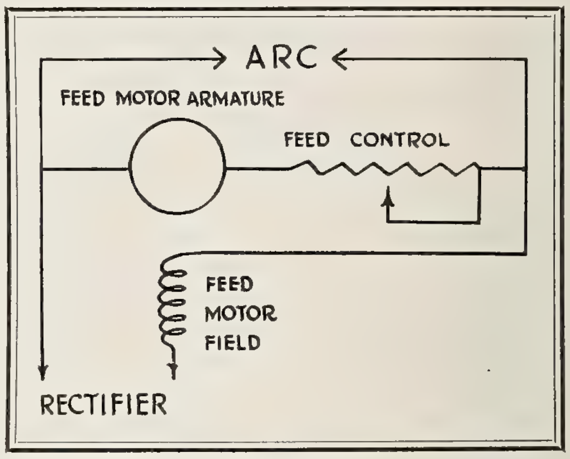


Intermediate lamp with housing open.

Reflector and arc positions are vertically and horizontally adjusted by controls confined to the rear of the housing. The arc is struck from working position by flipping a simple spring-controlled contactor. The reflected flame is shown in upright position on a guide card at the top of the housing, and can also be viewed directly through the customary dark window.

A special power supply unit (the electrical characteristics of which have also been confided to motor-generator manufacturers) is said to be desirable, in view of the low current densities used, to assure stability of operation when a hard spot in the carbon is encountered. For this reason the lamphouse and its rectifier, one rectifier for each lamp, are at present to be sold as a single unit. The rectifier utilizes four standard tungar tubes, draws 1,940 watts from the a.c. line at normal operation, and delivers 27 volts, 40 amperes to the carbons. Its special characteristic lies in the design of its transformer, details of which (and of the reasons that make such design desirable) are not available at present. This data will be made public shortly.

Carbon feed, at the rate of 5.9 inches in the case of the positive and 3.75 inches for the negative, is secured by the motor circuit indicated in the accompanying diagram. In this circuit, the arc performs essentially the function of a speed control rheostat in series with the field of a shunt-wound motor. When the gap widens, the current through the field decreases, and the motor accordingly speeds up, shortening the gap. As the arc grows shorter, its current is augmented, and in flowing through the field causes the motor to slow down. This is of course the normal action of d.c. motor speed control, increase of field current slowing the motor, and vice versa.



Concentration of the magnetic field upon the vicinity of the arc flame is secured by using ferrous metal for a small ash collector placed directly beneath the gap. Lines of magnetic force originating behind the reflector are concentrated on this iron contrivance, and hence upon the arc.

New D.C. Lamps For Small Theatres

DEVELOPMENT of a new intermediate type projection arc lamp is reported by The Strong Electric Corporation of Toledo, for marketing early this year. The lamp will be of the reflector type, using a 6 x 7-mm. trim. Power consumption at the arc will be of the order of 1,000-2,000 watts, and carbon consumption will average approximately 4.8 inches per carbon per hour, according to the manufacturer.

Power will be supplied to the arc through a rectifier having characteristics electrically co-ordinated with the lamp requirements and rated to draw from 17 to 18 amperes from a 110-volt a.c. line under standard operating conditions.

The new lamp has been designed especially for theatres of less than 800 seats. Design features include rigid magnetic control of the arc, use of a newly developed special carbon, and self-controlled feed motor operating without relays.

THE PUBLIC

IS BEING TAUGHT TO DEMAND More Light

MORE LIGHT is the slogan of the day. From newspapers and magazines, the lecture platform and the school, the public is being taught the sight saving value of plenty of light.

Put your theater in step with this upward trend in light intensity. It has popular appeal. People like to enter a theater in which they can see their way to their seats. And they can do just that in the many theaters that are now equipped with high intensity projection.

Think this over if you still have low intensity projection. Those first minutes of blindness result from the low level of general illumination necessitated by lack of light on the screen. Don't let poor lighting drive your patrons to other theaters. Install Simplified High Intensity projection and attract that growing body of theater-goers who appreciate plenty of light.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

WHY THE TERM PROJECTIONIST INSTEAD OF "MACHINE OPERATOR"

FROM TIME to time I am asked just why I am so insistent upon the term projectionist, as against that of motion picture machine operator. Not so long ago I received from A. L. Tompkins of Boston, a letter in which this paragraph occurred:

"Some years back you created the title 'projectionist,' which is now pretty generally adopted in this and other countries, in place of the old title 'moving picture machine operator.' May I now ask that you explain exactly what difference must exist to justify discarding the older title and substituting the later one?"

A perfectly fair question. Broadly speaking, first of all when the older title was brought into being in the late years of the past century, projection was a very simple matter—very simple indeed. Beyond the ability to trim a simple, crude, weak arc lamp, make a splice in film (and what a splice most of them were!), "twist a crank" (the projector was hand-driven), and rewind the film, the "operator" was required to know little, and that was just about all he did know, too. He "operated a machine," and that was all he did. Wages ranged from $10 to the dizzy height of $15 a week. In 1905 I started, in Chicago, at $14 a week, $18 being the top pay anywhere in that city.

But as time passed, the need for additional knowledge increased until the machine operator title no longer fitted the job. The man who was able to do full justice to the reproduction of the rapidly improving pictures, had to have some basic understanding of electrical, magnetic and mechanical action, optics, and other things. He no longer merely operated a single simple machine. He was in charge of a light source many times more powerful than those of the old days. He had to get better definition of image, for pictorial values were becoming more subtle. He became responsible for productions costing hundreds of thousands, perhaps a million, instead of hurriedly made, cheap crude little pictures a reel or two in length. And the motion picture's early public was not hard to please.

To perform the exacting duties incident to modern projection, in the best possible way, requires both knowledge and conscientiousness, and in the very nature of things, these are encouraged only when the man performing those duties has real pride in the excellence of what he is producing.

The modern projectionist must have a liking for, and pride in, the job he is doing. He demands good pay and good working conditions, and the kind of man required is attracted only by good pay and good working conditions. He is entitled to an identification that indicates the skill and responsibility exacted of him.

[The term projectionist is of course established now—not only in the motion picture field itself, but outside of it; newspapers, for example, use it quite commonly. The term theatre operator, moreover, has come into use to identify the proprietor of a theatre. It is synonymous with the word exhibitor, and used as much. To say operator when we refer to a person in charge of projection would now often be confusing.—THE EDITOR.]

LOUIS FRAPPIER: HE PLAYED A GREAT ROLE 'BACKSTAGE'

ANOTHER OLDTIMER has gone. Away back in 1881 a son was born of French-Canadian parents. His grandmother was a daughter of the Great Chief of the Algonquin tribe of American Indians. He was given the name of Louis Simon; the surname, Frappier.

Few in our business knew Louis Frappier, but he was indeed an important person in it for many, many years. He became superintendent of the factory of the Precision Machine Company, which created the Simplex projector. When the Precision Machine Company and the Nicholas Power Company joined forces under the name of International Projector Corporation, Mr. Frappier became superintendent of manufacturing for the new corporation. Later he was made a vice president of the company.

I am one of those fortunate enough to have had a long personal acquaintance with Mr. Frappier. He was a quiet, friendly man and highly expert in matters mechanical. His part in the development of Simplex projectors and of their precision-fabrication is well recognized, though very few theatre men had heard of him. His contributions to the technical advancement of projection were many and steady indeed.

LOUIS SIMON FRAPPIER

The members of the company with which he was associated must certainly feel a heavy loss in this regard, but also theirs is the loss of an associate whose kindly ways endeared him to every member of the organization.

Mr. Frappier's death on December 19, 1939, came with shocking suddenness. Some hours after his usual day in his office, he suffered a heart attack. His place will be hard to fill.

MAKE THE PRESENT RELEASE PRINT WORK!

FROM IRL GORDON, projectionist of the Forum theatre in Akron, Ohio (and a wide-awake, progressive one, too), comes the following, which is respectfully commended to the attention of Hollywood:

"Out in Hollywood the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences asks projectionist reaction to the Standard Release Print leader, with suggestions as to possible revision. All very well, perhaps, but instead of trying to revise the standard print situation, why not first give the original set-up a chance? The Academy, which is there on the ground floor, might well expend a bit of energy in an attempt to get the present standard adopted by Hollywood studios!

"For example, quoting from specifications: 'From start mark to the picture the leader shall contain frame lines which do not cross the sound track.' Were even this much really carried out it would assist projectionists materially, since they then might at least frame the leader after the numeral had been sliced out in previous runs.

"Nothing of the sort, however. To we lowlies in projection rooms it seems that all Hollywood committees imagine leaders will last forever; that they are just as good after weeks of field service as when new. To cure this mistaken view they should examine some of them after just two or three theatre runs. Huh, and a couple more huhs! Under this condition if there were frame lines to serve as a guide, at least the projectionist could spot in the picture in frame. As is it can't be done, except by accident, and audiences are the goat.

"Fox inserts a nice strip of transparent film between nine and ten numerals—just nice transparent film—no frame lines at all.

"In my experience, film takes the worst possible beating in this zone. It usually reaches this theatre with a misframe in this section [Presumably meaning the leader.—F. H. R.], which means a splice after the first run. Why a transparent bit of film is past my understanding.

"However, Columbia, not to be outdone in confusing the projectionist, proceeds to omit all frame lines between numerals through the entire length of the leader. When they do replace the leader, they use some punched frame line stuff with no numerals. I remember in one instance I had five misframe leaders in one production! Query: Is it so costly to print frame lines?

The Mysterious Lady of MGM

"We all remember the mystery of the identity of the gal on the leaders of MGM prints. I believe it eventually was called the 'lab girl's friend' and was used as some sort of development check, which was all well and good—we enjoyed her as scenery when threading up—but she must have been a traveling salesman's daughter for now she has journeyed from the beginning of the leader clear up to between the three and picture-start section, which might not be so bad if they would always eliminate the four to eight or so frames she occupies, instead of adding them to the section.

"Leaders certainly are a mess nowadays, so a word to the Academy: Double or even quadruple your efforts to get present specifications adopted—really adopted—and let us give them a try for a year or so, remembering that there really are theatres other than first-run, and their patrons are justly entitled to have decent changeovers made.

"Also, why not include changeover marks on trailers? There is no need for leaders on trailers, but how in blazes are we to bring in the following reel?"

To every word of which I enter an earnest amen. Very many complaints have reached me of exactly the same thing, but this one is so well put that, coupled with the fact that Gordon is a distinctly high-class projectionist, it deserves full publicity. Every sin complained of exists.

I too say to the Academy, the present set-up is not at all bad, or would not be if it were really put into full practice. Producers like to have their creations well presented. That assumption seems logical. All right then, pay attention to things essential to good presentation, remembering that for every theatre that can have first-run service, there are many that cannot.

THE OLD QUESTION OF WHAT SIZE IMAGE

PAUL BECK of Effingham, Ill., asks, "What size screen image would you approve in an auditorium measuring 80 feet deep by 54 feet in width?"

Of this matter I have written many times, but reiteration most certainly is needed. In many theatres are found auditoriums which would be far, far better served by an image of less area. A relatively small picture will of course serve patrons seated in the forward best. With respect to rear rows, the screen image area need only be sufficiently large to permit those of normal eyesight to view all details of the picture in comfort and with-

Here, however, enters an item that but seldom has adequate consideration—namely, kind and amount of screen illumination. The Projection Practice Committee of the SMPE has approved 15 foot-candles (the exact term used is lamberts, but the latter term is better understood and serves our purpose very well) at the screen center, the best available illumination being that, which means approximately a 10-candle-power average, considering the screen area as a whole.

However (and here is the catch), the amount of illumination (or shall we say visibility?) interlocks with candle-power in this way: A screen image illuminated at an average of 10 foot-candles of pure white light will be much more plainly visible as to details at a distance, than will one illuminated at 10 foot-candles of light that is not pure white, but has an admixture of some tint—amber, for example. Again I set forth the Projection Practice Committee's recommendations, which is that pure white light is pre-eminently superior to any other for motion picture propection. We may, in view of all this, safely set forward proper screen illumination as 15 foot-candles of pure white light at the screen center.

Now as to image size in Friend Beck's case: The auditorium is 54 feet wide, hence a screen surface that is highly diffusive is very important. (In this connection, since space limitations will not admit of lengthy explanation, Beck is referred to his Bluebook, where under Screens—pages 146 to 166—the screen is discussed, with a table giving the reflection power of various standard surfaces at various viewing angles.) As the question is stated, I would answer as follows:

Provided the screen be illuminated as before indicated, an image 10 feet wide would be visible in detail at 80 feet to patrons of normal eyesight without strain. As to such an image "looking small," that argument has little value—provided no objects too large are near the screen.

It is doubtful if the light source in this case could be forced high enough to supply 15 foot-candles at the screen center, or that the light would be pure white. Hence, while a 10-foot-wide image would best serve the front half of such an auditorium, a somewhat larger one possibly would serve better, considering the seating space as a whole. I therefore would suggest something between a 14- and 18-foot image, considering both as the extreme.

In a situation like this, one might do well to borrow three optical systems from a dealer and try each size for a week before finally bordering the screen permanently, using a cheap black cloth border during the trial. Inquiries from patrons would then pretty definitely settle which is best.

PROCESS PROJECTION AND WHY IT IS USED

FOR SOME reason, during the past few months something like a dozen letters have been received asking for an explanation of process projection. Just what is it? they all ask.

Process projection is a term applied to the projection of backgrounds in production. Mr. Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council of the Academy, describes the method in this way:

"As you know, most scripts contain scenes out of doors, located at points distant from Hollywood. To obtain these outdoor shots it is often necessary to send the entire cast, personnel, and equipment to distant locations. This is, as you can readily understand, expensive. In the case of other types of scenes it is very expensive to properly and truly reproduce the background in the studios.

"For this reason, to effect economies in production and to expand the possibilities of motion picture technique both artistically and technically, it is the procedure at present to send a camera crew to obtain the proper backgrounds at the distant location. These backgrounds are then projected upon a translucent screen in the studio with the foreground action taking place in front of the screen during the projection of the background upon the screen. The camera photographing both the action and the background operates in synchronism with the projector which is located behind the screen.

"There are of course many technical and artistic problems involved—proper blending of the foreground and the background lighting, steadiness of the projected picture, a minimum of light variation on the screen, etc."

THEATRE TELEVISION EXPLAINED IN PLAIN TERMS

ATTENTION is directed to the book on television which Aaron Nadell has just written. It is designed not so much to deal with actual theatre equipments and processes as to teach fundamentals, and this my good friend Nadell does very well—and (very important) does so in language that can be readily understood by the average projectionist.

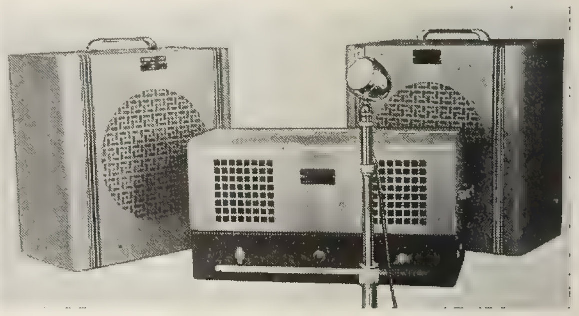
I therefore commend it to your attention. The price is low and the contents well worthy of study in view of the apparent fact that television will ere long form a portion of our theatre programs, at least in the larger houses.

New P. A. System Series Especially For Theatre Use

A NEW LINE of public address systems specifically suited to theatre requirements has been announced by the National Theatre Supply Company. They are intended for use with screeno and similar games, for lobby displays, box office ballyhoo, or vaudeville or other stage presentations.

Each system consists basically of apparatus providing a source of sound, such as phonograph or microphone, an amplifier or combination of amplifiers, and a set of loudspeakers.

Crystal, dynamic or Western Electric microphones are available, according to the choice of the purchaser. The basic amplifier arrangements may be combined or re-adapted to meet special theatre requirements. Their undistorted output varies from 8 to 35 watts, according to the type of system. Loudspeakers are of the permanent magnet type.



Radio Development and Research Corporation designed the equipment, and the systems will be known as RDR systems.

PRICE per HOUR

THAT inevitable lock-step by which the amusement industry, of these mechanized days, must progress is being demonstrated again in hesitant television. The order is: one, two, three, a step of invention, a step of the art to accept new capacity, and a glide of the business to cash it—it seems to be a waltz.

Television just now is standing on tentative toe trying to catch the beat, while the trap drummer is fumbling for his score.

The sale of television sets has been, most obviously, not up to the expectations denoted by the fanfare of the commercial debut of a few months ago. Many are the explanations, most convincing among them the observation of Dr. W. G. R. Baker of General Electric that solution of business problems must await technical advances which will permit the distribution of receiving sets to the public at lower prices.

Once again—as has been so often remarked before by The Herald in other connotation—There is no substitute for circulation.

This must be true of all the arts which address themselves to the many and in competition with the elaborate and grandiose expressions of media nourished on the mass buying power, stimulated by the extravagances of the mass-wish. That means, among other things, that the grandeurs of the motion picture screen are making it more difficult for television to command that attention which can get it under way.

TELEVISION today, in terms of cost, limits its sale of sets to that small category of customers who have been found to be the only important buyers of expensive radio sets, mostly persons with a gadget interest and earning between three and six thousand dollars a year. The poor and the rich both buy the cheap sets, the poor because they can pay no more, the rich because the little they want of the radio, mostly fights, sports reports and election returns, can be had a-plenty from a trivial set. The rich are an unimportant market. The poor will buy television only at a price—if they like it.

Price, for television, is quite as much a problem as program. This would seem to have meaning for the motion picture. Price per hour is probably the determining unit.

Amusement for the multitudes means quite as much quantity as quality; probably quantity is the more important.

Radio, with its equipment cost trending ever downward, costs pennies per kilowatt hour.

Motoring, also with its equipment costs declining, costs pennies per mile.

Journalism, much an amusement trade, and more especially in Sunday editions, ever offers more and more, in rotogravure and color, for pennies.

Fiction, through the rental library, has cut the cost of reading for the many, from dollars per volume to pennies per day.

The trend of the screen has been up and up—up in plant investments, up in operating costs, up in fact everywhere that production and distribution have been in control.

THE only compensating movement, an effort at adjustment calculated to meet the trends of competition and to realize upon the capacities of cost per hour of repetitive machine processes has been the much decried and much misunderstood "double bill" policy.

This has, in sequence, brought to flower an assortment of endeavours of production to "fill the bill", culminating in "Gone with the Wind", which is in the nature of a double bill on single billing. If one divides the running time into the admission price, for any one theatre, it will be discovered that the advance in price is more conspicuously apparent than arithmetically real.

When Tillie-the-Toiler, and her boy-friend, Joe Doakes, have shot the bank-roll on "The Wind" they will have been out long enough to call it a day, the evening will have been killed—and that's what they want.

"POUR LA PATRIE"

THE war, of which we have too much on printed page and radio, has been brought poignantly closer to us of Motion Picture Herald this week with a letter from Pierre Autre, our Paris correspondent, now in the service—"somewhere in France," and writing by candlelight on a field draughtsman's table:

". . . one morning, to get ourselves under cover from rain, we stepped into a farm. There were only two young women—two sisters—one had her husband mobilized and was alone to do all the farm's work—with a 5-year-old daughter. So her unmarried sister had left her parents to come and help her. They offered us—we were 3—coffee and rum and explained that every day they had to get up at 5:30 A. M. and did not finish their work before 10 P. M., when they milked their cows. They had only a boy of 15 to help them.

"In spite of this hard life, they were very gay and did not complain a bit. They had no time to think of face powder, lip-red, etc.

"There are, I think, thousands of women like that in France now.

"And I was thinking of so many women of Paris who, before the war, could not suffer to wait for a bus when it rained."

DUE NOTICE

YOUR editor will hereafter demand a refund on all dinners, official or otherwise, at which carrots and peas are served mixed. It is submitted that this vain color seeking exhibitionism is gustatorially incompetent, dietetically irrelevant and pictorially immaterial. Also it is time that persons serving a square of yellow cake surmounted by a berry and a creamy carved bedoole shall be denied the right to call it a shortcake—the same being treasonably un-American and a pain in the neck.

$17,500,000 to Share

AN AGREEMENT on the manner and extent to which individual distributing companies will participate in withdrawals from the $17,500,000 maximum annual monetary export allocated by Great Britain to the film industry is expected to be reached within the next few days as a result of conferences held by executives of seven majors at New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. All but minor details have been settled.

The basis for the withdrawals will be the allocation to individual companies of a percentage equivalent to each company's share of the total business done in Britain the last two years.

Under Britain's regulations governing the withdrawals, the seven companies may withdraw up to 75 per cent of the $17,500,000 maximum in the first six months of the agreement. Thus a total of $13,125,000 may be withdrawn between Nov. 1, 1939 and May 1, 1940. The balance, or $4,375,000, may be withdrawn from May 1 to November 1, next.

Universal, which distributes through a British company, General Film Distributors, is not participating.

Streamlined Roadshows

THIS MIGHT be a chapter out of Horatio Alger.

Pressing economic conditions growing out of a narrowing foreign film market and foreign monetary restrictions now are bringing back the "roadshow," of a sort.

At the outset of the war it was feared that without the wide foreign markets and easy money restrictions an expensive picture was too much of a risk, that the investment could not be got back quickly. Not so now, however, with the birth of the "streamlined roadshow."

"Gone With the Wind" started the trend with some engagements playing on the old roadshow basis of two-a-day, reserved seats, while other theatres are playing the picture thrice daily with no reserved seats, "Wind's" four-hour length, of course, controlling the number of daily performances.

"The Blue Bird," Twentieth Century-Fox, opens a straight roadshow engagement at the Hollywood theatre, New York, on Friday night. Similar engagements in other cities will follow, starting with Detroit.

"Abraham Lincoln in Illinois," RKO, opens in Washington next week in another variation of the "streamlined roadshow." It will play continuously through the morning and afternoon with no reserved seats, and will be shown once each evening with all seats reserved. The same policy will be in force in other special engagements.

Echoes of a big-time roadshow of earlier days were heard this week when a reissue of "Hell's Angels," produced in 1930 by Howard Hughes at a cost of over $3,000,000, bowed in, "streamlined."

"Hell's Angels" was the only picture until "Gone With the Wind" arrived that had played simultaneous "roadshow" engagements on Broadway. The picture that made Jean Harlow a star played at both the Criterion and the Central theatres, in 1930.

The original version ran 135 minutes; the new one has been "slenderized" to 96 minutes, which includes a new prologue of about six minutes—titled "Wings Over the World." Color has been added to the zeppelin sequence.

"Hell's Angels" is now controlled by Astor Pictures, sales handled by Jack Bannan, who was formerly associated with Sam Dembow, Jr. The reissue is scheduled to play the Rialto in New York in February; other dates are pending.

Razzberries

"JIMMY" FIDLER, Drene Shampoo's broadcaster, is called "No. 1" trouble-on the-air by many a theatre owner, many a Hollywood producer, star, player. His pryings into the privacies of picture personalities has, for years, annoyed no little; his practice of not "ringing the bell" on pictures not meeting his favor has burned-up many exhibitors facing a reluctant public.

The latest Fidler burn-up is the fiery Peter Jules Wood, more familiarly known as plain Pete to the hundreds of Ohio exhibitors whom he has represented, actively, for years as the secretary of their Independent Theatre Owners Association of that state, out of East State street, Columbus.

Threatened as a retaliatory measure many times by others in organized exhibition and otherwise, Peter Jules Wood is now going after the socalled "gossip" type of aircasters to dose them with their own medicine. "Let 'em 'ring the bell' on pictures all they want to," says Pete. "We'll give the razzberry to their soaps and soap suds, their hair shampoos and hair tonics."

And so Mr. Wood will issue a "guide"—a weekly bulletin—on products manufactured by sponsors of air commentators, the guide pegging his opinion as to the quality or lack of quality of such products, as follows:

1 Razzberry —Excellent
2 Razzberries—Fair
3 Razzberries—Lousy

"Don't miss the first issue of 'Soapy Gossip,'" urges Peter Wood. "It will give you some interesting data."

More "Wind", More $

LAST YEAR, Loew's, Inc., netted the "tidy little sum" of $9,841,530, (as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on December 23rd); this year Loew's, Inc., will net an even greater profit, all because David O. Selznick sent his "Gone With the Wind" through the company.

Thus did J. Robert Rubin, vice-president, explain the company's condition, present and anticipated, to stockholders at their annual meeting on Tuesday at the home office in Times Square, New York.

In another part of the building, Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity, was calculating that to date "Wind" had grossed well over $1,000,000 in the seven cities which first opened the production—and it's still playing in all seven.

At the stockholders' meeting, David Bernstein, treasurer, reported that the company's business in the war zone represents about 15 per cent of total gross income. He said that the war "blackout" had had its effects on the company's first quarter income of the new fiscal year. But, Mr. Bernstein said, business in England is now good. He also said that the company's foreign income ratio compared to over-all income is 35 per cent and the company's foreign assets were $8,700,000.

All the company's officers, headed by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, were reelected. The following directors also were reelected: George N. Armsby, David Bernstein, Leopold Friedman, John R. Hazel, Alexander Lichtman, Charles C. Moskowitz, William A. Parker, J. Robert Rubin, Nicholas M. Schenck, Joseph R. Vogel, David Warfield and Henry R. Winthrop.

The following remunerations to officers for the last fiscal year were listed for the stockholders: Nicholas M. Schenck, $275,000; Louis B. Mayer, $688,000; J. Robert Rubin, $218,000; David Bernstein, $191,000 and Leopold Friedman, $1,600 weekly. Figures include special income in addition to salaries. Several of the executives share in a percentage of the profits after a $2 common stock dividend.

Wanger Elected

WALTER WANGER on Wednesday was elected president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood. He succeeds Frank Capra, who was drafted first vice-president. Other officers named were Edward Arnold, second vice-president; Robert Riskin, secretary; John Aalberg, treasurer, and Donald Gledhill, reelected executive secretary. Selection of officers was made by the board of governors.

Bioff

NEXT WEEK:

The Saturday Evening Post of January 27th will bring to its 3,091,991 readers the story of "Willie" Bioff, as its lead article of the week. Advance notice in the Saturday Evening Post of January 20th announced that:

> "There's one star in Hollywood who has never appeared before a camera, who is employed by no studio and who fights the producers 24 hours a day. Willie Bioff, an ex-Chicagoan of the Capone era, dislikes publicity, too—but don't think he's unimportant if you've never heard of him. For Willie, strong-arm organizer of movieland's labor, has Hollywood in the palm of his hand. We think you ought to meet the man who lets you go to the movies. Reporter Muir gives you an objective article on an explosive situation, with Willie doing some of the talking in his first exclusive interview."

THIS WEEK:

The complicated case of Willie Bioff moved forward Thursday when Hollywood's "No. 1" studio labor leader was admitted to bail bonds of $5,000 and $1,000, respectively, on a federal indictment containing two counts citing U. S. income tax evasion, and on extradition request made to the State of California by the State of Illinois, seeking Bioff's presence therein to serve out a 1922 Chicago jail sentence. Bioff pleads in Los Angeles federal court on Monday on the tax indictment, and shortly thereafter will again enter Los Angles courtrooms on the extradition matter.

More about Bioff on page 50.

More Playing Time?

EXHIBITORS, generally, are cooperating with Hollywood's plea of last fall, as voiced by Twentieth Century-Fox's Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, to extend runs on worthwhile pictures, beyond the usual playing time, to give Hollywood greater revenue so that it may continue producing high-budget pictures, and not be checked by the loss of revenue from the countries at war. Strong exhibitor support becomes evident, after a questioning of leading showmen in the country's key territories, of distribution sales executives, and of the heads of large circuits.

There were some dissidents, however. Some executives felt extended runs depended solely on whether an individual exhibitor could make money, not on his loyalty towards the industry's production center.

The story of Hollywood's plea for extended runs appears on pages 13, 14, 15 and 16.

That United Front

THE "ORGANIZED" INDUSTRY has been trying for a long time to maintain a "united front" in dealing with foreign situations. It has been felt that if the companies stood solidly behind their positions they would fare better with some foreign governments.

The Italian scene was in the newspapers this week. One of the large American companies, to fulfill contract obligations and to avoid the loss of perhaps all its money blocked in Italy, has decided to send a number of old pictures to that country to carry out any obligation. No new pictures will be sent.

The other seven major motion picture firms are standing their ground—and so is the Italian Film Monopoly, the creation of which, by the Italian Government, caused the American majors to withdraw, bag and baggage, from Italy, one year ago the past New Year's Eve. On one side is "the united front" of the American industry; on the other a decision of a totalitarian state. The winner—?

War and Newsreels

WITH THE EUROPEAN WAR the number one news story of weeks past and present, the newsreel companies in the United States have no end of headaches. For some newsreel issues no foreign material at all is available; then it comes in a flood, as it did this week, when all the reels received 12,000 feet of film from the war zones. This is more than they can use in a dozen issues. Seems the war censors hold up film for long periods and then release it all at once.

In this country, a new pact with the newsreel cameramen's union is now in effect. Exchange of prints and the old socalled rotation system are banned. Heretofore, on certain types of "stories" only one camera was deemed necessary, or permitted. The newsreels all shared the pictures in these circumstances, splitting costs. Now this can be done only if required by the Government, the new newsreel cameramen's pact rules.

Growing Pains

THE "BIG" TELEVISION broadcasters, opposing independent manufacturers of television sets and equipment, want some standardization in their budding industry. Paul W. Kester, vice-president of Columbia Broadcasting, so told the Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday, in Washington, the third day of hearings on the FCC's proposed rules for standardizing television, which are to continue on Friday.

Mr. Kester charged that uncertainty about standards imperiled broadcasters by making possible rapid obsolescence of television sets, and therefore causing a reaction by the public against the broadcasters. He suggested that the Commission fix present standards for a specified period, and allow broadcasters to follow present program research, but that it delay "freezing" of standards until that can be done without making sets obsolete, or that it proceed immediately with scheduled programs and with trying to fix new standards until they can be guaranteed for a definite number of years.

Earlier hearings this week developed testimony by independent manufacturers of equipment, such as DuMont and Philco, against the setting up of standards, and against partial commercialization of television programs.

Their testimony, and statistics from the FCC report, given to Congress this week, are on page 54.

Showmanship!

OFTEN NEGLECTED but never ignored, theatre showmanship that sells tickets at the boxoffice again will occupy the industry's headline spot on January 30th when the Judging Committee—industry leaders all—of the Quigley Awards, conducted by Managers' Round Table of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, assembles at the Hotel Astor, in New York, to select the winners of the Quigley Silver and Bronze Grand Awards for showmanship in 1939.

Actual presentation of the Grand Awards to the winners takes place again in Hollywood this year.

OWNERS ANSWER PLEA FOR EXTENDED RUNS

Follow Schenck's Appeal to Extent of Giving More Playing Time to Top Pictures Already Making Money

"Yes" seems to be the answer to whether the exhibitors of the country have heeded the plea made last September (shortly after the European War's outbreak) by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and speaking for Hollywood, that exhibitors give additional playing time to pictures, so that Hollywood might be assured of more revenue to compensate for that lost by the war, thus permitting the studios to continue making pictures of superior quality.

Sales Heads Find Cooperation

Sales managers of the major company home offices in New York, with few exceptions, found exhibitors favorable to extended playing time, most of them also noting that the practice of holdovers depended, of course, upon an individual picture's grosses.

Large circuit executives, also in the New York home offices, generally agreed with Mr. Schenck's thesis, and claimed their circuits were cooperating as much as possible. With some exceptions, reports from the field itself indicated that exhibitors, independent and circuit, were giving extended playing time to good pictures.

Box office receipts of big pictures were almost always figured before extensions were given; in many instances, the consensus seemed to indicate that, producers' pleas or no, exhibitors give extended playing time if they can make money. In some instances, extensions have been given because of a shortage of product, either actual, imagined or expected. The only key exchange center which reported a definite lack of response to Mr. Schenck's plea was Kansas City, but even in this territory it was noted that the Fox Midwest circuit already had been trying a policy of getting the most out of big pictures.

Hollywood's plea for extended playing time was not necessarily made in behalf of the "Gone With the Winds" or "Snow Whites" of such caliber, which get plenty of playing time anyway—but to those pictures of lesser strength which might be placed in the general category of "worthwhile."

Schenck and Zanuck

Mr. Schenck's statement, issued in September, said in part:

"It is no longer a question of profits, but of the preservation of the present quality standards of the entire industry, theatres as well as studios. Millions of dollars invested in theatres throughout America would be just so much brick and mortar, if the structure of film production collapsed. Exhibitors must therefore share the responsibility of seeing that the studios derive enough rentals to permit them to continue in operation. First of all, it is essential that exhibitors do everything possible to extend the playing time of pictures, whenever public patronage justifies it. Those pictures which have been showing for one week should, whenever possible, be held over for a second week, and a picture which definitely rates a two-week run should be extended for a third week. Likewise, in subsequent runs, three-day pictures should be held over for five or six days.

PLOT TO BOMB THEATRE BARED

Seventeen members of the so-called "Christian Front" organization arrested in New York Saturday by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation on charges of plotting the overthrow of the Government of the United States, had included in their terrorizing campaign a plan to bomb the Cameo theatre on 42nd Street in the Times Square area, according to the FBI.

Matty Radin, manager of the Cameo, which until recently showed Russian pictures exclusively, and now does so intermittently with other foreign product, said that he knew nothing of the proposed bombing of the theatre, but that last July he had been warned by the New York Police Department of a suspected plot of anti-Communists to bomb the Cameo. At that time two policemen were placed on regular duty in the house.

The 17 men arrested by the FBI were held in bail aggregating $850,000 after pleading not guilty in United States district court in Brooklyn.

Shortly thereafter, the Fox vice-president in charge of production, Darryl Zanuck, hit out at Si Fabian, New York circuit operator, saying he had refused to allow Twentieth Century-Fox's "Drums Along the Mohawk" enough playing time at the Proctor's, in Schenectady. In his letter Mr. Zanuck said he considered it "incredible that any exhibitor could possibly be so short sighted as to pull out a big picture when it is still making money, thereby depriving his own theatre of additional revenue, and consequently cutting the fair return of Hollywood."

Sales managers of the large companies, three months after Mr. Schenck's plea, said they had generally found exhibitors cooperative.

Cooperating, Says Sears

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warners, declared:

"It is my observation that the exhibitors are fully conscious of the foreign situation and have displayed a fine spirit of cooperation in the matter of extended playing time for worthwhile attractions in an endeavor to make the industry self-supporting and to continue the flow of high grade productions. This spirit of cooperation seems to be general, as all companies are continuing and maintaining their production budgets as originally planned.

"The very fact that there has been no curtailment in our own budget and that we are shortly releasing some of the most pretentious attractions in our history would indicate that we have every confidence in the exhibitors to continue their present policy of extending playing time on important pictures."

Harry Gold, vice-president of United Artists, this week saw a "change in sentiment among exhibitors with a long range view of the future."

"I think many of them accept the necessity of extended playing time for big pictures as a kind of responsibility, a partnership, the only means at their command for the encouragement of other big pictures," he said, and added:

"Exhibitors realize their stake in big pictures and in new pictures. Extended playing time is only one acknowledgement of this interest; concentrated exploitation, careful booking, expert theatre operation and many other forms of showmanship endeavor all reflect the change of sentiment."

Quality a First Factor

Neil Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager of Paramount, pointed out that much depends on the quality of the pictures. "Generally speaking," he said, "if an exhibitor can make money by holding over a picture, he will. The picture must have the drawing power. Producers' pleas, I might remark, do not make a bit of difference. Economics is the essence of the question, and that cannot be changed."

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of M-G-M, remarked this week that he "did not experience any difficulty in getting the extended playing time our big pictures deserve."

That the exhibitor plays pictures longer only if they warrant it was emphasized by William Sussman, eastern sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, who remarked:

"They have always given additional playing time to outstanding pictures—and they are cooperating today in this."

Observed Grover C. Schaefer, vice-president and treasurer of Republic Pictures Corporation:

"We have a drive on for extended playing time that has been successful."

He remarked that James R. Grainger, president of the company, had been touring the field on the subject.

A. Montague, sales manager of Columbia Pictures, declared that exhibitor reaction "should be favorable" to the extended playing time proposal.

Edward A. Golden, Monogram vice-president, noted that "the exhibitors are your best answer" and that his company welcomed more time given to its pictures by exhibitors.

William Scully, general sales manager of Universal, said he thought exhibitors generally were giving pictures more playing time, "if the pictures make money."

What Circuit Owners Say

Circuit owners, even while supporting extended playing time, also remarked that such a policy had been followed for years.

Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, said, "We have had a policy of giving extended playing time for the past four or five years. We try to give a meritorious picture as long playing time as possible—and now, more than ever."

John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of the RKO Theatres: "We have always given extended playing time; it is not something new with RKO theatres. Of course, there is a limit up to which you can hold over pictures; you must not hold them so much that you lose money on them."

Charles C. Moskowitz, operating head of the

FIRST-RUNS ARE FOUND COOPERATING

Loew circuit, remarked that, if extended playing time meant better business, such a policy should be followed.

Subsequent Runs' Problem

Harry Brandt, head of the New York Brandt circuit, and independent theatre owner organization leader, remarked, speaking for subsequent run theatre owners:

"Any subsequent run exhibitor would be glad to give extended playing time; but, it is true that by the time some of our houses get pictures there's so little left in them, that there isn't any point in talking about 'extended playing time.'"

The Comerford circuit of New York and Pennsylvania always have played pictures as long as possible, it was pointed out this week.

While first run theatres throughout the country apparently were playing pictures to the hilt, the back-log seemed this week to be apparent in some subsequent run situations where owners were said to be irritated by inability to get product on time, and by the fact that the previous situation had exhausted the picture's box office possibilities.

A more indirect result of extended playing time is expected to be felt in short subject departments in Hollywood. Extended playing time is expected to mean a narrowed market for shorts bookings, and further cutting of production of short product.

Miss Pickford on Showmanship

Mr. Schenck and Mr. Zanuck were not alone in their pleas for longer billings of pictures. Last month, Mary Pickford, United Artists producer and partner, said in Chicago:

"Present exhibition methods are ten years behind the times. What this business needs most is for exhibition to get caught up with production."

David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," remarked that he and M-G-M expected 75 per cent of the domestic gross to be obtained within five months.

There have been predictions, also, by various producers, that the future will be one of quality product alone. Thus, Jack Warner, of Warner Brothers, recently announced that his company would make only "A" pictures.

And Darryl Zanuck, vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, in an article for the Associated Press Feature Service, predicted a "decrease and probably elimination of the smaller type, which we now know as 'B' pictures."

Columbia Pictures, in a product announcement, declared that "out of the welter of world affairs, as they relate particularly to our industry, looms one dominant, compelling thought—the imperative need of delivering pictures that, by their merit, will build greater grosses in the United States so as to, in some manner, compensate for such loss of foreign revenues which by reason of the war, might occur." Cited were more than 1,000 extra playing days accorded to "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" as of December 2nd.

Following are field reports from the key centers of the country, illustrating to what extent each section is responding to the producers' pleas to give product as much playing time as possible.

Pittsburgh Area Found Cooperating

by MORT FRANK

in Pittsburgh

Joseph M. Schenck's appeal for extended runs is meeting indorsement by most theatres in western Pennsylvania, particularly the downtown houses. Wherever possible, they have been following a holdover policy for months.

Through a combined booking arrangement between Loew's Penn and Warner Bros., the Warner usually takes a second week of all pictures that grossed heavily during their first showing at the Penn, and in several cases during the past half-year the Penn has held films for two weeks and then sent them into the Warner for a third. Through its two downtown first-run houses, the Harris Amusement Company has practiced a similar policy, booking product that registered at the Alvin for a second period in the Senator. In some instances, such as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," the Alvin plays a picture two or three weeks, then sends it to the Senator for another week or two. The Shea-owned Fulton and the independent Art Cinema, operated by Gabriel Rubin, also hold over as long as the gross warrants, with only the Stanley, because of weekly-changing stage bills, and the Barry, with action-picture duals, switching every seven days regularly.

In the neighborhoods, the extended run policy holds in some situations, although less often than downtown.

PARAMOUNT LISTS HEAVY GROSSES

Paramount's "The Great Victor Herbert" is doing exceptional business in many key cities and is outgrossing previous Paramount attractions, according to the company. The film was reported to be doing anywhere from 23 to 49 per cent better than average in Boston, Hartford, Salt Lake City, Worcester and ahead of "Honeymoon in Bali" in Dallas, Fort Worth, Brooklyn, Houston, San Antonio and Chicago, where the receipts were said to be 100 per cent ahead of the receipts for "Honeymoon in Bali."

"The Light That Failed," Paramount's adaptation of the Kipling story, is being held over for a four and a half week engagement, at the Rivoli theatre, New York. The first week's business registered $50,000 while the second week's was $32,000, according to John C. Wright, manager.

"Gulliver's Travels" concluded a fourth and final week at the New York Paramount on Wednesday. The Fleischer-Paramount feature length cartoon, now playing at the Carlton theatre, London, will probably have an eight week run there, the company said.

Texas Circuits Holding Leading Productions

by HARRY McCORMICK

in Dallas

Spokesmen for the Interstate Circuit remarked, "Mr. Hoblitzelle and Mr. O'Donnell (the circuit's executives) believe in getting the most out of every good product that is released, and believe that other theatres would profit by the same example.

"Pictures like 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington' and 'Babes In Arms,'" they continued, "have been extended as long as four weeks, possibly to the detriment of the circuit, from a subsequent run viewpoint."

Interstate has a holdover theatre in the Tower, in Dallas; sometimes pictures not drawing capacity houses are held here. In Houston, the Majestic and Metropolitan, 3,000-seaters, hold over worthy product; the Majestic, and Texan, in San Antonio, with 4,000 and 2,000 seats, respectively, do likewise.

Circuit men say shows like "Mr. Smith" and "Babes" are too infrequent, and surely deserve all the time that can be given them.

Seattle Agrees To Holdover Idea

by W. A. PRAGER

in Seattle

Seattle first-run exhibitors, circuit and independent, are cooperating fully with Joseph M. Schenck's request for hold-over dates on good pictures.

Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, operating five downtown theatres in Seattle, has made two strictly "extended run." These, the Blue Mouse and Music Box, play first-run pictures moved from the Paramount, Fifth Avenue and Orpheum theatres after one or twoweek engagements. The extended runs often continue two to four weeks, depending on business.

John Danz, operating the Palomar theatre as his only first-run house, has made his second-run Roosevelt theatre an "extended run" for many of the bigger Warner Brothers pictures that play the Palomar for one week in conjunction with vaudeville.

The only other downtown operator, the Jensen-Von Herberg independent circuit, continues its big pictures at the Liberty theatre for from two to seven or eight weeks. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," for example, has concluded a seven-week run, after having been booked originally for four weeks.

Denver Holds Profit-Makers

by JOHN A. ROSE

in Denver

Denver territory exhibitors are glad to run any picture as long as it will make a profit.

In Denver, Fox practices the carry-over principle to such an extent that many films which under ordinary circumstances might receive only one week in a first-run house are given from two to five weeks. Practically all films that start at the Denver, the Fox ace house, move to the Aladdin, then to the Rialto; and two films also have been given day-and-date runs at two Fox first-runs even after that, within the last two years.

Most films start at the Orpheum, an RKO house, are moved to the Broadway, a Fox house, for at least a week and sometimes two.

The Orpheum maintains, for the most part, a double-bill policy, and both films are taken to the Broadway. The Denver has a single-feature policy, as does the Aladdin. However, when the films are taken to the Rialto another first run film is added, but if the first film is moved to the Broadway afterwards the second feature is dropped.

Subsequent-run houses in Denver feel the continued-run policy as practiced by Fox is detrimental to their grosses, but since Fox has houses of all classes in Denver, they stand to suffer along with the rest, if such is the case.

Albany in Line For Holdovers

by DICK CONNORS

in Albany

A leader in getting the most out of pictures is the Warner circuit in this area. M. N. Silver, Warner Theatres zone manager, declared: "Showmanship by each manager, to hold over pictures, and to get the full length run, is increasingly necessary, as we look ahead a few months."

Mr. Silver previously had stressed the line of thought suggested by Joseph M. Schenck, through district managers Charles Smakwitz and Ralph Crabill on a weekly tour of their territories.

As a result, the Madison, Albany, classified as a neighborhood theatre, but considered the most remunerative property in the city, has been playing split-weeks of four and three days instead of two-two-and-three.

The Stanley, first-run in Utica, has dropped the split-run almost entirely stretching to five and in most instances to seven days.

The Troy at Troy has moved from a split-week policy to four and five days and in some instances a week, while the American, Troy, has increased runs a day.

Among independent exhibitors, the outstanding example of extended runs is afforded by Charles C. Gordon, who operates the first-run Olympic in Utica. Mr. Gordon kept "Drums Along the Hohawk," of which he had one of the five multiple openings, for 16 days and followed shortly thereafter with "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" for 14 days.

Longer Runs In Carolinas

by D. G. SPENCER

in Charlotte, N. C.

Exhibitors of North and South Carolina are cooperating as much as possible, according to leaders of the theatre industry in Charlotte.

Both independent and circuit exhibitors of the two states are booking pictures for as many days as they believe the film will draw at the box office. However, it is true that this policy in a few instances has resulted in the "pulling" of a picture before its scheduled run has been completed.

"By years of experience we have found that it is a good policy to get every dollar out of a picture for both ourselves and the exchanges," a leading booker said. "Since Mr. Schenck's request was made, we have placed particular emphasis on longer play dates and holdovers than ever before."

Utah Stretching Runs of Films

by HELEN GARRITY

in Salt Lake City

Circuits and independent exhibitors are doing everything possible to cooperate with Mr. Schenck's request, principally because it is good business, they say. All exhibitors appear anxious to give a picture every opportunity, and to get as much revenue from it as possible.

In the last two months, Intermountain Theatres, Inc., has set a precedent, with extended runs and holdovers. The Paramount, in this city, played "The Women" ten days. "Ninotchka" was held over at the same theatre.

Other pictures which have deserved—and received—extended runs in Salt Lake City Intermountain theatres, are "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Babes in Arms," "Honeymoon in Bali," "The Old Maid," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "The Rains Came," and "Stanley and Livingstone."

At the Pinney theatre, Boise, Idaho, a new policy, a week's run in place of a bi-weekly run, was begun in October, for all "A" pictures. It is proving successful.

In Provo, Utah; Twin Falls, Idaho; Logan, Utah—in fact, in all the Intermountain towns, the pictures are held over whenever they give promise of doing enough business to make it profitable.

Hershell Stuart, booker for Fox West Coast and Fox Intermountain Theatres, with offices in this city, declared that all runs were being stretched. The four-day dates on all big pictures have been extended to a full week. Fox has theatres in Montana, and in Pocatello and Idaho Falls, in Idaho.

Joseph L. Lawrence, Salt Lake City independent, who varies second runs with first run RKO pictures, recently gave extended time to "That's Right; You're Wrong," and is expected to continue the policy whenever the picture will hold.

CAMPAIGNS FOR THREE PICTURES

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has set ads on "Broadway Melody of 1940" to appear in the March issue of magazines having a total circulation of 33,760,707, according to the company. The circulation is divided as follows: general magazines, 21,235,778; farm magazines, 7,880,121, and fan magazines, 4,644,808.

United Artists has started a campaign on David L. Selznick's "Rebecca," adapted from the best selling novel by Daphne du Maurier, in magazines and daily newspapers. The Ladies' Home Journal recently printed the book in its entirety in a special supplement. In the newspaper field, the story is being syndicated by McClure Syndicate to its clients in a 50,000 word serialization, according to United Artists.

In the next 13 weeks it is estimated by RKO Radio that 60 million American families will read King Features' comic strip based on Walt Disney's second feature production, "Pinocchio." The syndication began December 24th when 199 newspapers carried a half page comic strip in color.

Exhibitors Pitch In At Portland, Ore.

by F. K. HASKELL

in Portland, Ore.

First-run circuit executives say they will do everything possible to cooperate with Mr. Schenck's plea.

During November and December, the ace theatre of the Evergreen circuit, the Paramount, ran "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" three weeks; and the picture still held for a fourth "downtown" week at the Mayfair.

"Another Thin Man" was held for a second week at the United Artists.

Virginia Circuit Agrees to Plan

by SAM BENDHEIM, JR.

General Manager, Neighborhood Theatres, Inc., Circuit in Richmond, Va.

Relative to the recent statement of Joseph M. Schenck calling upon exhibitors of the country to give extended playing time to worthwhile product, it has been the policy of our company to follow this procedure for some time past.

Particularly at this time, when revenue from foreign markets has been greatly curtailed, we believe it incumbent upon exhibitors of this country more than ever before to extend playing time of pictures that are doing business, in order not only to provide the producers with additional revenue to continue to turn out good pictures, but also because it is good business on the part of the exhibitor to do this from his own profit standpoint.

Large Circuits of Miami Join In

by ROBERT R. QUINN

in Miami, Fla.

This city's two major operators are extending their runs, when feasible.

Said Mitchell Wolfson, co-owner of Wometco Theatres, operators of 19 houses in Miami, Miami Beach, West Palm Beach, and in Nassau, British West Indies:

"Our policy in the past has been to hold over all good pictures, and we are following the same policy today. We, naturally, cannot follow this procedure in instances where the picture does not warrant it; but, in a general manner, such is our policy."

Said W. R. Lynch, general manager of Paramount Enterprises, operators of 16 houses in Miami and Miami Beach:

"Paramount Enterprises is following the suggestion of Mr. Schenck in every manner possible. We are extending the runs of every picture that will stand up. I believe it is a sound business policy, and we are happy to cooperate with the producers in this respect."

Arkansas Favors Extended Runs

by MRS. SYLVIA HUBBARD

in Little Rock

Most independent exhibitors, especially in the Little Rock territory, agree with Mr. Schenck's suggestion to give as many hold-over runs to worthwhile films as they can. Extended runs on top-notch films have been more prevalent during the last two months. It is believed that they will continue. Many local industry folk declare there is a shortage of outstanding films.

Iowa Supports Schenck's Appeal

by MAGDALON GRAHL

in Des Moines

Iowa theatre men, on the whole, support extended bookings for worthwhile pictures, feeling it marks a trend towards the making of fewer and better pictures.

Tom Brown, of Iowa City, Iowa's oldest continuous run theatre man, has been successful not only with longer runs of worthwhile pictures but also in bringing back successes for renewed runs, within about a year.

EXTENSIONS FOR BOX OFFICE FILMS

At Cedar Rapids, Hal Sheridan, who books pictures into the 1,700 seat Paramount, believes a good picture deserves a longer run. A. G. Stolte, who books for the Tri-States theatre in Des Moines, believes this also; the boxoffice return is decisive.

The consensus is, that every picture that stacks up in its boxoffice showings will be given the fullest run possible.

Mason City, Rock Island, Cedar Rapids, Clinton, Burlington, all have seen extended bookings on "Gulliver's Travels," "Babes in Arms," "Judge Hardy and Son," and "Another Thin Man."

Cincinnati Extensions Based on Business

by E. H. MAYER

in Cincinnati

Although there are recurring instances in which pictures are held over in the Cincinnati trade territory, in both the circuit and independent classifications, these holdovers are predicated on the business which the picture does, rather than the result of special suggestions or requests. These pictures are not advertised in advance as "extended runs," but are held from week to week (sometimes as long as five and six, especially in Cincinnati), and usually moved from one theatre to another after the first run. Occasionally, too, when other bookings interfere with a continuous run, the picture is brought back with a week intervening.

Tampa Territory Favorable to Plan

by SCOTT LESLIE

in Tampa, Fla.

The Sparks Florida circuit, controlling practically all first-run theatres in the Tampa territory, is most willing to extend runs on product which promises to draw sufficient business, and where it will not conflict with house policy.

In Tampa, the principal first run house is the Tampa. The policy of this house is two changes a week, one picture playing four days, the other three. Recently they screened some pictures an extra day, opening the picture on Friday instead of the usual Saturday opening, and playing through Tuesday, making a run of five days. This, of course, cut the other picture to a run of only two days, and this is about as much of an extended run as this house can give a picture and still maintain a two change policy.

Few Springfield, Ill., Holdovers Noted

by KENDALL OLDS

in Springfield, Ill.

Theatre operators in Springfield, Ill., have been making no special effort to extend the runs of their shows as proposed by leading producers for the purpose of increasing rentals.

A canvass of theatres reveals that no direct request has been made for extended runs. At present the exhibitors said they are extending the runs of their pictures only on public demand. Few runs, however, have been extended.

Milwaukee Houses Give More Time

by WALTER MONFRIED

in Milwaukee

The practice of holding over as many films as feasible has found favor with the three leading exhibitors of the Milwaukee area. It is good business in more ways than one, they indicate. One or two of the downtown theatres have had difficulty, on occasion, in getting attractive product and the extension of run is a big help.

MORE FILMS FOR 1940 NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR

The New York World's Fair for 1940, opening May 11th, will exhibit the best of the 612 films shown last summer and many new subjects "even more interesting and informative," according to Claude R. Collins, director of newsreels and films of the Fair. Mr. Collins said 20,000,000 persons saw the 612 motion pictures which ran from three minutes to over an hour. Thirty-four auditoriums and many exhibits used motion pictures, 35 and 16 mm.

"The British Pavilion led in the number of films exhibited, with a total of 141," Mr. Collins reported. "Brazil was second with 82, and France exhibited 72. Pictures were shown in 34 different auditoriums, the largest of which was the motion picture theatre in the General Motors Building, seating 612."

"Land of Liberty," compiled from 25 motion pictures, features and shorts, to show the growth of the United States and something of its history, was one of the principal films. It was exhibited at the Federal Building.

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" enjoyed an extra week on Wisconsin Avenue and was returned to its original exhibition place after a two week lapse—something nearly unprecedented. Other films which have been held over in recent months have been "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Elizabeth and Essex," "Ninotchka," "Only Angels Have Wings," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Babes in Arms," "Juarez" and "The Old Maid."

Small Kansas Response to Plea

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City, Mo.

Exhibitors here and in Western Missouri and Kansas are not extending runs of pictures more than they have been doing. Showmen are holding films so long as they'll take money.

The policy of extended runs was developed by Fox Midwest three or four years ago and was taken up by other alert showmen. Fox Midwest has found that it can do better by programming two big pictures, for instance, and holding for six or seven days, in subsequent runs, than it can by using an "A" and a "B" picture on a double bill and changing two or three times a week. The combination of two big pictures has been the only new development of the extended run idea here in two or three years.

Operating in smaller cities and towns, Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc., opposes extended runs as a policy. Towns aren't large enough to warrant it, it is said, and the policy puts the theatres behind on playing time. An inconsistent policy confuses patrons, they add. If a picture is properly sold, it will get its business in three days, anyway, in these situations, this circuit feels.

Extra Time In Lincoln

by BARNEY OLDFIELD

in Lincoln, Neb.

The Nebraska Theatres, Inc., of which Howard Federer is general manager, has given films a total of 11 weeks' extra playing time since Mr. Schenck made his plea.

The J. H. Cooper-Lincoln Theatres, Inc., has granted extensions over original bookings for about three and a half weeks extra time.

Lincoln is a "one-week" town. Residents have got into the habit of going to pictures once a week; and the few others, except in rare cases, would seem too small to make a time extension in a larger way worthwhile, exhibitors feel.

Oklahoma Extensions Found Successful

From Oklahoma City, the reports are that extended runs, tried by Standard Theatres and the State Theatre, are being tried, and are successful. The runs, however, are only tried when the grosses have justified the policy. There are instances, in this territory, where pictures failing to register 90 per cent of the gross average have been pulled.

Detroit Tries Holdover Plan

First run houses in Detroit are holding over pictures which gross better than average. Recent hold-overs include "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Remember," "Drums Along the Mohawk" and "Lucrezia Borgia."

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved, five were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Danger on Wheels," "The Fighting 69th," "Invisible Man Returns," "Music in My Heart," "Oh, Johnny, Oh." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Green Hell," "His Girl Friday," "Katia" (French), "Of Mice and Men," "Shop Around the Corner." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "He Married His Wife."

Maury Named Manager

Franklin W. Maury, nephew of Walter Vincent of the Wilmer & Vincent Company, has been promoted from assistant manager of the Colonial theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., to manager of the Embassy in Reading. The circuit, which has the Embassy and State in Reading, will open two more houses in that city. Paul Glase, who was manager of the Embassy, will assume general supervision of the four theatres.

GOVERNMENT CALLS 26 EXECUTIVES; GODDARD TO TRY 'KEY' TRUST CASE

Trial Starts May 1st; Oral Examinations from February 5th to March 25th; Joy Amusement Suit in Houston Settled

Moving quickly and unexpectedly, the United States Department of Justice on Tuesday moved to examine 26 executives of seven of the large company defendants, in the Government's anti-trust suit against the majors in New York City federal court, the "key" case in the whole structure of anti-trust actions built upon the Administration's anti-monopoly philosophy. The Department, on Tuesday, notified attorneys for the defense which of their clients were to appear, and on what dates.

Federal Judge John G. Knox, on Tuesday also, advised litigants that trial must start on May 1st.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard has been selected by the Government and attorneys for the major defendants in the government anti-trust suit to preside at the trial of the action, it was learned Tuesday.

Senior Federal Judge Knox, in charge of assignments of judges to trial work, and Judge Goddard, agreed on the assignment. The appointee sat on the Government's anti-trust suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, several years ago, and also has passed upon several plagiarism suits in the industry. Because in civil anti-trust suits the judge must decide without a jury, the choice of a judge is considered doubly important.

The examinations of the major executives will be oral; they will be at the New York offices of the Department, and will run from February 5th to March 25th. United Artists Corporation is the only defendant exempted. Its officials were examined last summer.

The Government has the right, it was said, under federal procedure, to ask any questions pertinent to the suit. The action, unexpected, will eliminate, in the Justice Department's viewpoint, any necessity for further delaying the trial.

Third Suit Settled

Meanwhile, amid the many anti-trust suits brought personally by independents against the majors, one ended this week, by settlement, the third in as many weeks. It was the suit by the Joy Amusement Company, operator of the Joy Theatre, in Houston, and of other houses in the Gulf of Mexico area. Seymour Lieberman, the company's attorney, said that the suit was settled satisfactorily. The action, in Houston federal court, had called for a court ban on alleged distribution discrimination, said the plaintiff had been unable to obtain first grade pictures, and that the defendants had violated the anti-trust laws.

Following is a list of the majors' executives who are to appear in the New York anti-trust case, and the dates on which they will appear:

COLUMBIA—Harry Cohn, president; Jack Cohn, vice-president; Abe Montague, vice-president and general sales manager—on February 5th.

UNIVERSAL—Nathan Blumberg, president; William A. Scully, vice-president in charge of sales; Charles R. Rogers, executive vice-president—on February 12th.

GODDARD MADE JUDGE BY PRESIDENT HARDING

Henry Warren Goddard, federal Judge who will preside in the Department of Justice's New York anti-trust action against the majors, is a New Yorker, a Republican, and has been a judge in the Southern District of New York by appointment of President Warren G. Harding, since January 15, 1923.

Judge Goddard was born in New York City in 1876; was educated at the New York Law School; was formerly a member of the firm, Gay and Goddard; was, according to Who's Who In America, a member of the state National Guard for 12 years; served during the war as a member of the draft board for 13 months, also in the Officers Training Corps; is a member of the New York City Bar Association, vice-president and chairman of the board of the New York Association for the Blind, member of the Racquet and Tennis, Lawyers', National Republican, Downtown Association, and Century clubs. He married in 1912, and lives in New York City.

RKO—George J. Schaefer, president; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president; Jules Levy, former general sales manager—on February 19th.

PARAMOUNT—Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of directors; Barney Balaban, president; Neil F. Agnew, and Y. Frank Freeman, vice-presidents—on March 4th.

WARNER BROTHERS—Harry M. Warner, president; Jack Warner, vice-president; Joseph Bernhard, president of Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation; Gradwell Sears, president of Vitagraph—on March 11th.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX—Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors; Sidney R. Kent, president; Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president; Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution—on March 18th.

Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres, also is requested to appear on March 18th.

LOEW'S-MGM—Nicholas M. Schenck, president; Charles C. Moscowitz, assistant treasurer; William F. Rodgers, general sales manager; Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production—on March 25th.

Require "Reasonable Notice"

The Government's procedure in first notifying the defense attorneys of its intention to call certain persons for oral examination is dictated by the federal rules, which require "reasonable notice in writing to every other party in the action."

The Government notice was signed by two of its attorneys new in the case, special assistants Robert L. Wright and Thomas J. Lynch.

The defense attorneys, in attacking the Governments' right orally to examine company executives, were said to have the right to request a change in location of examination; that the examination be written, instead of oral—that witnesses' testimony be withheld from the public and that the examination's scope be limited.

The Government had agreed to hold confidential information disclosed by answers to its interrogatories.

Though it was not stated in the Government's stipulation, it was understood that defendant companies' selling terms, and their financial positions, will be considered confidential by the Government. The stipulation provided that the majors could indicate which answers they considered confidential, and submit them to the Department of Justice without filing them.

In Washington, after a hearing by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee, on the nomination of former attorney general Frank Murphy to the supreme court, and after extensive questioning of Mr. Murphy on the role he would play, if cases in which he was interested, as an attorney general, came before him on the bench, it was expected that Mr. Murphy probably would not participate in supreme court reviews of the industry anti-trust cases.

Another development of the week resulted in the Government getting an extension of time to January 22nd to answer the majors interrogatories.

Schine Wins Point

Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., its affiliates and eight major distributors won an important point in U. S. district court in Buffalo Wednesday when Judge John Knight refused to grant a preliminary injunction restraining Schine from acquiring more theatres than it now operates.

The injunction was requested in arguments presented last September by Government attorneys. The Government had asked that a restraining order be issued pending trial. The circuit owns two local houses, the Granada and the Riverside.

The Senate, on Tuesday, approved nomination of Mr. Murphy to the supreme court; of Robert H. Jackson, former Solicitor-General, as United States Attorney General, and of Francis H. Biddle, as Solicitor-General.

Subpoenas Exchange Men

Philadelphia exchange men were subpoenaed last week, in the suit by Harry Fried, operator of three suburban houses, against the Stanley-Warner circuit, and seven majors, charging conspiracy and unreasonable clearance. The case is expected to begin on February 5th.

Gary Suit in March

Hearings of the Gary Theatre's anti-trust suit against the majors and the Balaban and Katz, and Warner circuits were postponed to March, in Chicago federal district court last week. The Gary theatre is in Gary, Ind.; its suit is against enforcement of clearance.

Chicago Case Delayed

The Government's suit against Balaban and Katz and the majors in Chicago, for violation of a 1932 consent decree, appears to have been delayed until April. The master in chancery is to hear oral argument then.

Another Chicago Case

Attorneys for Frank Ford, operator of the Stadium in Evanston, Ill., who started an anti-trust suit against Balaban and Katz circuit and several of the majors, said this week that, with the return of federal judge James Wilkerson, to the Chicago court on next Friday, they would bring motions to override defense motions, and also would apply for permission to take depositions.

James Roosevelt Aims to Make Test Preview a Test

Will Tuck Print of First Film Under Arm and Go to Exhibitor

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

James Roosevelt will be in to see you, Ladies and Gentlemen of Show Business, because he wants to find out from you at first hand the things you find out at first hand from your customers about the kinds of pictures you want and don't. Tonight, as of the date on the front cover of this edition, he is at Portland, Ore., on the first leg of a series of field visits he has pencilled in on his executive program for 1940. It will interest you to know, additionally, that when his cutter hands him the first of those Globe Production features for United Artists release, he's going to tuck it under his arm and bring it to your town for test preview by way of making as sure as may be that it squares with the prevalent public concept of good screen entertainment.

In Dead Earnest

Young Mr. Roosevelt is quick to assure you that he is "not going to try to revolutionize the business" and he convinces you he is not, leaving no shadow of doubt, the while, that he is in dead earnest. You recall that he has toured towns and villages repeatedly and met their folk at intimate range in the company of his distinguished parent under conditions affording him expert tutelage in the technique of analyzing public sentiment. True, he was not thinking in terms of motion pictures at the time, but he is now.

Mr. Roosevelt is thinking in practical terms. He has purchased four story properties and will produce two of them for the 1940-41 season. He thinks of the story as the primary factor in motion picture entertainment. Further, he says, the story required for rounded success on the screen is a story pointed at no limited segment of the public, restricted to no age group or other arbitrary classification, but appealing, instead, to all the nation's citizens. Under this policy plank, whatever revnues may be obtained externally constitute what might be called a found profit.

Objects to Present System

The preview matter bulks as an item of special importance in the Roosevelt plannings. He has been engaged in the production branch some 13 months now and has journeyed with other producers to Pomona, to Santa Barbara and the half dozen other California towns where pictures have been tested out regularly for many a year, and he has read the preview cards which roll in after these screenings. He doesn't trust them. He has acquired, in common with many other astute observers, the opinion that the audiences in those places, hardened to preview exposures and self-sold on the idea that they are counted upon for expert reaction, are no longer typical theatre goers. Unlike other objectors to the system, Mr. Roosevelt is determined to do something about it.

It is the Roosevelt intention to take the first rough cut of his first picture to the airport and plane out for some town in Nebraska, another Ohio, Alabama, and so on, persuade each exhibitor host to insert it into his current program unannounced, and ascertain, not by card but by oral conference with those who paid to get in, how it looks to them and what it seems to need to have added or subtracted.

JAMES ROOSEVELT

Mr. Roosevelt's appearance in Portland Saturday night is as guest of Ted R. Gamble, honor guest of the Portland Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is honoring the young manager of the Jensen and Von Herberg theatres there as the citizen who "contributed most to the civic promotion of Portland in 1939." Mr. Gamble's achievements in the year range from an outstanding bit of service as escort to the visiting Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden to triumphal management of the Rose Festival.

Seattle is the next stop on this Roosevelt journey. He will make others before shooting starts on his first picture, "The Bat," and will spend not less than a month this summer on a swing around the country visiting exhibitors.

Mr. Roosevelt believes every story should be tested for universal marketability before anything else is done about it. "I often go to the movies with my grandmother," he says. "She is in her 80's. I am in my 30's. When we both derive entertainment from a picture it usually turns out to be one that is generally popular. That is the kind of entertainment I hope to produce."

Mr. Roosevelt has begun to receive letters from exhibitors, says he's learning from them, hopes the flow will continue. He is entering the production field with no illusions about the risks involved, the problems he'll be running into and the uncertainties to which film production is prey. Of one thing, he says, he is sure. That is that exhibitors are first to know what the public wants, first to detect changes in public demand, therefore first in his scheme of production operations.

800 Theatres in Canada Play New Propaganda Film

by R. J. O'LEARY
in Montreal

The first work of Canada's new National Film Board made its appearance this week when some 800 theatres from coast to coast across Canada ran "Call to a Nation," a propaganda film by the Board to assist Canada's new War Loan (oversubscribed in two days). The film is to be released in theatres in the United States and Great Britain.

War Finances Emphasized

When originally created by act of Parliament, the National Film Board, headed by Trade Minister W. D. Euler and Film Commissioner John Grierson, was designed ostensibly "to correlate government film activities and centralize the distribution of government films," but with the coming of war the board already has turned to production of propaganda films.

"Call to a Nation" is a short subject packed with action yet carrying its message which emphasizes that the War Loan was entirely a voluntary one. It is one of the first films turned out in Canada with the "dramatic pep" that Mr. Grierson urged Canadians to put in their films before he was appointed film commissioner. In addition to numerous scenes showing war in its destructive capacity the picture depicts reaction of hostilities on those "at home," such as farmers, miners, stevedores and office clerks. The actual message in the film is carried in a sequence showing the Cabinet's War Committee gathered around Prime Minister MacKenzie King's desk. It is pointed out the war is costing Canada about $1,000,000 a day and urges "Make your dollars fight for freedom."

The film, the first real work of Mr. Grierson in his new post, was produced by Associated Screen News, Montreal, and was released last Friday across the country.

Film of Royalty Visit

Another film turned out by the Canadian Government, the authentic "Royal Visit" film, also ran in Montreal this week. It followed a short run of "Chin Up," a wartime stage show at His Majesty's theatre.

Brill Named Chairman of National Review Board

Dr. A. A. Brill, psychiatrist and translator of the works of Sigmund Freud, this week was elected chairman of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. Dr. Brill, a member of the executive committee of the board since 1933 and a former president of the New York Society for Clinical Psychiatry, succeeds Dr. George W. Kirchwey, who becomes chairman emeritus. Dr. Kirchwey is a former dean of the Law School of Columbia University and one-time warden of Sing Sing prison.

KUYKENDALL, GRIFFITH HIT NEELY BILL, ALLIED LEADERS SPEAK FOR IT

MPTOA Calls It "Spite" Measure, Asks Exhibitors to Enlist Women's Clubs; Allied Issues "Little White Book"

Entering the Neely anti-block booking fight ring this week were Edward L. Kuykendall, of Mississippi, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who is frequently seen in the arena, and R. E. Griffith, southwestern circuit owner, fighting to prevent passage, and W. A. (Fighting Al) Steffes, of the northwest and Ray Branch, of Michigan, both of Allied, aided and abetted by national Allied, Washington, and the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Pennsylvania.

Opponents of the bill have been publicly warming up for the fight for weeks as previously recorded, but the principal proponent, national Allied, is only now coming out with public expressions for the first time since this session of Congress started, On January 3rd it laid its line of battle with a "Little White Book," which is being sent to club women and exhibitors all over the country. The book gives 21 questions on the bill as propounded by Allied, and their answers, together with a list of some 32 national organizations cited as opposing compulsory block and blind selling of motion pictures.

"Spite Bill": Kuykendall

The measure is called a "spite" bill by Mr. Kuykendall, one of the leaders of organized exhibition opposing it.

In a statement issuing from national MPTOA headquarters, in New York, over his signature, the legislation is called "pernicious," and is cited as "the entering wedge for governmental interference and regulation," endorsed by "a pitiful minority," a minority, whose "few leaders," "despite advice from within the organization, continue to fight for the bill."

Proceeding on what is described as a general knowledge within the industry that the bill "will be of no benefit to anyone," the Kuykendall statement urges that the fight be carried outside, to "those public spirited and well meaning (club) women, who have been misled by propaganda from the above mentioned little group, into believing that the Neely bill will moralize the screen. These ladies," continued the statement, "will make or defeat the bill. We must show them that this bill has nothing to do with morals.

"The Neely bill," continued the Kuykendall statement, "will tend to increase film rentals and add materially to the buying problems of the small exhibitor particularly. These are fundamentals we all know. Let us get the truth to the women who are heads of all those civic organizations who have endorsed the bill (Allied claims that there are 32 of them).

"One sensible chat with one of these women leaders is worth far more than a dozen high-powered speeches to meetings in the industry," said Mr. Kuykendall urging that contacts for the purpose be established with local Parent and Teachers Associations, Congressmen, and civic clubs.

No Benefits: Griffith

The Neely bill was assailed this week as replete with objectionable features, by R. E. Griffith, southwestern circuit operator, while on a visit to some of his properties at Gallup, N. M.

PROS AND CONS OF DEBATE SUMMED UP

Declaring that "even the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association (sic) concede that the measure . . . now seems more likely than ever to go through," a signed article in the section of the Sunday New York Times devoted to entertainment, developed some of the "arguments pro and con the Neely Bill."

Thomas M. Pryor, the writer, noted the industry factions for and against the bill, and their activities; noted also, that there are dissidents in each faction, from the faction's stand on the bill; noted that the CIO is for the bill, the AFL against; defined "block-booking" and "blind-selling"; cited arguments pro and con, respectively, from the National Allied States Association and the MPPDA; asserted that the bill will "have far-reaching effect upon the general public," but that its effect is uncertain; and speculated upon the effects, which, he said, might be a reduction of film production alone, or a reduction of production and quality, or a reduction merely of quality.

Mr. Griffith predicted that the changes to the industry's system which are proposed through the Neely bill would result disastrously, and added that he saw no benefits from the measure for the public.

Steffes and Branch See Passage

Allied's Steffes, in New York from Minneapolis, on Tuesday, predicted that "the Neely bill will go through the House of Representatives by a two-thirds majority, once it gets out of committee."

The bill was passed by the Senate at the previous session of Congress, last June, and is now in the hands of the House interstate commerce committee. It is generally believed that the bill will not receive committee attention for some time.

"The opposition of the majors to the Neely Bill has made it virtually certain to pass in the current Congress," Ray Branch, president of Michigan Allied, said in New York on Monday, stopping over on his way to Washington, where he attended the National Allied States Association's board of directors meeting on Wednesday and Thursday, at the Carlton hotel.

"Yes, those boys made a mistake," he said. "When they started campaigning, the social groups who are supporting the Neely bill said, 'There really must be something to the bill, after all'; and they've redoubled their efforts.

"The truth is, the bill looks as if it will go through; in spite of anything anyone can do. It would go through even if we weren't interested in it. The social groups are pushing it. It'll be the effect of these powerful groups that make the Congressman vote for the bill, not anything we say or do. And they're pushing it, these groups, all the more powerfully now."

The Allied Independent Theatre Owners Association of Eastern Pennsylvania, meeting last midweek in Philadelphia, reaffirmed its support of the Neely bill. A new board of governors was elected, with E. B. Gregory, Harry Pearlman, Charles Steifel, Harry Chertcoff and George Ickes named for the three-year term, and Thomas Lazarick for one year.

Sidney E. Samuelson was renamed business manager. Mr. Gregory was elected secretary and Ben Fertel, treasurer. Norman Lewis, J. Segal and Max Corr were named board alternates.

Allied's "Little White Book"

Charging that "compulsory block booking prevents theatres from choosing the best pictures released by all the producers and forces them to take all of the pictures—good, bad and indifferent—released by a few producers," Allied Theatres is mailing out a "Little White Book," advocating passage of the Neely measure, to public groups and exhibitors. Regardless, distributors contend that cancellation privileges in contracts enable owners to cancel a certain percentage of pictures sold on that contract.

The new Allied document, citing block booking as the subject of dispute between distributors and exhibitors for ten years, charges that the distributors now are unloosening an "avalanche" of "misleading information" concerning the bill, that the majors are considering a "march on Washington" and a demonstration in front of the Capitol, and a protest mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, New York.

Further, it charges that distributors' statements are incorrect in saying the bill would require exhibitors to lease completed pictures one at a time following a preview, that it would prevent wholesale selling and increase costs, thus necessitating higher admissions, would penalize the producers for "innocent mistakes," would result in loss of employment, that it involves censorship. "These contentions are unfounded," and so are many others, added Allied, mentioning many of the arguments pro and con heard so often in discussions of the bill.

Columnist Lauds Press Agent Work

Turning its attention from the Neely bill, which was the subject of the two previous meetings, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, in New York, were addressed last week by John Chapman, columnist for the Daily News. The meeting was sponsored by the new members of the AMPA. Eddie Schreiber, Warner Brothers, was master of ceremonies. Eddie Greenberg, Jonas Rosenfield and Lester Dember of Warner Brothers, and Miriam Gibson and Charles Dorsa of Monogram participated in the program.

Declaring that press agents in the motion picture industry "are handicapped because they have to satisfy a lot of bosses," but "do a good job just the same and are familiar with newspapers' needs," Mr. Chapman objected to Broadway premieres with floodlights as "small town stuff." He suggested that a discussion be sponsored by AMPA on "what is wrong with motion picture stars" rather than "what is wrong with motion picture publicity."

'HE MARRIED HIS WIFE' FUN RIOT HEADED FOR SOCK B.O.

Del Ruth Megging, Cast, Script Swell

"HE MARRIED HIS WIFE"
(20th Century-Fox)

Associate producer....Raymond Griffith
Director................................Roy Del Ruth Screenplay: Sam Hellman, Darrell Ware, Lynn Starling, John O'Hara.
Original story: Scott Darling and Erna Lazarus.
Photography....................Ernest Palmer

The Players: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy, Lyle Talbot, Elisha Cook, Jr., Barnett Parker, Harry Hayden, Charles Wilson, Charles D. Brown, Spencer Charters, Leyland Hodgson, William Edmunds.

This is one long laugh riot. After an introductory moment or two, almost subdued in tone, its gusty comedy suddenly leaps from the screen to take the audience almost by surprise, and thereafter the laughs pile up so rapidly that frequently they stumble over each other as the picture sweeps to an excruciating climax. The brakes were taken off for this one. It's part screwball, part ultra-sophisticated farce, part just plain slapstick, and part straight situational humor, done in a semi-burlesque, tongue-in-cheek vein. The gratifying result was achieved by a combination of spirited performers and a swell script in the hands of a director who used these materials brilliantly and, under his facile guidance, moulded them into a picture which is going to be a smash at the boxoffice.

The story is about a man who is "crazy over horses" and the girl who divorced him because of his race track passion, although they're still in love with each other. It's about irksome alimony payments, the ex-husband's self-delusion that he wants to see her remarry so he can escape the monthly checks, and about their lawyer friend and her former sweetheart and a dizzy, oft-married woman to whose country home all concerned find themselves spending a weekend, including a dark, handsome, amorous stranger who gums up everything until it all winds up in a wedding scene the like of which never was on land or sea before.

Everyone in the cast is tops, but special honors must be accorded Nancy Kelly who, in an exacting role of a type she never has essayed before, as the divorced wife, demonstrates an unexpected flair for comedy, and to Mary Boland who breezes through the part of the screwy hostess with hilarious zest. Joel McCrea, Roland Young, Cesar Romero, Elisha Cook, Barnett Parker and all the others deserve encomiums as well.

Roy Del Ruth turned in a whale of a directorial job. The pace and rhythm he injected into the entire picture and his deft handling of difficult scenes, particularly the closing episode, are masterful. The script by Sam Hellman, Darrell Ware, Lynn Starling and John O'Hara is replete with firecracker lines and swell situations, given an excellent foundation in the original story by Scott Darling and Erna Lazarus. Ernest Palmer's photography is of the best. The entire production is just about tops on the record of Associate Producer Raymond Griffith.

ALLIED CHIEFS TURN TO NEELY BILL, TRUST SUITS, MAJORS' FILM TERMS

Anti - Block Booking Measure, Government Action Said by Myers to "Embody Basic Principles" of Allied Plans

Legislative and organizational problems bulked large in the considerations of the board of directors of the National Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, holding their annual meeting in Washington on Wednesday and Thursday.

Neely Bill and Trust Suits

Behind closed doors at their Washington home, the Carlton hotel, on 16th Street, members of the board gathered, on Wednesday, to deal with one of the most extensive programs ever faced at the yearly round table.

Taking up, first, the most important matters in the current situation, the board, after being greeted by President Henry Albert Cole, and receiving the report of Abram Fern Myers, chairman and general counsel, plunged into a discussion of the Neely Bill and the Government monopoly suit.

These two activities, Mr. Myers declared, "embody the basic principles which Allied seeks to establish.

"These measures are the only ones thus far devised for accomplishing reforms, the need for which is widely recognized," he said.

Success in the two efforts will bring to the independent exhibitors complete "emancipation," he told the group.

Delays Protested

Sharp criticism of the delay tactics, which, it was charged, had been followed by the "big eight" film companies involved in the New York suit, and of reports repeatedly circulated that the case would never come to trial, was voiced in the discussion.

Requirements that the Government supply the large company defendants with the names of its prospective witnesses, in advance of the trial, are causing grave concern among the exhibitors, a number of whom probably will be called to testify, but Mr. Myers urged that any of his group should not hesitate.

"I know from long experience," he said, "how reluctant some exhibitors are to incur the displeasure of branch managers and sales managers, no matter how much they want to aid in measures for exhibitor relief. I am hopeful that the court will take special precautions to protect exhibitor witnesses, and I want to emphasize to you leaders the difference between testifying for the Government and testifying for a private litigant. The Government has, and I am confident that it will exercise, the power to protect its witnesses against intimidation and reprisals."

Sees Drive on House

Characterizing the passage of the Neely Bill by the Senate as the "outstanding accomplishment" of the past year, Mr. Myers said that the bitterest drives directed toward Congress in many years are being centered on members of the House by opponents of the legislation.

"It may be that the use of these methods will react against those employing them, just as the use of similar methods discredited certain opponents of the anti-holding company provisions of the Securities and Exchange Bill a few years ago," he said. "In the meantime it would be folly to underestimate the effect of these methods on uninformed and undiscriminating persons."

TERRE HAUTE GROUP FORMED

Theatre owners and managers in Terre Haute, Ind., at a meeting last week formed a new group to be known as the Terre Haute Theatres Association. A. H. Kaufman, proprietor of the Fountain theatre, was elected president. Other officers are S. P. Katzenbach, general manager of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, vice-president, and Maurice Reinking, manager of the Idaho and Swan theatres, secretary. Among those who attended the meeting were Nat Blank, manager, New Orpheum; H. J. Arnold, manager, Indiana; John Wycoff, manager, American and Liberty; J. B. Stine, proprietor of the Garfield; Ben Van Borssum and Jack Van Borssum, proprietors of the Savoy and West, and Boyd Bell, proprietor of the Lyceum.

Regional units of New York Allied met Wednesday in New York, Thursday in Syracuse, and the Albany unit is to gather Monday in Albany.

Allied of Connecticut postponed its meeting until after the Allied national directors conference in Washington, this week.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association was to hold its annual meeting and election on Thursday in its clubrooms.

He urged that Allied members should not "relax vigilance," but should be on the alert to correct harmful publicity regarding the bill, wherever it appears.

"The abolition of compulsory block booking and blind selling dovetails with their divorcement, and, when the two are attained the emancipation of the independent exhibitors will be complete," he said in summation.

Says Control Is Being Lost

"Not only have the independent exhibitors had to cope with the unfair competition of the affiliated chains, but they have gradually been losing control over the operating policies of their theatres. Denied the privilege of buying under selective contracts, a privilege reserved for favored chains, they have little choice as to the pictures they exhibit. Due to the unwillingness of the distributors in recent years to identify any pictures, except specials, in their license agreements, the exhibitors do not know, when they make their contracts, whether the picture advertised will be delivered or what they will have to pay for any particular picture."

Discussion of the Neely Bill centered around means of combating attacks on the legislation, the organization of support, and plans for representation at the hearings, which, members of the board predicted, would be called soon by the House interstate commerce committee.

W. A. "Al" Steffes, leader of the Northwest Allied, said in New York, on Monday, before he went to Washington, that he expected the bill to be passed "by a two-thirds majority—at least." Of the campaign by opponents of the bill, he said he "thought they had given up."

Other Allied arguments for Neely Bill passage were set in print this week in a "Little White Book," and sent to exhibitors and women's clubs throughout the country, from Allied's Washington headquarters.

Cooperation in Suits

The consideration of the Government suit centered, as was to be expected since the organization is not directly involved, around the dangers to which independent exhibitor witnesses might be subjected as a result of testimony adverse to the distributors, and methods in which Allied members could cooperate with the Department of Justice in bringing about a full revelation of conditions.

At the Wednesday afternoon session, the board went into other fields, discussing the menace of a general strike growing out of a local labor dispute.

Allied officers saw in current labor trends a definite threat to exhibitors. It was pointed out that labor, from studio to theatre, gradually is being drawn into one great union, so that union difficulties in the studios might result in a strike throughout the industry.

Oppose Trade Practice Codes

Little improvement in relations with other branches of the industry was seen by Allied leaders. They were represented as remaining adamant in their opposition to the distributors' trade practice code, but commended the action of Gradwell Sears (Warner general sales manager) in adopting more generous policies for his company.

Nevertheless, it was indicated, independent exhibitors still are hopeful that a satisfactory voluntary solution may be found. It was pointed out that complaints of unreasonable clearance, unsound zoning, overbuying, and other abuses are increasing.

Sales Terms Attacked

Also protested were the sales terms for "Gone With the Wind," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Pinocchio," and "Gulliver's Travels." Radio giveaways and the use of film stars on air programs came in for criticism. Allied has considered joining a campaign to fight the radio "Pot of Gold" $1,000 giveaways.

The group gave consideration to the increasing competition of 16 mm films.

It has made a survey of the parking problem.

The annual fellowship dinner of the directors and their alternates and guests was held Wednesday night, with all speeches "off the record."

Those who had made reservations for the board gathering and Eastern regional meetings, on Tuesday, were Bennie Berger, Ray Branch, Herman Blum, Joseph Conway, Roy Harrold, Fred Herrington, J. H. Hiser, I. R. Holycross, Frank Hornig, E. Thornton Kelly, Jack Kirsch, Frank Lydon, Richard Marks, Sam Myers, Ernest Miller, Lee Newbury, Charles Olive, Wilbur Peterson, M. A. Rosenberg, Sidney Samuelson, Martin Smith, Max Stern, Jacob Unger, R. Wilkins, Nathan Yamins, and, as mentioned, Mr. Steffes, Mr. Myers, and Colonel Cole.

Chain Tax Would Include Theatres

Theatres are included under the term "stores" in a proposed amendment to the New York State tax law introduced this week by Assemblyman Louis Bennett. The act would set up regulations for licenses for the operation, maintenance, opening or establishment of stores in New York State.

"Store" Defined

Under the proposed act a license is required for every "store," which includes "stores, restaurants, theatres, mercantile establishments or other places for the vending of goods, wares, merchandise, supplies, materials or equipment or performance and rendition of work, labor and services which are owned, operated, maintained or controlled by the same person, firm, copartnership, association or corporation."

In addition to a filing fee of $.50 the annual license fees prescribed in the act are: $50 for each store in excess of two and not more than five; $100 for each store in excess of five and not more than ten; $250 for each store in excess of ten and not more than 25 stores; $1,000 for each store in excess of 25.

Mr. Bennett's proposal has been referred to the committee on taxation, with little likelihood seen for passage at the present session.

Sunday Shows Barred

Cohoes, New York, passed an ordinance last Friday banning Sunday operation of motion picture theatres.

New York's stock transfer tax, long protested by persons dealing in motion picture stock as well as all other types of securities, was assailed by the State Chamber of Commerce in a resolution mailed to members of the legislature meeting in Albany. A reduction in the taxation of transfers of securities was urged.

Nebraska Passes No Film Laws

Nebraska's unicameral legislature concluded its special session this week without any action affecting the show business. However, definite plans have been formed to introduce at least one such bill at the regular session which opens Jan. 2, 1941. This, sponsored by Bob Livingston, will deal with clearance and will require that all films be played within 45 days after their national release date or the buyer be forced to pay full contract price and the film released from first-run obligation to be sold elsewhere. Overbuying is the target.

Mr. Livingstone also wants to arouse opposition to current first-run balcony price scales which he holds are so low that the subsequent runs are hurt.

Theatres come with the scope of the Illinois six-day week law but radio stations are outside that law, according to a ruling of John E. Cassidy, State Attorney General. The law provides that employers must allow workers at least 24 consecutive hours of rest each week.

Would Restore Occupational Tax

The General Assembly of Kentucky is considering a restoration of the occupational tax on theatres and other establishments. The measure was introduced by the governor's legislative council.

After a short trial the Sunday closing ordinance of Hobbs, New Mexico, is slated for repeal. Merchants found the regulation hurt business.

Three motion picture theatres in Anniston, Ala., have resumed Sunday shows on a ruling by Judge R. B. Carr.

The City Council of Wilmington, Del., has postponed action for another week on the proposed fire prevention ordinance to limit standing room.

Bulk Sale Sought Of GN's Assets

Harry Fromberg, trustee of Grand National, is negotiating with motion picture companies for the sale of assets of the company in bulk, according to Joseph Dannenberg, attorney for the trustee. Mr. Dannenberg, who was the attorney for the Creditor's Committe, withheld the names of the companies.

Furniture and fixtures were sold Tuesday at the order of Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr. Five days' notice to creditors was given. The trustee was authorized to continue the company's business for 20 days in order to bring the records up to that date. Temporary headquarters have been established at 300 Fourth Avenue.

Grand National ceased operating last Wednesday when the trustee discharged approximately 100 employees.

Seven pictures which were being distributed by GN are to be returned to their producers, according to the referee's order. The California assets of the company must be sold within ten days.

Court Orders RKO Assets Hearing

At a hearing ordered for Thursday by Federal Judge William Bondy, the Irving Trust Company, trustee for RKO, was expected to be directed to turn over all assets held by the trustee to the new RKO company within five days. This action would complete the major steps in the reorganization.

All But $20,000 Involved

Assets to be transferred included everything held by the trustee with the exception of $20,000 in cash which will be retained for future administration expenses. The Irving Trust Company will be then discharged from its supervision of the film company's proceedings and the court's jurisdiction will be limited to matters which directly concern the execution of the reorganization plan and allowances up to the final order of discharge.

Trustees of various indentured issues of RKO, the Chemical Bank & Trust Company, the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Company and the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, will be ordered to deliver releases to the new company. And the new RKO will be ordered to release the Irving Trust Company and to hold it free from any subsequent suits brought against it as trustee.

The Irving Trust will pay in full all claims previously allowed and all future allowances and expenses. The Trust Company will have a prior lien on the company's assets for these payments and right of access to its books and records. Within 40 days all applications for allowances must be filed.

The Securities and Exchange Commission will study and make recommendations on all applications for final allowances, it was disclosed in court Wednesday.

The injunction granted in June, 1934, which restrained RKO from transferring or selling any of its assets will be vacated but creditors and stockholders will not be allowed to bring suit against the company or levy on its assets.

A total of 8,000,000 shares of common stock and 130,000 preferred will be issued by the new company. The Bankers Trust Company will act as agent in the issuance of the new securities. Atlas Corporation has picked up 249,272 shares of the new 500,000 share issue. Atlas will pay $645,816 less the underwriting fee of $.25 per share for the stock. RKO will receive about $1,400,000 on the stock issue.

692,000 by Atlas

Atlas Corporation will hold a total of approximately 692,000 shares, including those held by its subsidiary, the American Company and those held in association with Lehman Brothers. RCA will hold about 673,500 and Rockefeller Center about 663,500. In addition to those holdings, Atlas will have about 53,000 shares of the new RKO preferred which is convertible into common stock and RCA will have about 44,855 shares of the preferred. The new company is limited to a funded debt of $3,000,000 while preferred stock remains outstanding.

The Atlas Corporation may elect to receive its compensation for its reorganization services in additional shares of common stock in an amount approved by the court.

Price, Waterhouse Company has been approved as auditors to prepare the 1939 statement. Judge Bondy signed the application made by the trustee, the Irving Trust Company. Compensation is not to exceed $4,800.

VETERANS BOOST "FIGHTING 69TH"; 105 "WIND" DATES SET IN 95 CITIES

Banquets, Legion Gatherings Set to Push Warner Picture; Elaborate Premieres Planned for "Blue Bird" and "Lincoln"

Warner Brothers' new "The Fighting 69th" will have simultaneous premieres in connection with Rainbow Division army veterans' celebrations to be held all over the country on Wednesday. The "Old 69th," which became the 165th Infantry in the Rainbow Division during the World War, will stage the "key" celebration at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. Prominent guests will be present at the special dinner-previews and in some cities the day will be honored by the mayor, this in the latest of the majors' recent moves to usher in new product under auspicious showmanship methods.

Countrywide Observation

In addition to the New York celebration the following Rainbow Division chapters have announced similar get-togethers: Chicago, Washington, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Youngstown, Oklahoma City, Denver, Marysville, Ohio; Orlando, Florida; San Diego, Lancaster, Montgomery, South Bend, Birmingham, Mobile, Danville, Illinois, and Los Angeles. The state chapters of Illinois, Iowa and South Carolina will also hold dinner-celebrations.

The New York meeting is sponsored by Col. John J. Mangan, present commander of the regiment, and Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Anderson of the New York National Guard. Among the guests of honor will be Col. William ("Wild Bill") Donovan, war time commander of the regiment; Raymond J. Kelley, national commander of the American Legion; Jack L. Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers and James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and George Brent of the film's cast; Major General Frank McCoy, former commander of the U. S. Second Corps area; Major General William N. Haskell and Leo T. McCauley, Irish consul general.

Others who have accepted invitations to attend the New York premiere include Bernard Gimbel, Martin Conboy, Colonel Charles Burleigh, the Hon. Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Commander Charles Hahn, Brigadier General Rex B. Delacour, Adjutant-General of Connecticut; Captain William B. Gibbon, Judge Cornelius F. Collins, General William J. Costigan and the Rev. John P. Boland. Governor Lehman has been invited to speak at the dinner.

City Cooperation

Councilman Joseph Sharkey introduced a resolution in the New York Council Tuesday to make Wednesday January 24th "69th Regiment Day" in honor of the regiment and the motion picture.

The Chicago dinner-preview which is expected to rival in size the gathering in New York, was given special attention when Mayor Edward J. Kelley of Chicago proclaimed January 24th as "Rainbow Day." The Chicago chapter of the World War Rainbow Division will hold a reunion banquet that evening, at which the Warner Brothers picture will be the highlight.

A feature of the celebration will be an address by Gov. Gen. Douglas MacArthur of the Philippines that will be carried by a special hookup which will link the celebrations in the various cities.

A number of the players in the film will attend the Los Angeles dinner. Joseph Scott is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Players who will attend include: Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan, Dick Foran, William Lundigan, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Frank Wilcox, De Wolf Hopper, Sammy Cohen, Tom Dugan and Harvey Stephens.

MONOGRAM TIEUP WITH UNCLE DON PROGRAM

Monogram has arranged with "Uncle Don" of the Mutual radio network for a child talent contest, the third such event. Sponsored on 19 stations throughout the country and available to the rest of the network, the program is heard daily at 6 P. M. Paramount arranged the contest in 1938 and 20th-Fox in 1939.

The award in the contest which runs from January to June is a speaking part in a Monogram picture. After the picture appearance the winning child will make guest star appearances on radio programs, as well as stage appearances.

Twenty judges will choose the final winners, a boy and a girl. The New York Board of Education has approved the questions which will form the basis of part of the judging. Preliminary auditions will be held in the WOR studios in New York City and other sections of the Metropolitan area. Last year 3,000 children were given auditions. A member of Monogram's talent department will be one of the judges.

The sponsors of the Los Angeles affair include Governor Olson, Bishop Cantwell, General Farrel, head of the California National Guard; Rabbi Magnin, Judge LeRoy Dawson, Colonel J. O. Donovan and Joseph I. Breen.

In Kansas City the local Rainbow Division members have been asked to cooperate in the campaign. B. G. Shepherd, president of the Missouri and Kansas chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans, has sent letters to all members in the area asking them to listen to the nationwide broadcast January 24th and to attend the showing of the film at the Orpheum theatre. A special showing of the picture is being held this Friday night.

Radio Attention Arranged

"The Fighting 69th" will receive important attention on the radio: Frank McHugh, featured in the picture, was a guest star on the Bing Crosby radio program Thursday night over the CBS system. Frank Munn will sing Joyce Kilmer's "Trees" on the Waltz Time radio program over the NBC blue network Friday as a tribute to the picture in which Jeffrey Lynn portrays the poet who died in the war.

James Cagney and Pat O'Brien are to appear on the Kate Smith hour, CBS, on next Friday, in a dramatization of highlights from the picture. The broadcast will be from 8 to 9 P.M. (EST). Twelve minutes in the Ninth Annual "Hello America" program on February 15th will be given to "The Fighting 69th." Stars from the picture will also take part in that broadcast.

Zanuck, vice president in charge of production of 20th Century-Fox were scheduled to arrive Thursday in New York to be present at the opening of "The Blue Bird", starring Shirley Temple, at the Hollywood theatre on Friday night. PARAMOUNT NEWS GETS WAR FILMS

Repeating its "scoops" claimed on the German march through Poland and the shelling of the Westerplatte fortress, Paramount News released on Tuesday what was said to be the first complete pictorial record of the resistance of the Finns to the Russian invaders. The pictures were taken by Arthur Menken, Paramount cameraman, and arrived in New York Monday aboard the American Clipper.

In his report, which arrived with the film, Mr. Menken said that he had managed to get himself placed right at the firing line in weather which hovered around 30 degrees below zero.

"The guns got going and so did I . . . I tell you, you actually stumble over these guns before you see them, they're that well concealed. And the Finns' marksmanship is incredibly accurate. They weren't rehearsing for me either," Mr. Menken wrote.

Harry Brand, studio advertising and publicity director, arrived Monday in New York. Ralph Dietrick, cameraman and Ray Hanrahan, color technician also arrived. They will work with Mr. Lanfield on "South American Way" scenes. John Goring of the exploitation staff has returned from Detroit and will handle the New York roadshow of "The Blue Bird". Sam Blair will be in charge of the Detroit run which will open February 2nd.

Irving Berlin, Nunnally Johnson, John Carradine and Johnny Russell of the "Blue Bird" cast also will attend the local premieres.

"Lincoln" Advance Sales

Seats are selling four weeks in advance for RKO Radio's "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" in Washington. The premiere of the picture will be held in that city at RKO Keith's theatre on January 22nd with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt heading the list of guests. The event is being sponsored by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington.

A special box office has been established in the lobby to handle the reserved seat sale. Road shows of motion pictures in Washington up to now have had tickets on sale a week or two but never before had a regular motion picture theatre followed this policy.

A number of famous political writers will be present at the premiere. These include Mark Sullivan; Frederick William Wile; Harlan Miller; Brian Bell, head of the Associated Press Washington Bureau: Pearson and Allen of the Washington Merry-Go-Round; Lee Miller; Bruce Caton; Mark Foote, president of the Gridiron Club; Lyle C. Wilson; Felix Morley and Earl Godwin, head of the White House Correspondents Association.

John Cromwell, director of the picture, based on Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize Play, reached New York Monday. He will attend the Washington opening.

Plans for the Southern States Premiere of the picture in connection with the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tennessee, are being completed. A number of prominent figures in public life will be present at that showing, which is by invitation only. Ruth Gordon, Broadway stage actress, will attend the Southern States Premiere to see her screen debut as Mary Todd opposite Raymond Massey as Abraham Lincoln.

The Lincoln Memorial University is offering two scholarships to high school seniors in the United States who write the best 1,000 word essays on "A Student Looks at 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois'." The first prize covers a four-year scholarship including all expenses; the second prize will be a four-year scholarship covering only one-half of the board, room and tuition. The contest begins on Lincoln's Birthday and ends May 15th. Winners will be announced on Commencement day. Robert E. Sherwood, author of the play will be one of the judges.

The picture will open at the Senate Theatre in Harrisburg, for an indefinite run on January 29th. This will be a pre-release showing following the world's premiere. The evening performance will be reserved and seats will sell for $1.10. In the morning and afternoon the picture will run continuously with the price at $.75.

The Center Theatre was considered for the New York showing of "Lincoln" but the plan had to be changed because that theatre will play "Pinocchio". It is now reported that "Lincoln" will follow "The Blue Bird" at the Hollywood Theatre.

"New York" in Miami

The premiere of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Little Old New York" will be held in Miami Beach at the Lincoln Theatre on January 31st. The picture stars Alice Faye, Richard Greene and Fred MacMurray. The opening will be a gala affair with advanced prices.

Carl Erbe of the exploitation staff is in Miami Beach preparing for the premiere. Christy Wilbert of the advertising department arrives there next week.

A preview of "Little Old New York" will be given on the "Good News of 1940" radio programs next Thursday. Alice Faye, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce, all of the picture cast, will be heard on the broadcast over the NBC-Red network at 9:00 P.M. (EST).

The price scale, it was reported, will be 40, 65 and 99 cents.

War and Films

Stimulation of unit production will be one effect of the war upon the industry, in the belief of Frank Lloyd, who has contributed such entertainment as "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Wells Fargo" and "If I Were King."

Currently working on "Tree of Liberty," for release by Columbia, Mr. Lloyd told your reporter this week that although the effects of the war would not be as serious as was first believed, the trend towards economy would continue, with added emphasis placed on recognized marquee value in stars and stories.

Thus he sees, as a logical development of the factors resulting from the war and its impact on the motion picture, continued emphasis on the unit system of production, geared to concentration on one subject at a time, with all departments coordinated in working on one theme.

Morros Margins

Undisturbed in the midst of a constant succession of calls and conferences, Boris Morros this week outlined his plans for the production of four pictures for 1940, all to be released through RKO Radio, as was his "Flying Deuces."

Mr. Morros, whose fondness for wearing apparel of a striking nature is almost as well known in Hollywood as are his musical abilities, provided a gay note in his office, with a plaid suit, harmonizing with a shirt which had a grey collar and pink body.

Production, he said, had been his dream for many a year, and its fulfillment was a great source of happiness to him.

The four pictures are "We, the People," a modernized version of "Lysistrata," a motion picture version of the French play "Si Je Voulais," and a musical.

The first is based on the Phillips Lord radio program, with 1,500 of the original stories used on the program already purchased. While Ralph Steiner, who made "The City," is to direct one of the sequences, other directors to handle other parts of the picture, there is a possible alternative in that one director (Mr. Morros has Fritz Lang in mind) may be assigned the whole project. No "Hollywood actors" are wanted in this picture by Mr. Morros, who wants to portray human, every day citizens, and sees the picture's "leitmotif in the fact that each single American is an individual hero in the working out of his own life."

In his screen version of "Lysistrata," Aristophanes' Greek comedy, said Mr. Morros, negotiations are underway with Rouben Mamoulian to direct the picture, with Donald Ogden Stewart scheduled to write the satirical screen play.

"Si Je Voulais" (If I Wish) has just been purchased by Mr. Morros, and is a French stage play by Paul Geraldi. Noel Langley, who in collaboration wrote the screen play which was the basis of "The Wizard of Oz," is tentatively slated to do the screen adaptation.

The musical will either be "The Royal Box," a stage play by Ladislaus Fodor, or "Second Chorus," a story about music and musicians, with Artie Shaw or Leopold Stokowski seen by Mr. Morros as figuring prominently in the picture. Whichever of the two is decided upon, negotiations are currently underway with Victor Schertzinger, director of "The Mikado," to handle that assignment here.

PRODUCTION SLUMPS; 2 START, 4 FINISH

This week in Hollywood saw a further drop in production, with four pictures finished and two started. Last week six were finished and two also started. Shooting were 23, compared to last week's 26, and 65 were being edited, contrasted with the 74 of the preceding two weeks. Nineteen were being prepared, a gain of two over the week before.

RKO Radio finished two: "Little Orvie" and "Bill of Divorcement." Columbia completed "Passport to Alcatraz" and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wound up work on "New Moon."

Shooting were two at Columbia, one at Samuel Goldwyn, one at MGM, two at Paramount, three at RKO, one at Edward Small, four at Twentieth Century-Fox, three at Universal and four at Warner Brothers.

One short subject was completed at MGM and three started, also the only three shooting. In preparation were five at Columbia, two at MGM, and one apiece at RKO and Warners.

Eleven were being edited, Warners accounting for four, Columbia for three, and RKO and MGM for two each.

U. S. BOX OFFICE TAX COLLECTIONS OFF $1,327,892, TO $17,096,415

Year's Total at Variance with Sharp Advance in Recent Months; Higher Receipts from Cut Rates

A drop of $1,327,892 in U. S. admission tax collections at the boxoffice accounted for the greater part of the decline of $1,329,977 in all admission tax collections in the year ended June 30th, last, as compared with the preceding year, it was disclosed last week by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, at Washington.

Box-office collections for 1938-39, it was shown by the bureau's annual report, totaled $17,096,415, against $18,423,307 in 1937-38. Total admission tax collections for 1938-39 from all sources were $19,470,802, against $20,800,779 in 1937-38.

Higher in Recent Months

However, sky-rocketing federal admission-tax collections in the last few months, reflecting increased box office income, have influenced the Treasury Department to make an upward revision of its original estimates of revenue from that source during the 1939-40 fiscal year, it was disclosed in the annual budget sent to the new session of Congress by President Roosevelt, on January 3rd. He asked for $460,000,000 in new taxes to defray the expense of his emergency national defense program.

The budget estimated the return from the admission tax at $20,500,000 for 1939-40, an increase of $1,300,000 over the original estimate made 12 months ago on the basis of then existing conditions, and figures the revenue for the 1940-41 fiscal year, which begins July 1st, next, even higher, at $21,600,000.

In addition to 1938-39 collections at the box-office, the admission tax report showed the receipt of revenues during the fiscal year of $667,099 from free or reduced rate admissions, against $575,954 in 1938; $68,926 from leases of boxes or seats, against $42,954; $23,661 from tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices, against $42,954; $172,495 from ticket brokers' sales, against $186,619, and $1,442,204 from cabarets and roof gardens, against $1,516,748.

Half from Three States

More than half of the total 1938-39 box-office collections were derived from three states: New York, with $6,402,255 against $6,933,909 in 1937-38; California $2,025,017 against $2,042,397, and Illinois $1,404,081 against $1,629,549. The smallest collection recorded was $4,958 in North Dakota.

As usual, 1938-39 collections in many of the states differed widely from those of the preceding year, the revenue from Georgia showing an increase of more than 150 per cent, from $71,486 to $184,496, while that from Utah was reduced nearly 60 per cent, from $41,322 to $17,221.

The year 1938-39 also was marked by long jumps, in some states, of the revenue from free or reduced rate admissions. Only four states, Idaho, North Carolina, Utah and Virginia, showed no returns in that classification. Indications that in some states the race tracks figured largely in this category are seen in the return of $109,956, or some 12 per cent of box-office taxes, in Massachusetts; $99,708, against $116,585 in box-office collections, in Rhode Island; and $32,376, or 133 per cent of box-office collections, in New Hampshire.

FINE ARTS STARTS; LUBITSCH, WEEKS, PASCAL PRODUCING; COLUMBIA MEETS

Sam Sax Resigns; Boris Morros Sets Four; Two New Companies Will Produce in East

Hollywood product and personnel realignments, both the brand new and the new growing out of the old, this week brought Fine Arts from production to production-distribution, set up Ernst Lubitsch and Gabriel Pascal as producers under new banners, established two new producers in the east.

Franklyn Warner Move

Franklyn Warner, president of Fine Arts Pictures, this week announced the formation of Fine Arts Producing and Distributing Corporation. The new company already has 15 exchanges in as many cities and negotiations this week were under way for exchanges in four other centers. Sol Edwards is eastern representative for the company. It is expected that offices will be set up in a total of 25 cities.

The new exchanges and the manager of each are: Boston, Marcel Mekelberg; Cleveland, Mae Vincent; Chicago, Cleve Adams; Des Moines, for Des Moines and Omaha, Phil Monsky; Kansas City, Sol Hankin; Minneapolis, Eph Rosen; New York, Dick Perry; Philadelphia, Herbert Given; Pittsburgh, Max Shugold; St. Louis, Joseph Hartman; Washington, Joseph Kolisky; Los Angeles, William Riter; San Francisco, Bradley Fish; Detroit, Ralph Peckham; Indianapolis, for Indianapolis and Cincinnati, Had Hull.

Deals are being negotiated in Atlanta, New Orleans, Buffalo and Dallas.

Mr. Warner left Hollywood for New York Wednesday. He is planning to tour the company's exchanges.

The company's schedule calls for 26 features and 16 action pictures for next season. However, he will now release five features which a New York court ordered Grand National to return to Mr. Warner. They are "Shadows Over Shanghai," "Frontier Scout," "Cipher Bureau," "Long Shot," and "Panama Patrol." Two others "Exile Express" and "Children of the Wild" are ready and it is expected that seven new films will be released between February 15th and the end of August.

Lubitsch, Pascal, Weeks

Ernst Lubitsch has completed his two picture contract with MGM and is seeking story properties for his new company, Ernst Lubitsch Productions, which will release through United Artists.

While the United Artists contract calls for three pictures in two years, the producer said that figure might be increased if he found suitable material.

Gabriel Pascal becomes a United Artists producer under an exclusive three year contract concluded this week with Murray Silverstone, executive head of the distributing company. His first production under the new contract, George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara," will continue the Pascal-Shaw relationship begun with "Pygmalion." The picture will be made in England with Wendy Hiller, star of "Pygmalion," and Robert Morley in the leads.

George W. Weeks, retiring as general sales manager for Monogram on March 1st, expects to make at least eight features for Monogram release.

Four Set by Morros

Four pictures for 1940 are planned by Boris Morros, former Paramount musical director now producing for release through RKO. The productions are: "We, the People," a modernized version of "Lysistrata," a screen version of the French play, "Si Je Voulais" (If I Wish), and a musical.

ZUKOR, LASKY ON LA GUARDIA PLAN

Two former associates in film production, among the founders of the motion picture industry, and leaders of the Famous Players-Lasky, Feature Play Company, and Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation days (days in which many motion pictures were produced in New York)—this week firmly disagreed, not in debate, but in independent viewpoint, on the practicability of New York Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia's plans to establish a "Hollywood on the Hudson," rivaling the Coast, and similar to Benito Mussolini's "Cinema City."

The men were Jesse L. Lasky, now a radio impresario, and scheduled to resume film production this summer; and Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount, and now engaged in surveying the company's activities throughout the world. Mr. Lasky was in New York to close a deal with a new sponsor of his radio program, "The Search for Talent," after which he is to make a picture at the end of each 13 weeks of broadcasting the program, using in the picture the talent uncovered in the previous 13 weeks. Mr. Zukor was conferring with Paramount home office officials in New York, preparatory to a South American trip.

Mr. Zukor thinks production in New York impractical, though not impossible. Mr. Lasky thinks production in New York practical and possible.

Two New Producers

Organization of an independent company to produce in New York has been announced by C. J. Dunphy, former stock broker and former studio publicity director for Paramount. He said the company, as yet unnamed, would spend $600,000 for its first two films, "Bricks Without Straw" and "Song on Your Bugle." Marion Gering will be in charge of production. Columbia may produce.

Plans of Jubilee Pictures, a new company, to produce in the east were announced this week. The company plans immediate production of one film with six others under discussion.

Fleischer Starts New Cartoon

Work has begun on a new feature cartoon at the Fleischer studio in Miami. The film will be produced by Max Fleischer and directed by Dave Fleischer and the writing staff will be headed by Edmond Seward. As yet untitled, the cartoon will be based on a Greek myth, and will run seven or eight reels to be ready for Paramount release by Christmas of this year.

Columbia Meets

A. Montague, general sales manager, and Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager for Columbia, were in Dallas this week for the third of the series of divisional sales meetings being held by Columbia. Twenty-seven delegates representing the southern division attended the meeting on Wednesday and Thursday at the Baker Hotel.

Columbia's second sales meeting ended Sunday evening at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago.

Twentieth Century-Fox Sales Drive

Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox general sales manager, has designated February, March and April division managers' months during which the branches will conduct a sales and playdate drive. The drive will be held in W. J. Kupper's western division February 4th to March 2nd; in W. C. Gehring's central division, March 3rd to March 30th, and in William Sussman's eastern division, March 31st to April 27th. A district managers meeting will be called in the near future.

Paramount Building Unit

Ray Milland and Edward H. Griffith, director, will go to England in the spring to work with the Paramount production forces under David E. Rose. It has been announced that Madeleine Carroll will be starred in one of the four or five Paramount pictures to be made in England this year for world distribution. The company will select others from its Hollywood player and director roster for assignments abroad within the next few weeks.

Film Executives on the Road

Leo Abrams, Universal's short subject sales manager, is to be away at least four weeks on a tour of exchanges. He will confer with Universal City studios.

The Ned Depinet Drive advance personnel visited the RKO studios Wednesday. Captain Herb MacIntyre heads the delegation, which includes Cresson E. Smith, Western and Southern sales manager; H. C. Cohen, Western district manager, and Harry Gittleson, editor of the company's house organ. Capt. MacIntyre goes next to Dallas to meet branch manager Sol Sachs' staff.

Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of the Paramount studio, is to confer in New York this week with Barney Balaban, Stanton L. Griffis, Neil F. Agnew, Austin C. Keough and other officials. Cliff Lewis, studio advertising and publicity director, also came to New York.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Nate Blumberg, Joseph Seidelman and W. A. Scully arrived at Universal City last week for conferences on 1940-41 product.

Adolph Zukor, Paramount board chairman, and John W. Hicks, head of the foreign department head, sailed Friday on the Santa Elena for Rio de Janeiro.

Pandro Berman is in New York to confer on his new post as producer for MGM. After about two weeks Mr. Berman will go to Florida for a vacation, then to California.

George Schaefer, RKO president, is to go to the Coast Friday to meet with Harry Edington and other studio executives. Ned E. Depinet will leave for the Coast following the Washington premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" January 22nd.

M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions, returned to Hollywood Monday following sessions in New York with H. J. Yates.

COPYRIGHT LEGISLATION TO SENATE; HOUSE GETS FEDERAL FILM REPORT

Shotwell Committee's Proposal Introduced to Permit Study of "Great Number of Conflicts," Says Thomas

With the introduction in the United States Senate this week, by Senator Thomas (Dem., Utah), of the Shotwell Committee's recommended copyright legislation, the way was paved for consideration of the subject by the Patents Committee, although it is not anticipated that it will be taken up before late February.

Concedes Many Conflicts

Senator Thomas explained that he was introducing the measure by request of the Shotwell group and did so at this time so that interested members of the Senate might have an opportunity to study it in advance of hearings which are expected to be held by the committee. There are, he admitted, "a great number of conflicts in regard to this very intricate matter" which make full study desirable.

At the same time, Senator Thomas' action was seen as serving notice that prompt consideration must be given the measure if it is to be enacted before he presses for action on the international copyright convention. While he is anxious to have the convention ratified, he has agreed to withhold action for a reasonable time in order that the domestic law may be revised, and probably will not make any move on the treaty for three months or so. However, he has indicated, if Congress appears disinclined to act on the legislation promptly, he will bring up the treaty and ask for its approval.

With the bill, Senator Thomas submitted the letter written to the Senate and House Patent Committees by Edith E. Ware, executive secretary of the Committee for the Study of Copyright, in which it was indicated that the only objections to the legislation would come from the broadcasting industry and that the film industry, all phases of which were represented at the conferences, is in approval of the measure.

In view of the fact that all interests concerned presented their views at these conferences, it was suggested, there will not likely be any desire for extended Senate hearings, but, if desired, the committee will furnish such information, including memoranda submitted by various groups during the drafting of the bill, which may be requested.

Defines Rights

The bill defines the various rights which may be disposed of separately by an author, including the right to make motion pictures with or without sound, to make a transcription of any sort, to exhibit a motion picture, or to synchronize a musical work for use in motion pictures.

It is provided, however, that a copyright in a motion picture shall not include the right to grant the use of its accompanying sound track apart from a visual exhibition of the picture. The term of copyright is to be for the life of the author and 50 years after his death, but where the author of a work is not a natural person the copyright shall run for a flat 50 years.

The bill stipulates that no remedies shall be available for the incidental and not reasonably avoidable infringement of a copyrighted work in the depiction or representation of current news events made or taken at, or disseminated from, the scene or location thereof at the time of the occurrence.

THEATRE PROJECT REVIVAL DOUBTED

President Roosevelt's demand on Congress for economy in Government was seen in Washington this week as scuttling all efforts to revive the Federal Theatre Project, which was killed by Congress at the last regular session when it refused to appropriate funds to return the Hallie Flanagan program to operation.

Even though President Roosevelt has voiced his support of the federal theatre project, it is not believed that Congress would look favorably upon either its revival or the creation of the proposed Bureau of Fine Arts at a time when it is called upon to impose $460,000,000 in new taxes.

One of the controverted points of the bill is its provision that at the end of 25 years after the granting of a right, it shall revert to the author or his estate, but that arrangements may be made for continuance in the case of agreements involving royalties. Motion picture and broadcasting interests, it was disclosed, wish this section to be amended to provide that if the grant is under a royalty agreement, it may continue, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary.

Penalties Defined

The penalty sections of the bill provide fines of $100 to $1,000, or imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both, for infringement and seizure of the offending work, and gives the copyright owner the option of recovering damages, or all or such part of the profits of the infringer as the court may deem proper or such statutory damages which shall not be deemed a penalty as shall, in the opinion of the court, be sufficient to prevent their operation as a license to infringe, with a minimum of $250 and a maximum of $10,000, but, in the case of motion pictures exhibited at divers points or broadcasts over more than one station, the infringements may be considered the act of one infringer and the minimum damages increased by $25 for each infringement up to a total of $2,000.

The motion picture interests, it was shown, are anxious to have the collectible profits limited to the profits justly attributable to the work infringed, and the broadcasters are opposed to minimum statutory damages and ask instead for a penalty, in the event that proved damages or profits are impossible of ascertainment, of damages of not less than $150 nor more than $5,000 for all infringements by one infringer up to the date of the suit, but providing the minimum damages shall not apply to infringements by broadcasting or television, and, further, that an infringing broadcast or television performance simultaneously by two or more stations shall be regarded as the act of one infringer.

It is provided that users of copyrighted works receiving grants of rights of the author have copyright with respect to the right granted and are protected against infringement of such right, and may sue infringers without the necessity of joining the author as a party plaintiff.

National Archives Now Has 1,546,241 Feet of Film but, Connor Says, Money Is Needed for Preservation

A total of 1,175,978 running feet of motion picture film, 466,379 feet of which was obtained from private sources and the remainder from 16 U. S. Government agencies, was deposited in the National Archives during the year ended June 30th last, a House Appropriations subcommittee was informed this week by R. D. W. Connor, U. S. Archivist, during hearings on the agencies appropriation bill for the coming year.

Million and Half Feet

At the close of the year, Mr. Connor said, the Archives had a total of 1,546,241 running feet of film. Most of the pictures from private sources were news reels and films illustrative of American history, and the collection of Admiral Byrd's pictures on his Arctic, trans-Atlantic and Antarctic expeditions, he explained.

The Archivist complained that his organization is badly handicapped by lack of money in its efforts to preserve film, many of which are received in bad condition and need to be reproduced. While the Archives has the authority to undertake such work, it has been able to spend only about $52,000 so far in the purchase of equipment and needs another $179,000 to finish the task.

Revision Delayed

The hearings before the subcommittee disclosed also that the U. S. film, "The Plough That Broke the Plains," was withdrawn from circulation in April, 1939, for a revision which has not yet been undertaken because of lack of funds.

This was disclosed by Addison G. Foster, executive officer of the Office of Government Reports, who explained that the picture "was produced at a time when agricultural conditions in certain sections of the country were particularly bad."

"Substantial improvements in these conditions," he said, "made it desirable to add new footage to the film before distribution was continued."

Elect Union Officers

Joseph J. McCloskey has been elected president of the Allegheny Valley Local No. 444 International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees succeeding Philip Bordonaro. The local was organized more than 26 years ago and furnishes operators for 15 Allegheny Valley, Pa., theatres. Other officers are Ralph Milberger, vice-president; Nelson Fike, recording and corresponding secretary; I. E. "Bud" Fike, business agent, and Charles Wolfe, financial secretary. Those elected to membership on the executive board are John Phillips and R. J. Craig with Frank Hunkewitz as sergeant-at-arms. Trustees elected are Bernard Zamperini, Anthony Haracznak and Joseph Milburn.

Adventure in Diamonds

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Produced by A. M. Botsford and directed by George Fitzmaurice, seasoned men of films, this second American appearance of Isa Miranda is a screenworthy melodrama which profits by unfamiliar setting and unpretentious telling. The scene is the South African diamond field and the careful exposition of the processes by which diamonds are obtained is not the least of the film's assets. Another is the ostrich race staged as incidental business, an interesting oddity.

George Brent is co-starred with Miss Miranda and "spark-plugs" the narrative, which is from a story by Frank O'Connor and a screen play by Leonard Lee and Franz Schulz. Nigel Bruce and John Loder lead the support, with Elizabeth Patterson effective as usual in a somewhat too minor assignment.

Miss Miranda plays a diamond thief caught by police, imprisoned and then paroled on condition that she aid the government in outwitting another band of thieves which turns out, surprisingly, to be headed by her original accomplice. Her anti-social attitude is reversed in the big scene of the picture and she turns honest, ultimately satisfying both the legal and romantic equations.

Previewed at the Village Theatre, Westwood, on a quiet evening to a small attendance which, nevertheless, gave audible indication of occasional pleasure.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Green Hell

(Universal)

Adventure Along the Amazon

This Harry Edington production, his first for Universal and incidentally, due to his recently accepted post as head of RKO production, his last, is rich in the name values he was expected to deliver. Especially keen interest attaches just now to the name of the newly wed Joan Bennett for marquee purposes, and that of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was never more important. Add Alan Hale, George Bancroft, George Sanders and Vincent Price, and you have plenty of box office tonic.

The story material occupying the talents of these players is an original narrative and screen play by Frances Marion, another name of consequence, and direction is by the experienced James Whale. It is a name production in every sense.

Miss Marion's tale is about six men who go up the Amazon River in quest of Inca treasure, and the white wife of one of them who follows but arrives after he has died. Treasure is found, a storm threatens the party, hostile natives attack, and friendly natives bring eleventh hour rescue. The story, incident and action are of the serial variety throughout.

Sanders and Bancroft give the most plausible performances.

My Son Is Guilty

(Columbia)

Father and Son "Cops and Robbers"

A "cops and robbers" melodrama, with a sob undertoning the gunfire and hard argot of the underworld, is this variation on the righteous father-errant son theme. The father is a police officer, his boy in a gangster circle. The romantic phase is slight, and anyway she marries the nice boy. Consequently, picture interest is directed toward action advocates.

Harry Carey, the father, demonstrates the likeable naturalness that he displayed in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." Bruce Cabot makes the son as hard boiled as the toughest mug in any local Rogues Gallery. Also in the cast are Jacqueline Wells, Glenn Ford and Wynne Gibson. Charles Barton directed from the script of Harold Shumate and Joseph Carole.

"Ritzy" joins a local mob after serving a bitter stretch in the "pen." The lad becomes associated with the radio department of the city's police force and conveniently arranges for a short circuit of the broadcasting system as his gang stages a payroll holdup. Even the shooting of his father does not deter the son. Finally the father trails his son to the hideout and kills the boy, as he attempts to do a better job of shooting the father than the first time.

The Saint's Double Trouble

(RKO Radio)

Mystery

Leslie Charteris' "Saint" here devotes his attention to the problem of solving various murders committed by a jewel smuggler who has the added distinction of being the physical counterpart of the protagonist. As played by George Sanders, who has had previous experience in these roles, both characters shift constantly on the screen, for purposes of suspense.

Helene Whitney portrays the daughter of a professor murdered by the Saint's double, and provides the romantic aspect of the story, based on the Charteris novel, with screen play credit going to Ben Holmes. Leading roles are also depicted by Jonathan Hale and Bela Lugosi.

Cliff Reid produced, working from the Lee Marcus side of the studio, with Jack Hively directing in a manner to make the most of the situations afforded by a plot which has as its only drawback a too great complexity. The preview audience, while for the most part absorbed in the picture, noted with mirth such sequences as an escape made too easily through barred windows, and one made with the same ease from a sinking speedboat.

of vaudeville magic plus a dash of vaudeville hip-flinging in vaudeville garb.

Alongside Miss Sothern here is seen John Carroll, up from the minor studios to a lead role for this major and handling it capably; he is something of a cross between Gable and Grant without owing too much to either. These stand out against a supporting cast in which J. M. Kerrigan has an effective ship captaincy while Rita Johnson and Shepperd Strudwick perform adequately the secondary leads.

The screen play by Mary C. McCall, Jr., from a book by Wilson Collison, opens with the title character slipping out a hotel window to beat a board bill and stowing away on a Congo river boat in hopes of reaching another city where employment awaits her. She borrows the cabin of the sole paid passenger, a former doctor now turned rubber planter, who pitches her out of it upon the mercies of the boat's captain, who offers her the dubious privilege of sharing his quarters on his terms, which are informal to a fault. The boat blows a boiler and the two find refuge in the home of the doctor who succeeded the present planter. The planter woos the doctor's wife slightly and "Maisie" prevents that from coming to anything final and, after helping in an emergency operation upon the lady's husband, assists the planter in quelling a native rebellion by judicious display of her vaudeville wardrobe, some mildly slithery posturings and, finally, some vaudeville magic timed so as to make it seem she has brought the rain, which ultimately saves the situation. She is to marry the planter, who's to resume being a doctor, after the fadeout.

The film, produced by J. Walter Ruben, is nicely staged and is capably directed by Henry C. Potter. It is primarily humorous in intent, with the adult observer principally in mind.

He Married His Wife

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Sophisticated Comedy

At fairly regular intervals, as if to find out whether the once widespread interest in the sophisticated comedy may be experiencing revival, Darryl F. Zanuck marshals some of his first string talent and has one made. This is such a one, produced by one of his ranking associates, Raymond Griffith, directed by the always dependable Roy Del Ruth and utilizing a screen play derived by no less than four writers from a story by two more. It is, consequently, a polished work, technically speaking, a handsome, well groomed, glib and glossy film for adults.

The player roster is about right as to marquee requirements and the casting is eminently appropriate. The billing of Mary Boland and Roland Young is sufficient in itself, taken in conjunction with the teaser title, to inform the cinema shopper that a comedy is on exhibition. Joel McCrea's name is staple box office, Cesar Romero's is on the rise, and Nancy Kelly, too, has been catching on.

The story boils down to an account of the steps by which a divorced wife still in love with her ex-husband manages to convince him that they shouldn't have been divorced and to bring him around to the point of remarrying her. The action mechanics of the plot are about what they are expected to be in such cases, but the dialogue depended upon as usual to induce most of the sought laughs is given considerable more rope in this number than commonly.

The action takes place in a smart cafe, at a race track and, principally, on and about an extensive country estate, extensively in one the bedrooms in the mansion on said estate, which a character compares, after a number of informal nocturnal visitings, with Grand Central Station, and in the bathroom of said bedroom. Action, setting and dialogue are much what they were in the era when parlor-bedroom-and-bath farce was considered hot stuff on Broadway.

The Man Who Wouldn't Talk

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mystery Drama

Four writers, Robert Ellis, Helen Logan, Lester Ziffren and Edward Ettinger, built an entertaining scenario from the play "The Valiant" by Holworthy Hall and Robert M. Middlemas, and a better-than-average melodrama with some capable acting provides satisfactory entertainment.

The story has its mystery and suspense without the shortcomings of some stories of this type which rush so quickly to a conclusion that the audience hardly knows why it all happened. The narration of this film, though most of the action takes place in a court room, is always clear, with the aid of frequent flash backs.

A financier, played by Onslow Stevens, is murdered. "Joe Monday" (Lloyd Nolan) walks into a courtroom and interrupts the trial of a bookkeeper accused of the crime. He says he killed the financier but gives no additional information except the alias Joe Monday. The girl (Jean Rogers) who believes "Joe Monday" is her long-lost brother and the lawyer (Richard Clarke) appointed by the court to defend him try to solve the mystery. At the trial, which goes into the events of twenty years earlier, in the World War, a surprise witness appears as the jury is about to announce a deadlock. "Joe Monday's" name is cleared and he can acknowledge his identity as the girl's brother.

Lloyd Nolan gives a fine performance as "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk." Jean Rogers and Richard Clarke handle well the principal supporting roles, as does Eric Blore a small part. The director, David Burton, skillfully handled the long court scene with the flashbacks to explain the witnesses' stories.

The title lends itself to a number of leads for exploitation.

The Fatal Hour

(Monogram)

Mass Murder Mystery

Boris Karloff, following his performance as the executioner in "The Tower of London," returns to Monogram to continue in the Mr. Wong series based on stories by Hugh Wiley. In supporting roles are Grant Withers as "Captain Street" of the San Francisco Homicide Squad and Marjorie Reynolds in the role of the girl police reporter.

With William Nigh directing from the screen adaptation by Scott Darling, the picture is interesting although it slows down at various points.

At the opening there is a murder to be solved and a ring of gem smugglers to be smashed. "Mr. James Lee Wong," Oriental detective, aided by "Captain Street" and hindered and then saved by reporter "Bobbie Logan," solves not only the initial murder but three more that have taken place, and breaks the smuggling ring.

One of the more interesting turns of the plot is the use of a remote control box to tune in radio at a distance from the receiver. Here it aids in one of the murders and in helping the murderer to escape.

Among others in the cast are Charles Trowbridge, John Hamilton and Craig Reynolds.

Some three-hundred and fifty-odd telephone calls were received, and to each, a gentle little feminine voice replied: "Sorry, Mr. Hardy isn't in now, but you can see him at the Grand Theatre Sunday, Monday or Tuesday, in 'Judge Hardy and Son.'"

We can still hear the grunts and groans of the callers.

Henry Fonda was just about to bestow a kiss on fair Claudette Colbert, the other Sunday night, on the screen of the Maco theatre in the little town of Virginia, in Minnesota, when suddenly a voice, that surely was not Henry's, boomed:

"Wait a minute, Joe, there's something wrong there—there's a screw loose."

The audience roared.

Just a few seconds before, as Indians were sneaking over the hills to the low rumble of "Drums Along the Mohawk," the startling, sizzling crackle of a modern short wave station intruded on the scene.

It was phenomenal, both from the standpoint of early American warfare and modern movies.

Joe, the operator in the projection room, had turned into a frantic human, searching wildly for a possible loose connection to the amplification system, after hearing the "Heh, Joe" booming of his manager.

H. E. Billings, theatre manager, shouted again. It sounded something like "Call the police, call the marines, call the navy, call somebody," and then, settling for police, he called them.

Police contacted shortwave stations.

The next day, a serviceman, going over equipment, blamed the modern version of "Drums Along the Mohawk" on atmospheric conditions, nothing more.

Boris Karloff, fiercest of Hollywood's fiercest, scareyest of the studios' scarey—raises orchids as a hobby.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" may be the biggest blow ever blown by David Selznick, but let him try to convince the President. And he can have the word of the United Feature writing team of Drew Pearson and Robert Allen for proof. Seems that the picture was shown upstairs in the White House during the Christmas holidays, and most of the Roosevelt family enjoyed it. But the President was working on his message to Congress in the Lincoln study, the room adjoining, and through the partition he could hear the clicking of the motion picture apparatus and the shouts of the characters.

His family had started the film at 10:00 P. M. (it takes nearly four hours). Shortly thereafter, the President, unable to concentrate on his speech, decided to go to bed. The motion picture machine still clicked rhythmically, but he managed to doze off, only to be awakened a little later by sobs.

The President concluded it was Scarlett O'Hara in one of her stormy scenes, and went to sleep again. But he kept waking up every half hour. Always there were sobs. Sobs haunted his dreams, seemed to be interspersed between paragraphs of his message to Congress instead of applause.

Finally, at nearly 2:00 A. M. he woke up to hear cheers for General Sherman. The Yankee general, he concluded, had just taken Atlanta.

"Sherman got it all wrong," the President remarked next morning: "'Gone With the Wind' is hell."

"Nothing about Hollywood really surprises" the Hazelton, Pa., Standard-Sentinel editorial writer anymore. He says he is "all out of gasps for that mythical kingdom of money and madness." So he simply takes in his stride the latest item from that California Cairo. "Quite appropriately, it concerns the art of osculation and relates the tragic fate of one Joseph Roberts and one Miss June Baker, who have lost their jobs as professional kissers.

"The pair has been displaced by a machine designated to test Hollywood studio lipstick at the rate of 1,200 smacks an hour. A famous makeup man is trying to develop lipstick which doesn't adhere to the lips of the male who has been kissed. Until this heartless robot came along, with its confounded cold efficiency, Mr. Roberts and Miss Baker had been osculating while Mr. Max Factor—the Hollywood studio makeup man—noted how much lipstick was transferred to a piece of tissue placed on the lady's lips. Now it's all done with the machine's plastic mouth and a paper gripped by a support.

"Mr. Roberts and Miss Baker had done their conscientious best, but, after their first dozen kisses every morning they would begin to weaken. The standard fell measurably as the day advanced. So they had to capitulate to the robot."

Personally we resent the application of technology to this field.

Dvorak, Wynne Gibson, Douglas Fowley and Arthur Loft who, respectively, are a worldly wise sailor, a cafe hostess, a former cafe hostess, the racketeer owner of the cafe and a "copper." Sidney Salkow directed from the screen play which Harold Shumate based on a story by Tay Garnett and Howard Higgin.

An unusual turn to the story comes when "Dan Walters" (Foster) and his two pals, who are introduced as sailors, but act as G-men, actually remain sailors. Foster does quite a bit of investigating and it is he who gives to the "copper" the information that the plainclothes policeman has been looking for.

A well handled scene concerns the method of "clipping" a customer, a small town-early to bed character who exudes confidence until he finds his wallet has been lifted. He is quick to protest but the odds are against him.

Then there is a murder in the cafe, in which the racketeer "Morgan" plays the leading part, and in the final melee in the cafe "Morgan" is himself murdered by "Annie," one of his former hostesses, who gives herself up to the police.

Lost on the Western Front

Romantic Triangle

"Lost on the Western Front" is a romantic melodrama of the World War. Based on a novel by Mario Fort and Ralph E. Vanloc and adapted for the screen by Harold Simpson, the picture concerns the after effects of the war, along with a love story, but falls a little short of its mark. The picture was made in England a few years ago.

The acting by Paul Cavanaugh and Garry Marsh does much to hold attention. Marcelle Chantal handles the feminine lead and makes the third party of a story built around the love triangle.

The action opens years after the war. "John Morley," onetime sergeant, is now a guide for tourists on the battlefields of France. In the war he had been left to die by his best friend "Rodd Berry," who returned home and married the girl they both loved. At an anniversary celebration, "Rodd" and "Yvonne" return to the scene. She sees "John" but he feigns amnesia. "Yvonne" detects the ruse. It becomes a story of a married woman in love with another man. Finally she determines to observe her responsibilities to her husband and daughter.

Directed by Maurice Elvey and released in this country by World Pictures Corporation, the film offers entertainment for an audience that enjoys heavy dramatics. There are few light moments.

Heroes of the Saddle

(Republic)

Western

"Heroes of the Saddle" has few typically "western" sequences. The story concerns an orphanage, that is being run by hijackers, and a little girl, an inmate whom the heroes of the title seek to adopt. The comparative lack of action perhaps is particularly noticeable because the film is of "The Three Mesquiteers" series which has depended so much on that element.

"The Three Mesquiteers" of the current series are Robert Livingstone, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo. Livingston as "Stony Brooke" is the top hand of the trio. Patsy Lee Parsons is the little girl the boys want to adopt. The customary bit of romance is missing, although the story includes an ingenue, Loretta Weaver.

"Peggy's" father and "The Three Mesquiteers" are friends. So it happens that when the girl's father is killed in a rodeo accident "The Three Mesquiteers" promise to adopt the child, and place her in an orphanage while they go about acquiring money to make a home for her. She is injured in an accident at the orphanage and when the "Mesquiteers" visit her they sense something is amiss at the institution. Their suspicions proved, they "kidnap" all the children and hide them on a ranch. The action concerns the "Mesquiteers'" skirmishes with the hijackers.

Republic of Finland, 1919–1940

Material straight from the banner headlines of today's paper is this latest issue of the March of Time, a pictorial story of gritty Finland's defiance of the Russian Bear. Beginning with a brief visit to various consulates in Washington, winding up at the Finnish embassy, the spectator and auditor are taken on a brief trip through Finland, with details of the historical background and agricultural and industrial life of the people. A highlight is that portion of the material that reports the comments of the Russian representative in Washington that Finland attacked the Soviets and the whole affair is a capitalistic plot. This is a "natural," especially for the week of February 4 to 10, designated "Finland Week" by former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc.—Running time, 18 minutes.

The Canyon Kiddies

The first of the new series of "Canyon Kiddies" cartoons based on the characters created by James Swinnerton, known for his desert landscape paintings and for the "Canyon Kiddies" series familar to readers of Good Housekeeping, this cartoon sets a standard for the group which will be difficult to surpass. The backgrounds are painted in oils instead of water color, and the effects are noticeably rich, while the cartoon itself has both juvenile and adult appeal. It pokes gentle fun at the "Warriors" and their activities during a day of hunting in which struggles with a recalcitrant donkey are involved before sundown brings peace and quiet once again.—Running time, seven minutes.

Miracle at Lourdes

(MGM)

Quizzical Miniature

The story behind the title of this Miniature is thought provoking whatever one's religious interest. A recent newspaper story of a Chicago infantile paralysis victim's pilgrimage to the French grotto has directed the reading public's attention to the place. The wife of a doctor becomes an invalid as the result of an auto crash. With her husband she makes a visit to the miracle site of Lourdes. When the husband is in danger of death from a runaway team, the frantic wife regains the use of her limbs. The tone of the treatment of the case is reverent.—Running time, 11 minutes.

More trick photography adds humor to an already interesting reel.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Making Life Easier

Aerial photography of hitherto inaccessible areas provides the opening sequence of Paramount's latest subject in the Popular Science series. The several hundred maps are assembled on a huge table to be rephotographed as a composite map of many square miles of terrain. Also demonstrated is a new machine, which only four men in the world know how to operate, that is capable of drawing contour maps from the air. The remaining sequences reveal the latest conveniences of the modern bathroom and a method for preserving, indefinitely, all types of blood, a method developed at Baylor University in Dallas. The subject is spiced with another visit to the unusual laboratories of the Wily Wizard of Waukesha, Professor Oakes, who demonstrates two of his latest wacky brain-children.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Pyramids of Mexico

Another subject in the series on Mexico, produced by Max Urban, delves into the archeological history of the Mexican pyramids, from the days of the Aztecs and other ancient civilizations. Designs along the walls and steps provide enlightenment on the beliefs of the people many centuries ago. The subject will be appreciated by those interested in locale and material.—Running time, 11 minutes.

SCREEN ACTORS GUILD TURNS TO AID OF VAUDEVILLE PERFORMERS

Secretary Thomson, in New York, Says Promises Will Be Carried Out; Eastern Publicity Union Is Formed

The Screen Actors Guild stretched out its hand from Hollywood this week to aid a union of fellow entertainers in New York, the American Guild of Variety Artists, which has been having organizational troubles. Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Guild and a vice-president of the Associated Actors and Artists of America, parent union of actors, which last summer chartered the variety actors' guide (vaudeville performers), was in New York to confer with the new union's officials.

Says Promises Will Be Kept

At an AGVA conference on Sunday, in New York's Palm Gardens meeting hall, Mr. Thomson said his Guild was "fully behind the American Guild of Variety Artists" and that "we are fully cognizant of the promises given this past summer, and they will be carried out."

The vaudeville actors' union was formed by the Four A's to succeed its American Federation of Actors, which it expelled last summer. It is said to have some 7,000 members now, half of them paid up in dues. The AFA, which had about 12,000 members at its expulsion, continues as an independent union.

Two executive secretaries of the AGVA have resigned. Its acting secretary is Miss Jean Muir, screen and stage actress.

The Four A's international board two weeks ago asked Mr. Thomson's assistance in organizing the AGVA. The latter's executive board did likewise. Mr. Thomson, in New York on a ten day leave of absence, was the leader, in the Four A's fight last summer against the Federation and its secretary, Ralph Whitehead.

Nominating Committee Picked

At the AGVA Sunday meeting, a committee of nine was elected, to meet on Friday to select a slate for the board. The meeting was picketed by members of the Variety Actors Betterment Committee, a pro-Whitehead group.

Mr. Thomson was expected also to confer on the "one big union" plan, for which an accountant, Bernard Reis, was hired several months ago. The plan is expected to eliminate duplication of dues payments and to effect administrative economies

In Hollywood, meanwhile, the Class A (actors) members of the Screen Actors' Guild were voting this week on a proposed amendment which would allow a majority of Class B (extras) members to approve collective bargaining agreements affecting them, or allow their council to approve; allow Class B members on the negotiating committee of the guild, in collective bargaining; allow approval by the Class B council of any demands in collective bargaining arbitration, affecting extras' rights; and allow Class B members to strike against a given producer, without affecting Class A workers, after written notice of two weeks, on the board of directors, and with a vote of 75 per cent of the Class B paid-up membership.

Ballots must be returned to the guild by next Monday.

Meanwhile, and also in Hollywood, George Bodle, attorney for the Screen Publicists Guild, was to examine the producers' contract with the guild this week. The contract, several times changed, was re-drafted again, on Monday, by producers' attorneys.

In New York, the publicity men working in the home offices of the major companies have formed a union, the incorporated Screen Publicists and Advertisers Association. Almost 100

Representatives of the projectionists' union, Local 306, also met on Wednesday with the circuits to discuss wage demands.

What television will mean to musicians, and how musicians can be reemployed in motion picture theatres, were questions discussed this week by the executive board of the American Federation of Musicians, which opened its annual conferences on Monday, in Miami, Florida.

In Washington, the National Labor Relations Board, on Monday, dismissed petitions by the Screen Cartoon Guild, for certification as the bargaining agent for cartoon workers in the Walter Lantz Productions studio, North Hollywood; the Loew's, Inc., studios, in Culver City; the Raymond Katz Studio, Los Angeles; and the Leon Schlesinger Productions studio, in Hollywood. However, the board noted that the dismissal does not prevent the Screen Cartoonists Guild, Local 852, of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers, and Decorators of America, an American Federation of Labor union (which claims to be the Screen Cartoon Guild's successor) from filing a petition for certification as the bargaining agency for these studios.

In Hollywood, a standard contract form for free lance directors was to be drafted on Wednesday night at a meeting of the Screen Directors Guild.

NLRB Director Meeting

Also in Hollywood the regional NLRB director, Walter Spreckels, was to hold an informal meeting this week with representatives of the producers, the Scenic Arts Association of America, and the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, to iron out jurisdiction. Both unions have asked certification from the board, as bargaining agents for scenic artists.

In Middletown, Ohio, the Musicians' Protective Association, an affiliate of the American Federation of Musicians, has installed Abe Mack as president, Ed Christmann vice-president, Earl Mendenhall secretary and treasurer, and Eugene Goldflies business agent.

The past year was one of the best in the history of the Chicago Operators Union, Neal Bishop, its vice-president and secretary, said last week. Every regular member of the union is working, he reported.

In Pittston, Pa., projectionists' union, Local 120, last week elected William Blannett president; Edward Walsh, vice-president; James Casalo, recording secretary; Roy Bonser, treasurer; and Norman Saunders, business agent.

In Hollywood, projectionists' Local 165 has obtained a new agreement with the Technicolor plants, providing increased wages, better conditions, and a closed shop.

Bioff Free on Bonds in Coast Tax Case; Extradition Up Feb. 13

William Bioff, West coast studio union leader, this week posted additional bonds with the Los Angeles courts to guarantee his presence to answer federal and police charges. The bonds were in the amounts of $5,000 and $1,000. Bioff had been indicted last Wednesday by a federal grand jury on two charges of income tax evasion; and his extradition from California to Illinois, to serve out a 17-year-old jail sentence, was requested last Thursday by Illinois' Governor Henry Horner.

Bioff, who had been scheduled to represent the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and other AFL studio unions at a producer-labor conference on February 15th, on the subject of maintaining the 10 per cent wage increase that studio workers recently won, over producers' protests, maintained that the Chicago item was resurrected to hamper his labor work; he had not commented on the income tax indictments.

Governor Horner in asking Bioff's extradition, commented, "I find that William Bioff is a fugitive from the State of Illinois, and the best interests of the society require that he should be returned to this state." The Governor also suggested that Bioff be given "an opportunity to relate to a grand jury how he has been able for 17 years to evade the serving of his sentence."

A report from Port Townsend, Washington, said that local authorities might reinvestigate the killing of a pedestrian there in 1938 by an automobile. A warrant for Bioff's arrest at the time, on the charge that he was driver of the auto, was dismissed then for lack of evidence.

Bioff is to be arraigned Monday on the income tax charges, which are to be pressed first; and on February 13th there will be an extradition hearing on the Illinois request.

John P. ("Big") Nick, former St. Louis projectionists' leader, though acquitted last Thursday in his fourth trial on a charge of extortion of $10,000 from that city's theatre owners in 1936 (there were three previous mistrials), now faces trial on February 5th on another indictment, charging extortion of $6,500 from theatre owners in 1937. The acquittal last week was ordered by circuit judge Thomas Rowe, who agreed with a defense demurrer attacking the state's sufficiency of evidence.

(MGM)

Love and Lippizans

Winfield Sheehan's first picture produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Florian," tells a love story traced through the life of a Lippizan horse, and laid against the background of Austria from 1910 to 1919.

Miss Gilbert has been seen in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" and "The Secret of Dr. Kildare."

Reginald Owen plays the part of the Emperor. The veterinarian of the Imperial breeding farm is depicted by Charles Coburn, whose character roles in "Idiot's Delight" and "In Name Only" are recalled.

Mr. Sheehan's productions have included such films as "David Harum," "Cavalcade" and "What Price Glory," while Edwin Marin, who directed, did likewise last on "Maisie."

RICHEY ASKS INDUSTRY TO CLEAN UP CLEARANCE, SET UP ARBITRATION

Exhibitor Contact of RKO Says Suit Indicates Government Feels Open Competition Depends on Revamping Industry

A motion picture industry that is becoming more engrossed each day in trade practice complaints from exhibitors, and demands for speedy and complete solutions, this week had the experience of hearing a representative of a major distributor tell its opinions of distribution-exhibition ills and what should be done to rectify them.

Calls Clearance First Problem

The distributor was RKO Radio, which, through Henderson M. Richey, its official spokesman in exhibitor-contact matters, started off by citing clearance as the No. 1 problem and flatly declaring that unfair clearance is selfish, that arbitration is most necessary for exhibitors, that "a continuation of the present chaos can spell little more than severe handicap to the industry."

Mr. Richey was a guest speaker, at the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of West Virginia, at Clarksburg, last midweek. He delved pertinently into such matters as the Neely bill, the anti-trust suits pending against the majors, including his own company, and into the trade practice code.

Revamping Industry

"Those exhibitors who feel that through some mysterious means a Utopia is to be created in this business," he warned, "will find that if they reach the promised land, it will be fraught with many problems" and sound showmanship and effort still will be required.

"Let us consider for a moment the government suit and its ultimate conclusion. Covering, as it does, every imaginable thing that any one could find wrong with the industry—producer ownership of theatres, clearance, block booking, blind buying selective contracts—the position of the government seems to be that there must be a general revamping of the industry set up before the government says free and open competition is restored to the business.

"Whether or not the fact that a producer owns a theatre is in and of itself illegal will have to be determined by the courts. Evidence that independent chains have exerted unfair advantage over small independent competitors is alleged in other suits also filed against several unaffiliated chains, so that the whole effort seems to be aimed at an economic readjustment of the situation to establish a parity not enjoyed by the owner of a single or lesser number of theatres. Should the owner of a group of theatres have buying advantage, and if so, to what extent should he be able to use it, or should pictures be sold purely on the basis of the highest bidder, regardless of whether the theatre owner in a particular situation has for years furnished the people of that community its entertainment and therefore is deserving of some protection against invaders, whether they be independent or affiliated? It is not such a simple question to answer once you bring it right home to individual operation.

Says Producer Is Hurt, Too

"Some answer, 'You cannot guarantee to any one freedom from competition and when you do, you foster a monopoly the extent of which can ruin the business.' On the other hand, it seems that a theatre owner, who has not only as good but possibly a better theatre than the community deserves, who has operated it well and paid fair prices for film, should not be subjected to the competition of some unethical operator setting up unjustified competition, and, under the plan advocated by some, have him, possibly operating at less overhead, take away the product of the established theatre purely because he can bid a higher price.

PROTECTION SOUGHT FOR WAR REELS

Truman Talley, head of Movietone News, and French officials conferring in Paris may bring about the rescinding of the regulation requiring all material filmed by the newsreels and approved by the Government to be turned over to all the newsreels for duping.

It is believed the move was started by Movietone to protect the material obtained by its staff, which it claims to be the largest on the war fronts.

"Every one agrees that unfair clearance should not be permitted. The clearance in many instances is the product of selfishness and has no economic justification as has been shown many times. It affects not only the independent theatre owner, but the producer as well, for, where the producer is forced, because an independent circuit or an affiliated circuit controls the town, to extend clearance that kills the value of the picture subsequently without getting for that clearance a price consistent with other like communities, the producer and distributor themselves take a definite economic loss.

Efficient Operation Factor

"Where unfair circuits hold up the pictures an unreasonable time, preventing the pictures from being shown until they are too old and have lost most of their box office value, they injure the subsequent run exhibitor and when he doesn't make a profit, the industry loses. Clearance and its solution, it seems to me, is the industry's No. 1 problem for 1940 for more general damage to theatre owners and to distributors has been done by unjustified clearance than any other one thing.

"If 1940 brings a solution to clearance, it must be based on price of film, admission prices, distance, area, natural barriers, policy, etc. Then much of the grief of this business will be eliminated. Again, in this, many independent exhibitors will not find the promised land they expected, for if they feel that only the fact that they charge a high admission will entitle them to an earlier run, some are going to be quite disconcerted to find that there are probably 100 entirely parallel situations, which, while charging as proportionate a price for the same clearance as the others, are making a good profit and yet paying three and four times the film rental. Efficient operation of theatres will always be a factor in these equations.

The Neely Bill Problem

"Right now the hottest subject of discussion is the Neely bill. Very soon it will come up in the House of Representatives for a vote, with indications it may pass. It, therefore, behooves every thinking man in this business, whether he be theatre owner, operator, usher, doorman, landlord, or what not, to read the bill carefully and to decide whether it will do the things he wants it to do in the operation of his business.

"Volumes have been written on the subject of block booking and blind selling. Those favoring the bill are attempting to put an end to the present plan of selling, which they say results in poor pictures being produced and forced on the exhibitor in order that he may secure the outstanding pictures he wants. The aim is not at block booking, but at compulsory block booking.

The Producers' Stand

"On the other side, producers take the position that the bill does not solve the problem aimed at, is vague and impractical, that under it the danger of selling would become so acute that they dare not attempt longer to sell even a block of two pictures because immediately that they place a higher price on one picture than the other, it could be construed by any one of the 281 United States district judges over the United States as tending to influence the exhibitor to buy the one to get the other—a practice positively prohibited by the bill. That while the synopsis feature of the bill might on the face of it look fair, in practice it becomes too dangerous to attempt, because of the impossibility of conforming to a previously announced synopsis in the production of pictures—that in every picture even changes in the shooting script are made . . .

"They, therefore, explain the bill will cut down production, raise the price of individual pictures, drastically increase selling costs and will put the exhibitor in the spot of where every busybody, who may not necessarily reflect the public taste, will in theory, if not actually, want to sit in at the times he buys his pictures.

"One thing is true. While under the bill more care may be exercised in the production of the lesser number of pictures offered, some will turn out sour even then, and this additional cost must be born by the industry and a part of that burden will be paid by the theatre owner. Producers say they will experience difficulty in getting the millions necessary for production from those who have been financing production, for the financiers will await the results of the experiment to see whether the exhibitor can stand this additional burden of paying his share for selectivity. . . .

The Trade Practice Code

"While it was apparent from the start that the code (former trade practice code) couldn't solve all of the alleged problems of the industry the method of arbitration, it was generally agreed by all that, with but a few minor changes, it offered a fair means whereby exhibitors, who were being injured, could secure a degree of relief. However, the code was tossed out the window and with it all chances for exhibitors to have a means and method to accomplish anything for several years to come.

"Whether a trade practice code be adopted or not, of this I am confident. The majority of exhibitors of the United States want arbitration machinery to settle differences that are bound to come up in a speedy, fair and enforceable manner. If more exhibitor organizations follow suit, I believe 1940 can see the establishment of arbitration in this industry and I don't believe the federal government would oppose such a move.

"The days of putting out a one-sheet in front of a theatre and collecting the nickels have passed. What the public were satisfied with a few years ago, they are not satisfied with now. That goes not only for production, but for exhibition and for showmanship."

FCC HEARS TELECASTERS ATTACK RULES TO STANDARDIZE INDUSTRY

Warn That Setting Up Present Standards Would "Freeze" Medium at Present Level of Development; Income Sought

The Federal Communications Commission presented its annual report on the state of radio and television to Congress this week, and, even as it did, the full commission opened hearings in Washington on Monday, on its proposed new rules for television (which are expected to permit partial commercialization—telecasters will be permitted to charge for program preparation, but not for transmission), and heard representatives of the "smaller" television interests attack the setting up of standards at present, or even partial commercialization, on the thesis that such action would "freeze" television in its still relatively incomplete state.

Regulations Under Fire

The commission's present regulations and policies underwent attack, as the representatives of the television industry began testifying. Among representatives were Major Edwin H. Armstrong, of the new Committee on Organization of Frequency Modulation Broadcasters; persons from the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, General Electric, General Television Corporation, International Business Machines Corporation, the Don Lee Broadcasting System, Metropolitan Television Company, Philco, Radio Pictures, Zenith Radio, the Columbia Broadcasting System, the Radio Corporation of America, Cath-Ray Laboratories, and others.

Television, during ten years, has had no return, and it is now time to obtain a return, Lewis Allen Weiss, of the Don Lee Broadcasting System, told the commission. Television advertisers should be allowed to develop program technique, he said.

Mr. Weiss was questioned by Commissioner Frederick L. Thompson on television's advantages in advertising, compared with other media. Mr. Thomson noted the difference in visuality of pictures, between television images and magazine or newspaper cuts. When Mr. Weiss conceded that, if he were a magazine publisher, he would not, as the Commissioner had asked, recommend a screen of 60 lines in preference to a screen of 120 lines, to a potential advertiser, he was asked by the Commissioner why he was recommending television as a medium for advertisers.

Harry R. Lubcke declared the Don Lee company was in sympathy with the television standards set up by the Radio Manufacturers Association.

Favors Present Relay Facilities

The Don Lee System proposed the use of present broadcast relay facilities for television. Mr. Lubcke remarked, too, that the radio broadcasting frequencies now used for such relays also could be used for video.

Leonard Brown, engineer for Philco, opposed adoption by the FCC of the RMA standards. He stressed the fact that they were experimental standards, and not necessarily good for commercial purposes.

He also opposed, in the name of Philco, a limited sponsorship. Such procedure, he indicated, would crystallize standards. He further declared that any kind of commercialization, limited or complete, would crystalize standards; and that television standards should not be drawn rigidly, now.

TELEVISION DRIVE STARTS FEBRUARY 1

Depending on the granting of approval by the Federal Communications Commission, in Washington, television set manufacturers will start a concentrated advertising campaign in the New York area about February 1st.

RCA Victor Company of Canada, Ltd., on Monday gave the first public demonstration of the new medium in the Dominion, at the Chateau Laurier, Toronto.

The FCC has granted the application of Don Lee Networks' Station KFRC to build a visio transmitter atop Hollywood's Mount Lee.

First all-commercial show of its kind, Bulova Watch employes, in convention, in New York, last week witnessed a 50-minute demonstration via television, of their company's new line, the advertising campaign to be used, and "pep" messages, which went out over NBC's telecasters.

Larry E. Grubb, president of Philco Radio and Television, predicts important television developments for 1940.

Some of the commissioners protested that there had been nothing in their report to suggest they would adopt the RMA's advocated television standards. However, parts of the FCC report were cited by counsel for Philco and the DuMont Laboratories, in support of the thesis of some opponents of FCC practice, that the FCC might adopt the RMA setup.

Philco counsel criticized testimony by General Electric representatives who had suggested their own plan of frequency allocation.

Generally speaking, the larger television corporations seemed lined up against the smaller, in presenting viewpoints to the commission.

Louis G. Caldwell, attorney for Philco, was engaged several times on Tuesday in argument with Chairman James Fly, of the commission, on the question of taking up frequency allocations during the current hearing. Mr. Caldwell also argued against licensing of telecasters mainly to develop programs.

W. D. Smith, Philco engineer, attacked RMA standards, pointing out that they made no provision for certain types of antennae which would save the television set buyer money. Mr. Smith declared sound synchronization in television was still faulty, and that manufacturers wanted standards reconsidered so as to permit development of better receivers at lower cost.

The DuMont Laboratories, earlier, had announced their intention of fighting FCC suggestions, as relating to the RMA standards. Before the hearings, executives of the company declared they would present witnesses to prove that adoption of such standards would hamper television's growth.

As tentatively forwarded, the Commission's regulations would require 441-line scanning, at 30 frames per second. DuMont claims such regulations would prohibit it from using its own particularly developed image.

Radio sales time totaling $117,379,459, less commissions of $16,487,200, represented $100,892,259 of the total revenue of $111,358,378 reported for 1938 by three major networks and the licenses of 660 stations, it was disclosed this week by the Federal Communications Commission, in Washington.

Analysis of the 1938 financial returns filed with the commission, released in its annual report as it began the distribution of forms for the making of 1939 reports, showed that the networks had time sales of $35,455,510, the 23 stations under network management and operation $13,184,646 and 637 other stations $68,739,303.

Operating expenses of the industry were $92,503,594, leaving a broadcast income of $18,854,784, of which the nets accounted for $4,349,446, the 23 net-operated stations for $4,958,289 and the 637 other stations for $9,547,049. With other income of nearly $1,300,000, the industry had a total income from activities related to broadcasting of $20,153,115.

At the close of 1938, the commission reported, the industry had an investment, exclusive of goodwill, of $33,826,792, of which $6,917,630 was in network plant, $2,358,390 in net-managed stations and $24,550,772 in other stations.

In its report to Congress, the commission stressed the importance of communications regulation in time of world uncertainty, and urged that it be given funds for much-needed additional personnel and equipment for use particularly in the field of radio monitoring and in the better preparation of cases involving the issuance of licenses.

The commission disclosed also that it is concerned over the shortage of television frequencies, pointing out that "the extreme limitation of a number of available television channels presents a serious problem, particularly in the early stages of television service, inasmuch as there are by now only seven channels developed from a technical standpoint."

"From these points it appears highly essential that the industry be encouraged to undertake further practical research leading toward the development of methods which will permit more stations to be accommodated in the limited space in the radio frequency spectrum, as well as facilitating lower costs in the production of good quality program service to the public."

Coughlin Major Controversy

Only 25 of the thousands of program complaints received by the Federal Communications Commission during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, warranted investigatory hearings, Chairman James L. Fly testified before a House Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the FCC supply bill for the coming year.

The greatest number of complaints received against any one program was 625 directed against the Orson Welles "War of the Worlds."

The major cause of controversy, he revealed, was the Father Coughlin broadcasts, which in one fifteen-day period in January, 1939, brought in 21,118 protests for or against his activities, including 1,231 general protests, 1,419 protests carrying 5,957 signatures on petitions, against the denial of constitutional rights to Americans and extension of those rights to foreign propagandists, 18 protests against alleged monopoly by networks, and 6,534 protests against the action of Station WMCA, New York, in refusing facilities to the speaker.

A total of 255 broadcasting stations were said by the chairman to be considered by the commission to be owned or controlled by newspaper interests or affiliated with newspapers as of December 14th, last.

BRITISH QUOTA REGISTRATION UP DESPITE CRITICS, WAR, PESSIMISM

Nine-Months Total for 1939 Is 78 Features Against 71; Studios Show Increasing Activity as U. S. Producers Arrive

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Students of statistics and trade cynics in general will gain considerable food for thought from the fact that, despite the depredations of the European War, despite the alleged deficiencies of the 1938 Film Act, and in the face of a chorus of criticism and complaint unparalleled in trade history, the year 1939 ended with more British films registered than in the previous year.

Increased by Seven

From April to December (April was the operative month for the Act's second year) some 78 British features were registered, as opposed to 71 in the same period of 1938. Foreign features were less, some 260 odd to date, as opposed to 346 in the previous year. The drop in imports thus shows a quota increase from 24 per cent. to 30 per cent. Both figures are in excess of the Act's minimum of 20 per cent.

Of the total of 78, six are triples and twelve double quota features for registration purposes. Last year there were seven triple and fifteen doubles registered in the same priod. Sixteen of the quota films registered were for exhibitor purposes and did not count as renters quota.

With new legislation foreshadowed and at present in the Board of Trade melting pot, with three months at most of the present Quota Act still to run, the prospects are that 1940 may well see a stimulus both in quantity and in quality such as would hardly have been expected when the guns began to thunder on September third this year.

Studio Plans Laid

At Denham and Welwyn, Ealing and Shepherds Bush, Walton-on-Thames and Teddington, at Highbury and probably at lesser studios, plans are already laid for an immediate start. On the way to this country as we write are Ben Goetz and Robert Montgomery bent on making "Busman's Honeymoon" and repeating the process which made "The Citadel", "Yank at Oxford" and "Goodbye Mr. Chips," three of the most profitable films to have been made in Great Britain and shown throughout this country and the U. S. Coming, too, is Bill Sistrom, pledged to a revival of RKO-Radio's production activity here on a large scale. At Teddington the commanding presence of Max Milder has already long set the production ball rolling for Warner Brothers. Columbia are said to have ambitious plans. David Rose, also en route here, is maturing a Paramount-British programme. Twentieth-Fox, Associated British, British National, British Lion are among those organizations who have either continued without cessation—as in the case of the Maxwell Company and that sponsored by John Corfield—or, in other cases, are putting final touches preparatory to an early start.

Denham has no less than three films scheduled, including the Pascal "Major Barbara" and Legeran's "Old Bill."

There is every indication that the late Winter and early Spring will see, in the face of a nation at war, an intensive and thorough process of picture production under way.

With the continuance of the Act until March distributors have still to meet their quota commitments, American interests have already made or are making all arrangements to do so. To them, thus, goes much of the credit for the impending activity, an activity which can only be stopped by enemy bombs.

BRITISH ACTORS IN U. S. PLANNING WAR UNITS

More than 75 British actors and actresses, headed by Gertrude Lawrence, star of the Broadway production, "Skylark," gathered backstage at the Morosco theatre, New York, Saturday, to discuss a plan to provide entertainment for British soldiers overseas. The meeting was called at the suggestion of Sir Basil Dean, who is in charge of entertainment for British forces in England and France.

Miss Lawrence said the purpose of the meeting was to form a unit or units of Britsih actors in the United States and Canada which would be sent across the Atlantic to entertain British troops. Miss Lawrence said she would send letters to Hollywood for contributions to try to raise funds for the program.

Among those who attended the meeting were Estelle Winwood, Horace Braham, Reginald Mason, A. P. Kaye, Whitford Lake, Alison Skipworth, John Emery, Colin Keith-Johnson, John C. Wilson, Constance Collier, Henry Newbray, Ivan Simpson, Nicholas Joy, Stanley Ridges, Gilbert Miller and Victor Payne-Jennings.

Quota Changes Still in Doubt

Deliberations already recorded in these columns, by the Films Council and its extremely active committee continue in the direction of replacing the present Quota Act by legislation or its equivalent, which will preserve a normal condition of operation for the British production industry. As already recorded, too, Americans here will probably have to meet their quota commitments, though on a basis of mass expenditure rather than one of footage and cost.

Meanwhile British producers who have been under the roseate impression that a word from the Government would bring unlimited finances rolling into their coffers have received somewhat of a disillusionment. City interests officiating on the new committee and in direct and constant touch with the financial world of Britain have been informed and have so informed the Council that there is not the least likelihood of the City loaning money to British producers under present circumstances. Not, that is, without Government guarantee, of both principal and interest. Past experiences have given them a bitter lesson. Present circumstances, with the preoccupations and problems of war before them have aggravated conditions. Any credit bank or finance corporation such as had been considered by the Board of Trade and the Films Council would thus probably need Government backing and guarantee. How far this will be forthcoming is again a delicate problem for a state in arms.

Broadminded students of the trade scene have not hesitated to record their gratification and indeed their surprise that at such a time and in such conditions the Government should devote time, money and labour to helping the lame British industry over the wartime stile, in the face, not only of grave matters of state and survival, but in the face, too, of a state of mind which has been dubbed both ungrateful and implacable.

Sunday Opening Order Issued

Fears on the part of Sabbatarians, and for that matter on the part of a no negligible exhibitor section, that the Home Office plans for an adjustment of the Sunday Entertainment regulations would bring about a social revolution in Britain, have proven premature. Publication of the new order dealing with the Sunday opening of cinemas, whilst it has exasperated the more puritanical religious groups has provoked no fireworks either in the trade or in the circles of local administration.

The order, issued by the Home Office, removes the cumbersome and difficult machinery of local polls and local towns meetings. Where Sunday opening in a local area is desired it can now be attained with the minimum of formalities, an application to Parliament and that body's approval. It is, however, purely an emergency regulation, to operate only so long as the War lasts, or the Defence Regulations are in force.

The new regulations are designed especially for the benefit of the British forces and come as a result of repeated and intense pressure on the part of the War Office. They provide that where a local military authority desires cinemas to be opened on a Sunday he can make application to a local council. That body in turn, no longer under the necessity of calling a town's meeting and staging a poll, can submit a draft order to the Home Secretary. On receiving the approval of both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, cinemas may open. Such approval would probably be automatic.

Originated in War Office

As already recorded the changed situation is due not to pressure or persuasion of any kind from trade circles. No action has been taken by exhibitor bodies either national or local. The War Office, acting under the advices and requests of Commanders in military areas, must be given the credit. With vast military and Air Force camps all over the country, and troops concentrated in districts where no form of Sunday recreation existed save the local saloons, the question of providing an outlet for the men became an acute one.

The new order is a compromise. Up to the present Sunday opening of cinemas has been a matter for local action. If a demand existed in a district for the Sunday opening of picture houses, on the appeal of requisite number of local electors a town's meeting would be called by the local authority, whether it be rural council, urban district council, parish council or otherwise. Superficially nothing more than a show of hands was necessary to secure the appropriate action in the form of an application to the Home Office for an opening order. In actual practice a vote either way could be and often was challenged by a demand for a poll of voters on the local register—ratepayers in fact—and on its result rested the decision to apply to the Home Office for a local opening order. Successful ballots were ultimately followed by Home Office orders and Parliamentary approval.

Uncle Sam to Examine Industry's Economics

Sixteenth Decennial Census Feature Includes Sequence on Films

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Will the U. S. Census Bureau go down into history as a major producer?

Probably not. But it should!

For the past many months, as a starter, it's been filming for permanent filing ancient documentary records tattered and torn by time, which must be consulted constantly to answer frantic requests from hundreds of thousands of American citizens who for one reason or another must produce legal proof of age or residence at a given date. And now it's ready to start a new job.

Ready for Camera

With lengthy scenario completed and countless castings made, Director William Lane Austin of the Census is all set to start "shooting" on Stage Number One—a full-size set limited on the north by Canada, on the east by the Atlantic Ocean, on the west by the Pacific and on the south by Mexico and the Gulf. Other locations are Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands.

The working title of the script suggests the most colossal production of all time:

"The Sixteenth Decennial Census of the United States."

And what does this mean to the movie industry? Just this: Reel One, co-starring the Census of Business and the Census of Manufactures, has some mighty important sequences where Uncle Sam puts the picture business through its paces to find out, in an economic sort of way, the importance of the industry and what it has been doing with itself during recent years. Uncle Sam, of course, has been looking into other film aspects, via anti-trust suits, now pending.

A flash back to the 1937 Census of studios and laboratories reveals that 83 movie plants were recorded. According to their statements, they paid out the tidy little total of $139,588,664 that year in salaries and wages to 34,624 studio officers, actors, and other employees. Expenses for studio supplies, film containers, purchased power and fuel, contract work, and other essentials, totalled $58,152,694. Total expenditures for the 83 concerns was $197,741,358.

Industry's Place Shown

A few more frames complete the flash back. In 1935, a Census of theatres and other amusement places were taken. Movie theatres (counted only) numbered 12,024. Salaries and wages paid out by them reached $102,804,000, while their total operating receipts were $508,196,000. Distributors received approximately $167,000,000 in film rentals and disbursed to their employees nearly $15,000,000 of this in wages.

It is not necessary here to go further into the significance of these various facts and figures. Those cited merely emphasize what has been known right along—that the movie industry, still comparatively young as American industries go, is far from the least important of our national enterprises.

Mail was the medium through which producers were canvassed in 1937. In the 1940 Census, however, beginning this month, official enumerators will personally deliver the schedules and will call for them after they have been filled out.

Questions will cover the year 1939. In the main, they will be about the same as in previous enumerations. Chief change is a simplification of the query on production costs, which now asks merely for the total cost of all work completed in 1939 regardless of when it was started.

Other studio and laboratory items cover type and organization of concern, payroll and employees, costs of supplies, power, and fuel; and classification of productions. Films will be listed as theatrical or otherwise, feature or short, black-and-white or color, newsreel, advertising, educational, industrial, or other.

In the number of industrial films produced, incidentally, great increase has been apparent during recent months. The actual significance of this to the industry can be calculated only when all producers' schedules have been received at Washington.

For distributors, the questionnaires will cover customary items such as payroll, employment, volume of business, etc. Theatres, in addition to the general questions, will be asked to show seating capacity and receipts from admissions.

Census statements are confidential. Reporting is required by Act of Congress, but the same Act guarantees also that Census information cannot be used for taxation, regulation, or investigation, and that it cannot be released in any other than general statistical form.

Population Census Useful

Other phases of the Census, to start in April, will unearth many facts of importance to the movie industry. The question frequently arises, for instance: Can Blanktown support a new theatre, and if so, how large?

Census figures can answer this question. Population analysis will indicate whether Blanktown is growing or losing ground. Family income averages will show if the Blanktown people have anything left over for amusements after food and other essential bills have been paid. Business reports will register Blanktown's stability and general economic condition, such as the volume of retail trade in comparison with other towns.

All in all, this forthcoming Sixteenth Decennial Census will be a full length feature picture of all the combined activities and resources of the entire United States and its people. The first census of studios in 1921 was made on the direct suggestion of the industry itself, and Census officials declare that they have received the whole-hearted cooperation of the movie industry in all past enumerations.

Form Committee For Finn Drive

An Amusement Committee to aid Finland has been organized with Helen Hayes as chairman and is pledged to raise at least $500,000 for the Finnish Relief Fund, which is being conducted by Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States. L. E. Thompson of RKO is chairman of the motion picture division and Vincent G. Hart, attorney and formerly with the New York office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is director.

The Amusement Committee besides Miss Hayes is composed of Eddie Dowling, Lawrence Langner, John J. Shubert and John Golden. The money will be raised in a series of benefits in which every stage attraction will be asked to give one night's entire proceeds to the Fund.

Proceeds from the world premiere of Universal's "Green Hell," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Bennett, which was held Wednesday night at the Alvin theatre in Pittsburgh are to be turned over to the Fund. The arrangements were made through Mr. Hoover, John H. Harris, head of the Harris Amusement Company, and publishers of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

The Cinecitta theatre, in New York, which plays Italian pictures, has offered its cooperation to Mr. Hoover by pledging five per cent of its box-office receipts for one week starting this Thursday.

The Oklahoma City Variety Club has donated $300, the largest single contribution to the Finnish Relief Fund received by the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times.

Actors Relief Fund

The Motion Picture Actors Relief Fund collected more than $500,000 in 1939 and disbursed approximately $400,000 in the year to worthy cases, Jean Hersholt, director of the Fund, said last week in addressing the Circus Saints and Sinners at their luncheon meeting at the Hotel Astor.

Proceeds of a midnight showing of RKO's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Twentieth Century theatre in Buffalo have been turned over to the local branch of the Jewish War Veterans of America.

James L. Kilpatrick, president of the New York Telephone Company, has accepted the chairmanship of the utilities and amusement division of the 1940 campaign of the Greater New York Fund, John A. Brown, campaign chairman announced this week.

James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, will be guest of honor at the annual artists' luncheon at the New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities January 26th at the Hotel Astor.

David Bernstein, treasurer of Loew's, Inc., held a special luncheon meeting Thursday.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Jean Arthur, Cary Grant, Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell—One of the most thoroughly enjoyable flickers we've shown for a long time and just right to cash in on aviation's new popularity. The stars and whole cast seemed tailor made for this moving story. Even our midnight show crowd stayed interested in this one and they're hard to keep quiet. It drew above average which isn't much these days but something anyway. Running time, 119 minutes. Played December 24-26.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell, Rita Hayworth, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Rumann—A melodramatic story, appealing and effective, that pleased all. Howard Hawks is to be complimented for his first effort as author-producer-director for the Columbia Pictures Corporation. Thrilling aerial scenes and excellent performances by two of Hollywood's best, Jean Arthur and Cary Grant, as well as creditable performances by the long absent Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell, a swell character actor ("Stagecoach," etc.), Rita Hayworth, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Rumann, et al., combined to make one minute short of two hours of corking entertainment. We have shown other pictures involving tales of the air but this one is different and will appeal to any audience. Don't be afraid of it. Book it. Running time, 119 minutes. Played December 30.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SPOILERS OF THE RANGE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Average western and we got by nicely as the business men gave a free matinee to all children in town. Played December 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valerie Hobson—All reports I see on this are fair and good but I did not know what it was all about. Asked some of my patrons and they did not know what it was about but I suppose it's OK.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valerie Hobson—Confusing story, mildly interesting. Did nice business, though coupled with "Dancing Co-ed." The latter picture very good entertainment. Played December 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—Good remarks from all. Running time, 120 minutes.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A surprise picture. Patrons leaving the theatre were warm in their praise for it. The first picture in which Garfield has had a likeable role. Played November 19-21.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Interesting and very good. Well cast and produced. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 27-28.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Played with "There Goes My Heart." Without the Warner hit, "The Oklahoma Kid" to bring them in the attendance would have been just fair.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Very good production. Wonderful acting by the whole cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—This one is a positive flop in small towns. It is not a good picture and yet there are times when it shows real class. RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Good picture; good business. Is a real thriller. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Very good picture to very satisfactory business. Worthy of best time. Played December 24-26.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—They don't preach any better sermons anywhere than the one in this swell little movie. Virginia and in fact the whole cast make this very believable. But you won't realize it's a sermon on faith in God until you've got home. It's bound to come back to you and your faith should be just a bit stronger for having seen this picture. We booked it purposely for Christmas and it was real appropriate. Would be a dandy for Easter, though it may need other help to draw 'em in. Played December 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Good musical comedy. Miss Massey will never take the place of Jeanette MacDonald in our judgment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Guinn Williams, Gene Lockhart, Bobs Watson—a top little picture with the honors well divided. There were some night scenes here that would have been tops but were spoiled with background music. Somebody ought to give Gene Lockhart and Ruth Hussey a break. I am sure you can find a place for a good picture like this. It is classed in (B) but don't let that worry you. You know what the (A)s are. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 3-4.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—Coupled this with "U-Boat 29". Did nice business. "Dancing Co-Ed"

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker—As good as other "Hardy" series. Would suggest changing story. They are all the same.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice, Margaret Dumont—Excellent comedy. Glad they included piano and harp specialties by Chico and Harpo respectively. Margaret Dumont makes a perfect foil for Groucho. She is deserving of much praise for her work. Good box office. Played January 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—The trade papers are all praising Garbo in "Ninotchka." The honors should go to Melvyn Douglas. He made the picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Good comedy if you can get 'em to come in and see it. Title and Garbo are big handicap. Running time, 110 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Pictures like this will not help out Miss Garson. Taylor, Garson and Ayres deserve better plays than this to work in.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Our Sunday attendance the best for several weeks. Everybody loved it. Had several to repeat on Monday night. If available to you, get it. Your patrons will rave about it. What an ending. It is best not to go in middle of the picture. Taylor was the best I have ever seen him. Others equally as good. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 7-8.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Excellent production. Lots of interest in this series in my town. Younger crowd liked Laraine Day very much as the nurse. Good business.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Another good "Kildare" picture. Ayres and Barrymore perfect. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—A repeat run on this picture. Gross was better than our usual Tuesday but increased rental made it strike no better average than run-of-the-mill stuff. But it's a darn good show just the same. Played December 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Very, very good. Not only pleased the children but was well received by the grownups. The most beautiful picture ever put on the screen to my notion. Running time, 101 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Good enough picture but no foreign legion picture has ever paid for itself. We can expect a loss any time we play one. Played December 20-21.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Thrills and chills galore. Good horror picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, John Howard, Akim Tamiroff—A good picture. Tamiroff perfect.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, John Howard, Akim Tamiroff—A fine picture. Real good draw with us; due mostly to Dorothy Lamour. Our folks like her plenty.—Played December 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour, John Howard—Very fine production. Paramount can well be proud of this one. Had nothing but praise on it. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 3.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—Swell picture, liked by everyone. Lots of sophisticated comedy and just spicy enough to please. Business poor, perhaps, due to local conditions and zero weather. Played December 31-January 2.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

"ONE-THIRD OF A NATION": Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson—Good but mild box office. Folks' comment were favorable. Always nice to see Sylvia. She's a fine actress. She holds this picture together neatly. Played January 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Paramount had a chance to do something here and muffed it. It's not bad but could have been lots better. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Did better business than the specials I've played lately. Plenty of laughs and that's the favorite diet of my Sunday audience. Played December 10-12.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Just one word for this. Played December 29-30.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

RANGE WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Very good. But there has been too many of these pictures come out without "Windy." George (Windy) Hayes is half of the show. What have you done with him, Paramount? Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 5-6.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—A very fine show. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Superb photography. All the entertainment anyone could ask of an evening at the theatre and just where was everyone? Lowest holiday business in some time. Played December 31-January 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Excellent picture with many good songs. Should have done big business but think our patrons were kept away by too much mention of Walter Damrosch and the symphony orchestra in our prevue. Played December 3-5.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Story of a high school boy in one jam after another. Kept our audiences laughing almost continually. I was sorry that I hadn't booked it on Sunday but I was afraid of the draw. Played January 3-4.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Played this doubled with "She Married a Cop" and made a good show. Running time, 56 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

COVERED TRAILER, THE: James, Lucile, Russell Gleason—Very good picture which failed to draw, as it is first time I have played "Higgins Family." Everyone was pleased. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FORGED PASSPORT: Paul Kelly, Lyle Talbot, June Lang, Billy Gilbert—This drew about average Friday and Saturday business and seemed to please everyone. The performance of June Lang and Billy Gilbert add very appreciably to an interesting story. Paul Kelly's popularity here is so-so. Billy "Pistachio Nuts" Gilbert's draw would in our opinion gain considerably in a short time if he were given as generous a part in future films as in this one. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 5-6. E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

SHE MARRIED A COP: Phil Regan, Jean Parker —Played this doubled with "Blue Montana Skies" and made a good show.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, George Sanders, Brian Donlevy—Fair production with good acting by the star but failed to please my patrons. Not box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 17-18.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

BAD LANDS: Robert Barrat, Noah Beery, Jr., Andy Clyde—Heavy type of western in which all of a posse get killed by the Indians, except the sheriff who goes crazy. Played December 1-2.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—We doubled this with "Flying Deuces" and it made a rare combination. One with slapstick was combined with one containing subtle humor and they like them both here. I don't think we have had so much real laughter here in two years. It probably won't go over in rural districts but if your audience likes fine sophisticated comedy, don't miss this one. Ginger's reputation from "Bachelor Mother" was definitely helped here and word-of-mouth gave us a decent second night. We had to turn up the sound so the laughter wouldn't drown out everything completely. Maybe you won't even get a grin but something contagious was certainly shown on our screen here. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 5-6.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Good show. Poor business. Played December 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—A very pleasing feature that was enjoyed by every patron. Business fair. Played December 30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FIXER DUGAN: Lee Tracy, Virginia Weidler—Very good. Just as the show was about to begin, the biggest fire to visit the village in years killed our business. Played December 23.—C. W. Mills. Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Good slapstick comedy for the crowd that likes to laugh, and who doesn't? Stan Laurel more like his own self in this one than he has been for a long time. Business good.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Doubled this with "Fifth Avenue Girl" and advertised an all-laugh show. It was highly successful. People seemed glad to have Laurel and Hardy back again and there is lots of good humor in this one. Don't expect too much of it and it will do O.K. From the evident enjoyment of the audience, I would call this a successful screwball comedy. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 5-6.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Very funny comedy that drew well and pleased. Took a chance on Sunday with these boys and was well satisfied. Played December 24-25.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General Patronage.

NEXT TIME I MARRY: James Ellison, Lucille Ball—Boy, oh boy! We were leery of this after Miss Ball's several so-so performances but she and Ellison turn in very good jobs in this very funny comedy. Give us more like this. They came out grinning. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 5-6.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, Lucille Ball, Edward Everett Horton, May Robson—Pleased 100%. This picture has what it takes. Get behind it. Has tremendous box office possibilities. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 24-26.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

THREE SONS: Edward Ellis, William Gargan, Kent Taylor—Very good picture with only fair draw. Played December 6-7.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TIMBER STAMPEDE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds—A different type of western that pleased. Played November 24-25.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore—Fox rang the gong on the "Motos" and they might as well ring it on this series. Since Oland died they have lost the "oomph" and the public. This father-favorite son supposed comedy is very, very flat.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—It had sloppy direction and sloppier story. The little girl is a trouper but even she could not put this one over.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Very good. Nice business. Played December 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda. Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Finest color I have ever seen. The production was well received. Business below par. Running time, 103 minutes. Played December 31.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL, THE: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—A little above the average western and pleased my Saturday western fans. Running time, 71 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Buster Keaton, Stuart Erwin—Did not please. No box office value. Pass it if you can. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 3.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Fair to middling production. Seem to miss somewhere. Story did not run smoothly. Business just fair.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

PARDON OUR NERVE: Lynn Bari, Michael Whalen—Pleased generally but our business was off on account of rain. Played December 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—Good picture and suppose is the special they claim it to be. The storm scenes in it are well done and worth seeing. Running time, 104 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—Played a little late but gave general satisfaction and did a little better than average business.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—This looked good to us. Why so many exhibitor squawks on it? Pretty fair box office draw, too. The airplane stunting over the canyon is very good. Played December 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster—Too bad the title couldn't have been better. People didn't get the connection. Good action show. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 5-6.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

United Artists

ETERNALLY YOURS: David Niven, Loretta Young, Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith—A fair comedy.—Leon Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith—Excellent color and authentic settings coupled with thrilling action and spectacular drama make this well worthwhile. Frankly I was surprised. A good crowd turned out for it so the receipts on "Four Feathers" tickled me greatly. It is inclined to be brutal in spots but I didn't hear any real complaints on it. It is the best English picture we ever played and it should suit action fans to a "T." The students came back with lots of money after Christmas vacation, which may have helped some. However, the faculty is asking for credit. Running time, 112 minutes. Played January 4.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—This was a swell picture and business was good.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

STAGECOACH: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, George Bancroft, Andy Devine, Thomas Mitchell, Louise Platt—Very good. Moderate draw. Played January 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—Played this somewhat later than necessary even though we are a third and fourth run situation. Without the Warner hit "The Oklahoma Kid" to bring them in, the attendance would have been just fair. The title a handicap for our spot. However, this is really a swell comedy and it kept the house in stitches part of the time and certainly entertained them very much. Running time, 84 minutes. Played New Year's Eve-January 2.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Walter Brennan, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Gene Reynolds—Fine production that failed to draw. Nothing the matter with the show but hard to sell the title. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 27-28.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke—About like the original "Topper." Reaction was bad, however. Many complaints that this was too silly. Played December 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Business was poor but we think the best picture that crossed my screen in '39. Running time, 95 minutes.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Light Comedy. Will please "McCarthy" followers.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cunnings, Constance Moore—A very good picture with plenty of excitement for the younger set. Brought them in 100% at the box office. With "Mortimer Snerd's" help "Charlie" is a very good draw. Played December 23-28.—D. E. George, Glenwood Theatre, Shreveport, La. General patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Una Merkel—The very best in motion picture entertainment. The biggest box office hit that has ever hit my screen. It is a shame they don't make more like this. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 29-January 5.—D. E. George, Glenwood Theatre, Shreveport, La. General patronage.

EX-CHAMP: Victor McLaglen, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Constance Moore—Good enough picture with no draw as we anticipated. Any hint of prize fight and a picture fails for us. Played December 27-28.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—Pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—Good story well acted. Did only average business. Played December 13-14.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone—A flop at the box office. We have never yet had an English picture that paid for itself at the box office. Why must we play them? Played November 22-23.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Boris Karloff, Basil Rathbone—We found that the ladies kept away on this picture. Production is very good of its kind.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Nan Grey, Ian Hunter—Started off with a bang but fell before the end of the week. A very good gruesome picture with plenty of history. Played December 10-14.—D. E. George, Glenwood Theatre, Shreveport, La. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Virginia Weidler, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi—A picture that is absolute tops in entertainment. One of the finest pictures that we have run but the lack of one starring player cuts the draw considerably. Good any day in the week but do not waste it as it still is tops in entertainment. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Highly entertaining little picture. There wasn't much story but nobody missed it. Baby Sandy very good. Played November 29-30.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, George Bancroft, "Dead End Kids"—Good business. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 100 minutes.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—Don't be afraid of this one as the kids are different than usual in this swell little program picture. Did very well. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Alan Hale, Bruce Cabot, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Good remarks. Running time, 115 minutes. Played September 3-4.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—A good business. Hope Warner Bros. give us some more good ones like these. Running time, 100 minutes.—C. W. Thrasher, Thrasher Theatre, Ava, Mo. General patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—This series seems to be catching on better all the time. A nice little feature for a double bill. Played December 29-30.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Played on double bill with "Blondie Brings Up Baby." "Pride of the Blue Grass" is acceptable in any locality and will be highly received. Played January 3-4.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Alan Hale—When are the producers going to stop wasting the exhibitors' money on this type? Dancing has become a good competitor for the Theatre, using big bands, good floors. Then the producers expect us to compete with them. People are traveling from fifty to one hundred miles to a dance and won't walk three blocks to the theatre. Maybe the producers can give the answer. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Beautiful color and costumes. "A-1" acting by the cast. A class picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Very good. Fine work by the whole cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Good picture with Cagney in his element as a racketeer busy with his fists and guns. Plenty of excitement for any audience here. Played December 17-19.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BLUEBIRD'S BABY: Color Rhapsodies—Not very amusing and a little slow. The color is good and the cow reading "Gone with the Wind" was best idea in it. If these Color Rhapsodies were as lively clear through as in the best few scenes, they would become very entertaining indeed. Running time, eight minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 3: College Songs—A short such as this, singing of football songs, we should at least have Notre Dame and Wisconsin, two of the best college songs written, and where was Illinois "Loyalty." Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MILLIONAIRE HOBO: Phantasies Cartoons—Skip it. Terrible. Running time, five minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PLAYING THE PONIES: Three Stooges—The Stooges always are a drawing card with us, both for adults and kids alike. This one certainly brought down the house in no uncertain manner. Of course, it's pure, unadulterated slapstick but it makes for plenty of bella-la-bella (belly laughs to you). Running time, 18 minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S TRIP TO MARS: Scrappy Cartoons—A few chuckles, kind of forced, from adults, but little laughter from the youngsters. Running time, eight minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 3—As usual a very good short. A poor one is an exception. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAD FOR A DAY: Our Gang Comedies—Just fair, as we have had better. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay—This is very good but put it with a comedy feature. I made the mistake of playing it with "Four Feathers" and it made too much trouble for one show. It should be shown and advertised everywhere, although the people who should see it probably will not come to the show. They'll be out making material for a sequel. This whole series is tops and you know that already so why should we keep on saying it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FAILURE AT FIFTY, A: MGM Miniatures—If you are between the age of 6 and 50, see this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1938: Pete Smith Specialties—Played this one just two days prior to the many "bowl" games and a more suitable short could not be produced for our audience. We have shown many football shorts but never one that is as well produced as is this. It is packed with dandy shots, is as clear as a bell and should please the many lovers of collegiate football 100%. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAD MAESTRO, THE: Cartoons—Should make any audience laugh.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY: Cartoons—Dandy color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SKI BIRDS: Pete Smith Specialties—Entertaining. E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SKI BIRDS: Pete Smith Specialties—Fascinating adventure reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

AQUA-RHYTHM: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Good sport reel. Running time, nine minutes—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—Finest reel we ever can remember showing. Tops. Running

MOMENTS OF CHARM OF 1940: Headliners—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Jan Garber and His Orchestra—A very entertaining orchestra short. Some very good numbers from a swell band. —J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

1939, YEAR OF DARK CONTRASTS: Paramount News, No. 35—This is a very worthy effort to do something different. I was proud to play it. It lasts 15 minutes and comes close to being a "March of Time" with a different twist. If you don't play Paramount News, maybe they'll let you spot book it later. It won't get old any quicker than a "March of Time." Play it as late as "March" and it won't be out-of-date. Washington's "Farewell Address" is used to show the youth of today why they should exercise their rights in this country. Running time, 15 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PLUMBING IS A PIPE: Popeye the Sailor—Since these are sold as one-reelers they should of course be longer than six or seven minutes we receive. However, this one is a sure laugh getter and the series is a proven draw. Running time, seven minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BLAMED FOR A BLONDE: Radio Flash Comedies—Poor two-reeler. Running time, 18 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: Good single reel subject.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 4, THE: Newsfronts of War—Very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

TRUTH ACHES: Leon Errol Comedies—Fair two-reeler. Running time, 16 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

WEST WALL: Reelisms—Too much technical data. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AGHILEEN PINNACLES: Father Hubbard's Alaskan Adventures—This is a very good series. This is nice entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Vol. 22, No. 26—Gets better every issue. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

FRIZE GUEST, THE: Terry-Toons—A boring eight minutes. Music was fair. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

GLASS SLIPPER, THE: Terry-Toons—In color. Just fair. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SHEEP IN THE MEADOW: Terry-Toons—Just fair. Running time, seven minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel Minn. Rural patronage.

United Artists

JERUSALEM: World Windows—No good. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

Universal

SNOW FOLLIES: Lillian Roth—A very good musical number with plenty of singing. However, found some of the songs very old and thought the costumes could have been improved upon. Running time, 18 minutes.—D. E. George, Glenwood Theatre, Shreveport, La. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AMERICAN SADDLE HORSES: Color Parade—Good one-reeler in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BILL OF RIGHTS, THE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Another excellent historical short for Vitaphone. Enough praise cannot be given this series of shorts which should rank as tops of the industry. Color does not detract from it, either. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FEUD THERE WAS, A: Merrie Melodies—A dandy cartoon with enough ridiculous situations to get the laughs but all the satire doesn't click. Very often we get one of these that is better even than the Disneys for making them chuckle. Because there are no main characters "starring" in these dandy shorts, their draw is less than Popeye and Mickey Mouse. Running time, eighty minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

JOHNNY SMITH AND POKER HUNTAS: Merrie Melodies—Little below par for the series but still fairly amusing. Running time, nine minutes.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

LITTLE BROTHER RAT: Merry Melodies—Good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

LITTLE LION HUNTER, THE: Merrie Melodies—An extremely entertaining cartoon. Who is the newcomer? The black yellow billed bird? Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

SWORD FISHING: Vitaphone Varieties—Here is real fishing. You don't need to be a fisherman to enjoy it. See him charge the boat. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The best band subject we have played for a long time.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This one is something different in orchestra setup. It would please even in Russia with a bang. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. College and small town patronage.

VOTE TROUBLE: Vitaphone Varieties—Just a waste of film. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VOTE TROUBLE: Vitaphone Varieties—Amusing. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WORLD'S FAIR JUNIOR: Broadway Brevities—The best we have run in years. So good that we intend to repeat at a later date. Cannot say more. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BOOK REVIEW

HOLLYWOOD SAGA, by William C. deMille. Published by E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc. Cloth, 319 pages. $3.50.

Here is a refreshing addition to the literature of the motion picture because, unlike many who write books on the industry, William C. deMille knows the business or art well. He went to Hollywood in 1914 and for a quarter of a century and more he served the industry, first as a writer and then as a director. Mr. deMille did not achieve the fame accorded Cecil B., three year his junior, who starts his last name with a capital "D," but William has been both a skilled worker in and a competent observer of the motion picture.

The title "Hollywood Saga" may make the reader anticipate a different type of book than Mr. deMille writes. The work is a combination of his own experiences in pictures, something of his brother's story, and personal views and reflections on films.

Before the brothers deMille went to Hollywood, William was the better known. He had had 12 years of stage experience as a dramatist and a producer in New York. William admits frankly that he was not foresighted when he went into pictures; twice he refused to buy for $5,000 a quarter interest in the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company which his brother had helped form in 1912. The older brother always was going to save the money to pay the return fare when the scheme collapsed.

John Erskine, friend and classmate of the author, contributed an interesting foreword.

The story begins with the formation of the Lasky company. Cecil went to Hollywood and made "The Squaw Woman." After many difficulties it was screened in New York. William was convinced by his brother's first picture and determined that Hollywood, and motion pictures, was the place for him. His debut in pictures was as a cowboy extra. After two weeks he was given his first manuscript to convert into a scenario—and required to deliver it in two weeks. Time moved quickly in Hollywood from the beginning.

The writer presents readable pictures of Hollywood life before the town discovered its baby industry. Considerable space is given to William deMille's education as a screen writer and then his work and development as a director. All through the book there are flashes of humor and some scenes are very amusing.

Taken for what it is, the book is interesting and worthwhile reading, particularly for those in the industry who are not old enough to remember its childhood.

It is a "Hollywood Saga," however, only in a personal sense, only as Hollywood life touched the author or his thoughts. One who is seeking merely a picture of Hollywood and films by a man who has lived and worked with them will not be disappointed in "Hollywood Saga."—M. Q., Jr.

Columbia Serial

OVERLAND WITH KIT CARSON: Bill Elliott, Iris Meredith—It's got the cast. It's got the story. It's got the scenery, horses and Indians that could have been a swell serial. The whole setup is spoiled by such impossible "Hair-breadth Harry" escapes that you'll feel like hiding even from the kids when they come out. Maybe we've got some juvenile cynics in this burg but they won't swallow this recurring miracles stuff.—E. P. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. General patronage.

H. N. MARVIN DIES; ONE OF FOUNDERS OF BIOGRAPH

Pooled Interests with Edison and Kleine That Brought Motion Picture Patents Company

Henry Norton Marvin, one of the founders of the American Mutoscope & Biograph Company, died Friday at his Winter home near Sarasota, Fla., at the age of 77. In 1895 Mr. Marvin in company with William Kennedy Laurie Dickson, Herman Casler and E. B. Koopman formed the K.M.C.D. Syndicate which took its name from the founders. Out of that Syndicate grew the American Mutoscope & Biograph Company and finally the Motion Picture Patents Company.

Associated with Edison

Born in Jordan, N. Y., the son of Daniel W. and Ellen Weed Marvin, he was graduated in 1883 from the University of Syracuse, of which he later became a trustee. In 1888 he was associated with Thomas Alva Edison in the installation of the first electric light plant in New York and was present in the Edison office at 65 Fifth Avenue when the first lights in the city were turned on. He later joined the Edison General Electric Company in Schenectady, N. Y., where he invented the Marvin Electric Rock Drill, which performs the same function as the present pneumatic drill.

In 1893 he became associated with Mr. Casler, a machinist from the Edison General Electric Company in Schenectady, in the Marvin & Casler Company of Canastota, N. Y., devoted to the making of machines of various types.

While at the Edison testing plant in 1887 Mr. Marvin had met Mr. Dickson. When Mr. Dickson's connection with Mr. Edison ended, sometime after the invention of the Kinetoscope, Mr. Dickson wrote to Mr. Marvin concerning the invention and the possibility of a small simple device which could be made to show inexpensively the final punch and knockout of a prize fight. Mr. Marvin improved upon Mr. Dickson's idea and then passed it along to Mr. Casler, who worked out the notion of making the pack of cards into a wheel of cards bearing pictures, to be turned by a crank.

The three of them were confident the idea had a fortune in it but they needed financing. Mr. Koopman, then of the Magic Introduction Company, became interested and agreed to finance the project and the K. M. C. D. Syndicate was formed.

Edison Declines

The K. M. C. D. Syndicate with a machine for showing pictures in a peep show had no source of pictures as Mr. Edison declined an arrangement whereby Kinetoscope pictures would be employed. They decided to build a machine which would take much larger pictures than the Edison camera with its little one inch film. A film two and three-quarters of an inch wide, with each frame or image two inches high, was finally decided upon.

Out of this emerged the Casler Mutoscope camera and the American Mutoscope Company. With its peep show problem solved in the Mutoscope, the K. M. C. D. Syndicate set itself at once at the invention of a machine for showing pictures from its great wide films on the screen. The workshop at Canastota began to put together the device which bore the name of the American Biograph.

The company prospered but trouble was brewing and on May 13, 1898, Thomas A. Edison filed a suit against the American Mutoscope Company claiming infringement of the Edison camera patent, which became one of the longest and most desperate patent fights in the history of the American industry.

While the lawyers struggled with motions and arguments Mr. Marvin sought a commercial solution which came near to changing the whole course of motion picture industry. By secret and private negotiation with Mr. Edison, he obtained an option to buy the entire Edison motion picture interests for a half a million dollars. It would have meant control of the industry for the life of the patents. Mr. Marvin paid down $2,500 on his option and arranged a bank loan for the coming payments. The day the first payment was due, a sum of $300,000, the bank failed. The court war went on.

The Old Brownstone

In 1906 the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company abandoned its crude plant atop the Hackett-Carhart building and took over the old brownstone at 11 East Fourteenth Street in New York, which was to become the gateway to fame for a galaxy including David Wark Griffith, Mary Pickford, Mack Sennett, Dorothy and Lillian Gish and many others.

It was Mr. Marvin who presented Mr. Griffith with the opportunity to direct a picture. At that time, 1908, Mr. Griffith was an actor on the Biograph rolls. Needing another director Mr. Marvin asked his brother Arthur, a cameraman, to suggest someone. Arthur suggested Mr. Griffith and with some perturbation the now eminent director set about hunting a cast for his first picture, entitled "The Adventures of Dolly."

On Dec. 18, 1908, the patent war that lasted for a decade came to an end when through the efforts of Mr. Marvin and Jeremiah J. Kennedy, Biograph pooled its patents with those of Mr. Edison and George Kleine and all those whom Mr. Edison had licensed—Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay, Pathe, Kalem and Melies—and the Motion Picture Patents Company was born.

The Motion Picture Patents Company, parent of the General Film Company, came to the end of its active career on April 9, 1917, when the United States Supreme Court, in the case of the Patents Company vs. The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, held that the patents combine could not enforce the use of licensed film on patented projectors in the theatres.

In "A Million and One Nights," Terry Ramsaye, after noting the Supreme Court decision, observes: "In 1925 the Patents Company was still alive, consisting of a brass name plate at 65 Fifth Avenue and a correspondence file in the office of H. N. Marvin."

Edward Weisman Dies

Edward J. Weisman, 38, manager of the Educational Film Exchange in Milwaukee, for six years and more recently a film salesman, died in that city January 13th following an illness of several years.

Edward J. Lynch

Edward J. Lynch, 67, died January 12th at his home in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He was in the employ of the Comerford Amusement Company. At one time he was doorman at the Capitol.

Merge Stock Suits

The consolidation of the suits of five stockholders of Columbia Pictures was ordered this week by Samuel H. Hofstadter, New York supreme court justice, on application of Columbia. The suits are directed against bonuses and stock option warrants granted to Columbia officers. The plaintiffs were ordered to file an amended complaint within 30 days.

IN COURTS

Injunction Against "Mr. Smith" Sought

An injunction action to restrain Columbia from further distribution of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" has been filed in federal court in Los Angeles by Louis Ullman, writer. The plaintiff claims that he submitted a story to Columbia entitled "Three Little Tales Go to Market," and charges that certain characters and material from the story were used in the Frank Capra production.

Deny Sonja Henie Plea

Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice, this week denied an application of Sonja Henie to dismiss the suit of Dennis R. Scanlon for $92,000 and an accounting. Mr. Scanlon claims to be entitled to 20 per cent of the defendant's earnings, less certain deductions, under a contract whereby he claims he secured employment for her as an actress.

Grant "Ziegfeld" Plea

Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice, this week granted an application of Loew's, Inc, Select Operating Corporation and Billie Burke Ziegfeld to restrain the Ziegfeld Midnite Operating Corporation and Nicholas Blair from using the name "Ziegfeld." The plaintiffs, who are owners of all motion picture and stage rights to the name, waived claim to damages.

Direct Assessment Reply

Charles B. McLaughlin, New York supreme court justice, this week directed the New York City Tax Commission to file a return by February 15th to the petition of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation for a $215,000 reduction in assessments on three New York buildings for 1939-1940.

Lone Ranger Writ

Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge, in New York this week issued an injunction restraining Republic Productions, Inc., from interfering with negotiations for the sale of the Lone Ranger radio series for motion picture production by Universal. Judge Coxe also enjoined Republic from advertising its film "The Lone Star Ranger" in a manner which would connect it with the Lone Ranger. At the same time the decision denied a request for an injunction which would prevent Republic from releasing a Lone Ranger picture already completed by the defendant.

Orders Warner Trial

Trial of the suit of William La Varre against Warner Brothers for $50,000 in New York supreme court has been ordered by Justice Charles B. McLaughlin. A previous dismissal of the action in 1938 recently was upset by the New York court of appeals. The plaintiff claims that he was unpaid for two stories which he wrote for the screen, "The Bedside Manner" and "The Fated Woman."

File Disney Suit

The Steroplane Process Pictures Company, a Delaware corporation, has filed a suit against Walt Disney Productions, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Walt and Roy Disney in federal district court in Los Angeles. The plaintiff charges infringement of U. S. Letters Patent 2,104,779 and 2,026,713 and U. S. Trademark 358,093, unfair competition and piracy of confidential disclosures. The plaintiff seeks an injunction prohibiting distribution of Disney films and triple damages. The case is set for trial April 9th.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A CHALLENGE

Among circuits close to this department, is an outstanding organization that realizes the value of seasoned manpower. Managers are not pushed around. If it so happens that the theatreman bogs down in one situation, he is shifted to another spot. If that doesn't work out, he is moved again until the right combination is found. Thus, the manager is kept profitably on the payroll. The circuit still has the benefit of his experience and savvy. Both sides are satisfied.

The above is set down partly in answer to the member who calls for indignation here on what he reports as too many sudden manager switches practiced in a nearby sector. It tears down morale, disorganizes the manager's home life, disassociates him from helpful contacts, maintains the member, among other charges.

It is known that this department is dead against any transfers that come about through home office whims. But before pointing with alarm, let us agree that the day of wholesale switches for less than good solid business reasons is about past. Transfers involve a gamble and expense not to be taken lightly, especially with conditions as they are today.

We wouldn't know about every last situation, but among the many closer to your Round Table, there have been few changes over a span of years. The man who is clicking is rarely disturbed. If he is moved, it most often is upwards to a bigger job, or to act as a trouble-shooter, which is also regarded as a significant mark of home office approval.

All of which of course is no attempt to blanket the fact that quick transfers continue to be made, and that every man concerned is not too keen about it. He may have good reason to be.

If he cannot accept his transfer as a promotion, the manager who sees ahead will capitalize upon the switch by taking it as a distinct challenge to his showmanship in the new situation.

ANOTHER ROUND TABLE SERVICE

Starting in this issue, and to be continued regularly, are set down wired reports from key city members noting the highlights of their current, including pre-release campaigns. Each week another group of Round Tablers will take over. The plan calls for members, advised in advance, to telegraph here as soon after opening day as is convenient, in order that their top exploitations will be in print without delay.

The most important service offered by this department is to act as a clearing house for worthy ideas from the field. The wire project is intended to augment these services by expediting the "clearing" wherever possible, of campaigns on new pictures as soon as they break.

WORKING THE OLDIES AGAIN

Reporting on the results of a three-month managers' contest sponsored by his circuit, a member writes: "During this contest everyone of the managers dug deep into his files and numerous ideas were brought out that were great boxoffice stunts years ago."

To judge from the success of the contest, the old gags continued to be "great boxoffice stunts." They always will be, where intelligently guided.

A showman is sometimes defined as a man with a good memory, a thorough file and a willingness to use it. To these definitions might be added, a respect for the exploitations that have stood the test of time, plus enough imagination to streamline the oldies to fit today's standards.

TO MANNY, TO PAT —A BIG CONGRAT.

Moved, seconded and unanimously voted by the membership is a 21-gun salute in honor of:

Manny Pearlstein, promoted from advertising and publicity head of the Warner Cleveland houses, to the same in charge of all the circuit's Ohio units.

Pat McGee, promoted from manager of Schine's Paramount, Syracuse, to circuit district manager in Ohio, with headquarters in Cleveland.

Be it further noted that the progress of these able and hard-hitting Round Tablers may be traced by their frequent and meaty reports in these pages.

I AM SURE I EXPRESS THE SENTIMENTS OF EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE, WHEN I CONGRATULATE NATIONAL SCREEN SERVICE, THROUGH YOU, BECAUSE OF THE RECENT SIGNING FOR THE HANDLING OF SCREEN TRAILERS FOR PARAMOUNT PICTURES.

MOST EXHIBITORS THAT I HAVE CONTACTED, AND THAT INCLUDES MANY, ARE OF THE OPINION THAT CENTRALIZED HANDLING OF COMING ATTRACTION TRAILERS WOULD BE MUCH MORE BENEFICIAL TO THEM, THAN TO BE FORCED TO BUY TRAILERS FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

AND I FEEL THAT THEY ARE OF THE SAME OPINION AS TO ADVERTISING GENERALLY, I MEAN BY THAT, A HIGHLY SPECIALIZED ORGANIZATION TO SUPPLY ALL ADVERTISING MATTER ON ALL PRODUCTS, COULD NOT HELP BUT BE BENEFICIAL TO EXHIBITORS, TO REPLACE THE HAPHAZARD METHODS OF SECURING MATERIAL FROM MANY DIFFERENT SOURCES.

Civic Leaders Aid Markle's Birthday Drive for Theatre

With "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" as the main attraction for the theatre's sixth anniversary, Jack Markle, city manager for Harvard Amusement Co., put together a strong campaign on behalf of the Coolidge Corner Theatre, Brookline, Mass., in which newspapers and local organizations combined in celebration.

Two papers ran special cooperative double page sections on the anniversary with misspelled word contest and excerpts from congratulatory letters running in the ads. Special stories and editorials were run in the dailies which featured the history of the theatre, personnel, etc., in addition to bylined articles by the theatremen.

Special anniversary programs were mailed well in advance, and through cooperation of local bakery, giant birthday cake with star signatures was on display in the lobby as was blow up of congratulatory wire from the Governor and wires from stars and leading citizens. Illuminated flasher type setpiece on the picture was featured, while neon lighted anniversary sign was spotted on entrance arch to foyer.

Outside billing included window cards in town and outlying cities, paper posted in town and out, herald distribution and post cards sent to special mailing list. Directional arrows on all poles in town and on roads leading into the city and door knob hangers were profusely used.

The winner was guested by the management for an evening's entertainment. All photos taken were on display in the lobby.

Cooperation of local telegraph company was solicited and Henry promoted regular size wires with picture copy and these were used in merchants' windows, jumbo wires being delivered to all societies. Portrait stills of Garbo with informal signature at the bottom were displayed in leading stores.

As stated, there are no changes in the 1940 Awards. Rules and regulations remain the same, with honors voted for the best single exploitations or promotions, as last year. Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations winners will again be chosen from among the theatremen making the best records in the Fortnight two-week periods of each Quarter.

Bannan Converts Front To War Scene for "Quiet"

Battle scene front with sandbag and barbed wire effect around the front of the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, helped George Bannan announce that opening. Each side of boxoffice was a battle scene with hand-to-hand fights features. Bursting shell effect sold copy with such lines as "You can't blackout the truth," etc. Real machine guns were promoted and spotted out front, with bugler blowing military calls from the marquee at 10-minute intervals.

Promoting State Representative and member of American Legion who was intensely interested in the picture, to write an article for local paper selling the feature as the greatest argument against war. Article ran two days ahead of opening. Special stories were also planted in six out-of-town papers, patriotic societies were notified and empty store windows used for display purposes.

McGee Plants Teletype In Lobby for "Newsfronts"

For the March of Time "Newsfronts of War—1940," Manager Pat McGee at the Paramount, Syracuse, secured cooperation of AP for the installation of a teletype in front lobby on sidewalk side, which was hooked to "A" wire service carrying foreign news bulletins. At end of showing of March of Time, trailer was run calling attention to the fact that the AP service is used locally by both the Herald and Post-Standard, leading dailies. Cooperating papers ran ads and full column stories calling attention to the stunt.

On "Disputed Passage," McGee used an eight foot compo board replica of the book mounted on casters, which was rolled through the business section. Bulletins were posted at nurses' registry, all doctors were circularized and colored heralds distributed, entire cost of which was met by book store ad on back cover.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ferrera's "Rains" Front

The rains came to Abbeville, La., through the efforts of M. E. Ferrera at the Dixie, who in advance of that picture's opening "manufactured" his own rain by use of a 40-foot perforated pipe atop his marquee, from which water poured incessantly. Boy and girl carrying umbrellas walked back and forth. Various colored lights played on the marquee at night.

Fairbairn Wins Citation

Selected for a Quarter-Master Citation in the last quarter of the 1939 Awards and inadvertently omitted was the entry of John Fairbairn, Capitol Theatre, Cardiff, England, on "Union Pacific." Representative of Fairbairn's effective exploitations was his Union Pacific campaign, published in the issue of December 23, in which a model railroad erected in the lobby was viewed by over 150,000 in six weeks.

THE reproduction here is of one of the New York newspaper ads, 140 lines on five columns, for the world premiere, on Friday, at the Hollywood theatre, and the reserved seat engagement of Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird", produced in Technicolor by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The illustrations, following idealized scenes from the picture, are in scratch-board, a technique applied importantly in others of the larger displays in advance of the premiere. The type is Weiss, a modern face, both type and illustrations, incidentally, to be used throughout.

Breaking a week ahead, the metropolitan advertising was inaugurated with all-type layouts holding mainly to announcement copy, picture, cast and production credits, boxoffice information and prices. Art was used sparingly, mostly as decoration. Pictorial displays of larger size were emphasized in the last four days before opening, with due allowance made for white space. In fact, the entire campaign is distinguished for complete absence of reverses. The importance of the story is indicated in the copy line on one of the ads, "greater than its players," which finds advertising expression in the cast credits. All players are given equal billing. Following Shirley Temple, who is listed first, are Spring Byington, Nigel Bruce, Gale Sondergaard, Eddie Collins, Sybil Jason, Jessie Ralph, Helen Ericson, Johnny Russell, Laura Hope Crews, Russell Hicks, Cecilia Loftus, Al Shean and Gene Reynolds.

The New York campaign is to be followed exactly for the reserved seat dates in San Francisco and Detroit, among others, according to Charles E. McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox director of advertising and publicity. The company's "assist" ads for other dates generally will stress the same layouts and selling appeal. This applies also to advertising in pressbooks, national and fan magazines, with the scratch-board technique to be adopted in full-color page ads in selected national weeklies.

Lineage on the New York campaign runs approximately to 2,800 lines in each metropolitan paper, some eight in all.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Pages

(1) Different sales appeal and layout used in three papers the day ahead to hit as many classifications of readers as possible, was topped by this 125 lines on 3 col., by Ev Callow for "Of Mice and Men" at the Warner Aldine, Philadelphia. Mostly art, the layout was pointed up with the type panel at top and reverse copy circle alongside title to heighten interest.

(2) To emphasize the holiday atmosphere of his "now" ad for "Gulliver" at the Uptown, Toronto, Jim Nairn confined this 60 lines on 3 col., to the reverse arrow pointed to the title circle spotlighting the halftone of scene shot. For particular attention, children's price was set out below.

(3) Since Deanna Durbin is a Toronto favorite, Nairn found no reason to devote his 90 lines on 4 col., holdover on "First Love" at the Imperial, to anything more than an artistic announcement. "She stays" topped the layout for an attention-getter to lead into the star halftone.

(4) Representative of the typical layouts used by the Music Hall, is this 130 lines on 3 col., for "His Girl Friday." For added touches and to concentrate the picture copy for quick reading, atmospheric pen sketches were used as noted, the star halftone at top aiding to frame the whole.

(6) Both thrill and romance were sold in a series of teasers for "Raffles" at the New York Roxy, as represented by this 50 lines on 2 col., by ad head Homer Harmon. Opera-hatted head of Niven was used to set the class of the attraction.

(7) To avoid any confusion regarding the newness of RKO's "Hunchback," Vic Gauntlett planted a prominent copy panel to emphasize it as "first time on talking screen." Gauntlett steered away from the horror angle in copy and also in art as illustrated by the familiar pose of Laughton with face covered. Romance was noted by dancing pose of O'Hara which supplied ad balance. Size: 150 lines on 2 col.

(8) Manny Pearlstein's holdover layout for "Hunchback" at Warners Hipp, Cleveland, was based on use of white space for quick attention value in a relatively restricted ad size. Display followed a definite pattern of "where-when-who-what." Size, 85 lines on 2 col.

MINNESOTANS REPORT ON BOXOFFICE DOINGS

Minnesota Amusement Managers Create Comprehensive Tieins for Buildup of Recent Dates

Representative of the effective showmanship displayed by theatremen of the Minnesota Amusement circuit are details of the following campaigns covering various dates from different situations. Numerous sources of exploitation have been tapped in these promotional activities which cover contributions from the office of Charlie Winchell, circuit ad head, as well as those forwarded directly from men in the field.

For "Eternally Yours," at the Lyceum, Duluth, Minn., Manager Geo. D. Irwin, used various devices including a miniature letter in an envelope, size, two inches by three and a half. Envelope with simulated stamp cancellation was addressed: "A little letter for you inside." The letter started with the line: "Most good things come in small packages," went on to tell of the picture, and was signed Eternally Yours.

Irwin Uses Cashier Cards

Irwin also had the "I am your cashier" cards made up, signed by the ticket-sellers and passed out to women patrons at the boxoffice. The copy was a personal plug by the girls for the picture. Postcards addressed to 10 friends of each of the staff were mailed wherein the signer endorsed the date and urged attendance. Top newspaper tiein was a series of personals on the classified page addressed to "Dear Anita" and signed "Arturo."

Among the civic-minded organizations in St. Paul, is the Hospitality Club which publicizes the movies in the local buildup. Promoted by Don Alexander, publicity head, and Manager Walter Van Camp, of the Paramount, was a five-column ad signed by the Club and given over to art and copy on coming pictures. The theatremen also cracked an 18-page special fashion supplement with a series of fashion shots of stars in coming pictures.

On "Drunk Driving", the theatremen promoted a full page in the roto section which featured numerous scenes from the picture together with tiein copy. In addition story on police commissioner's endorsement was run.

Steffy Stresses Fashions in "Babes"

The fashion angle was also exploited by Manager Frank Steffy, at the State, Minneapolis, on "Babes in Arms," with the aid of admen Ev Seibel and George Tharp. Smart program gotten out by leading women's shops for a fashion parade held in downtown hotel included mention of Judy Garland styles. Tiein was completed with line at the bottom of program listing star, picture and theatre.

For "Drums Along the Mohawk,'" theatremen tied in with a full-page color ad by Standard Oil, copy tieing in the "thrill to Claudette Colbert and thrill to a full tank of Standard Red Crown." All the company's filling stations displayed copy of ad and plugged the picture to customers. Company supervisors also worked up theatre parties among the employees. Souvenir photos of Colbert with theatre credits imprinted on reverse, were distributed at stations and by uniformed attendants in the lobby ahead.

Unique invitations to an advance screening of "Ninotchka" at the Paramount, St. Cloud, Minn., were worked out by Manager Fred Larkin with a lucky stunt in the form of a small stapled folder. Widely distributed, the cover carried copy suggesting the folder be opened to determine whether the holder would be among the 50 to be invited. Two sets of copy were used inside. The 50 with the invites read "you really are lucky. You are hereby invited," etc. The other said "we are sorry you did not pick a lucky one. But don't be downhearted. Everything will be all right if you see."

In Rochester, Minn., for "Jeepers Creepers," at the Lawler, Manager Don P. Fredrickson put out a hillbilly ballyhoo with local boys in costume. Boys paraded the town playing and singing topical numbers, rode about town in old model bannered car. They carried the necessary props, such as corn cob pipes, squirrel rifles and brown jugs. Boys were members of local high school band.

Ryan Holds Score Guessing Contest

Cracking a tough paper for tieins was accomplished by Manager Joe Ryan, Eastman, St. Cloud, Minn., through a score guessing contest put on by the daily. Ryan offered passes as extra prizes in return for mention in the publicity and also in full-page co-ops arranged by the paper to build up the interest. The passes attracted wide attention with entries growing each week as a result to the extent that the paper has tied in with Joe for the same hookup next year, and is ready to listen to other theatre promotional ideas previously turned down.

At the Century, Minneapolis, Manager Charley Zinn aroused interest in "Jamaica Inn" with an imprinted miniature blotter, calling card size, distributed in office buildings, offices and stores in the downtown loop. Card carried Laughton's name across face with copy at top to meet the star at Jamaica Inn.

Swenson Honors Football Squad

Harvey Swenson describes the wide publicity obtained with two annual "most valuable player" awards, voted to outstanding local high school and college members of football squad. Started in 1932, the tiein has been growing each year with Swenson awarding the plaques at theatres on different nights for added business and attentions in the local press.

For "Marx Bros at the Circus," Byron McElligott used a bannered "elephant" for street attention, two locals supplying the leg-power and animal animation. An open letter to Adolph Hitler for "All Quiet," by W. F. McKallor, stirred up a lot of local attention on the date. And to celebrate the 30th anniversary in pictures of L. G. Roesner, Minnesota partner in Winona, Minn., Harold Borresen advertised a reel of old time pictures showing local scenes.

Nelson Tops "Women" Drive With 16-Page Supplement

To be listed among the top promotions for "The Women" is the special 16-page supplement promoted by Manager Jack Nelson for his date at the Capitol, North Bay, Canada. Distinguished by a two-color front page and with copy that tied in the section directly to the picture, the supplement represented the top merchants in town with all ad copy hooked in with Nelson's date. In addition, there were feature articles on various phases of women appeal, publicity stories and art. Jack handled all the selling, there being no cost to the theatre. Paper further cooperated by announcing the supplement in advance.

Radio publicity was spiced with a series of teaser spot announcements, such as "I beg your pardon, Have you a date with the Women?" "No men wanted. Can the Women get away with it." And so forth. These announcements were promoted and used in addition to Nelson's regular program.

Novelty gags took the form of a tiein with the Lions, the Round Tabler placing a large sign over the doors at a stag party, copy reading: "Where are the Women." He also put pickets on the street with signs reading that the theatre was unfair to men since there were no men in the picture. Nelson also publicized the date at popular women's lodge dance by working a three and a six sheet into a stage decoration tiein line over the title reading: "We Salute the Women."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mayor Is Guest of Honor At Egan's "Lion" Opening

Booked in on short notice for a pre-Christmas date, "Lion Has Wings" was given a thorough sendoff at the Palace, Calgary, Alberta, Can., through the efforts of Manager Pete Egan and assistants, G. Shafer and C. Egan. Confirmation of the date brought immediate advance publicity culminating in a lengthy editorial by the editor of the leading daily, after a private screening. Paper also ran shots of prints delivered by air to all parts of the Dominion and photo of the Mayor of Calgary being greeted by Pete at the opening.

Advance was plugged ahead on three radio programs and special kiddie matinee held for early buildup. Front was artistically bannered and further decorated with strings of army pennants. Opening night, was given a military flavor with traffic at the boxoffice regulated by soldiers from nearby barracks, present as Egan's guests.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Baby Tieins Feature Bray "Thin Man" Date

It was Baby Week for Lew Bray, at the Lyric, Brownwood, Texas, for "Another Thin Man," with the exploitation leaning heavily and successfully to tieups featuring the new addition to the Thin Man family. To announce the third member, Bray used the clothes-line idea for his lobby, single diapers hung for each letter of the title. Regular clothes pins kept them in place. Complete cost was three dollars.

Baby bed occupied by large doll was placed in lobby week ahead and during run. Crib was completely furnished with a card across the head carrying scene shot and copy. Leading jeweler cooperated with a window of baby things and Bray reports similar displays in other well-located stores.

THE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

A Young Man Asks

DEAR MR. RAMSAYE:

I am the assistant manager of the Strand Theatre, 24 years old, and curious. I have asked several of my fellow workers a question and have so far not quite received the answer.

What is the psychology of the show business?

All other branches of business seem to have some set code or goal at which they aim; surely ours does have one. I have not been able to learn of any books that deal with the subject of how to be a good theatre man, and the only answer that I have been able to get so far has been "Work hard and do your job and you will learn."

This all seems to me to be a bit absurd, inasmuch as misdirected effort gets one nowhere, and any effort that is put forth without a definite goal would be better spent merely by the setting of a definite goal.

All of us want to be great men, and all of us who are trying to be work hard at it, but whereas a chemist endeavors to produce some new compound or substance to help him on his way, what does a showman do to accomplish the same end?

I am not asking for the formula for wealth, but instead the things that need most to be done to help, in some way, to make this most fascinating of businesses become what it intends to be.

I have a lot of very high ideals that I feel that the business should be working towards, and I would like to check these with what you deem should be the ideals of our industry. Respectfully yours,

HARRY F. JOINER.

NATURALLY enough you, Mr. Joiner, an obviously purposeful person, would like to have a lot of answers, all of the answers, that loom ahead in your work and prospective career. It is not surprising that your fellow workers have not been much help, and that you have found neither code nor book to offer guidance. It is to be suspected that not much can be done about supplying such a chart as you desire, but, with what I hope is due humility and cognizance of limitations, some observations can be offered.

You inquire about "the psychology of the show business".

I am not being flippant when I say that I am not sure that there is such a thing. In the popular meaning of the term it would call for an analysis of the mental states and processes of "the show business", most especially with respect to determining action. Individuals, sometimes groups, have psychological processes of a positive, active character. The show business is made up of something around a quarter of a million persons, variously divided into groups of units—and not a few acutely individualistic persons. Some of the groups and most of those special individualists have a notion of where they are going and how they are going to get there. Also what they will do in any given set of circumstances usually can be forecast without a crystal ball. The industry as a whole knows no more about where it is going than a rain-drop descending on the Great Divide.

Yet the industry as a whole is considerably a success. Despite the multiple, and inevitable, errors of its masters, it managed, or happened, to contribute importantly and therefore profitably to human happiness and satisfactions for the millions.

This has come about from the experimental explorations of the psychology of the customers, by the processes, and the sharp rivalries of the masters of the movies—incidentally a continuously narrowing number of persons, and at the moment probably less than twenty.

INTERNALLY the most apparent aspect of the motion picture business, your show business, is sharp, unrelenting competition for success, in dollars and in kudos. Commonly this results mostly in sharp bidding for every glint of anything that promises advantage. The first step is to buy, and out-buy, after that to create if may be.

That is of course most conspicuous in Hollywood.

It is equally to be noted, only more diffusely, in exhibition, the point of your present observation. The exhibitor first tries to buy as many hits, or probable hits, as possible—after that to apply such creative showmanship as he can.

Wrapped up here somewhere, it would appear, we have surrounded if not analyzed the psychologies involved—a public seeking satisfactions, and a set of makers and vendors striving for materials to assemble and sell competitively to that public. It all sounds like every man for himself—and it is.

I can image that is not very much help to you so far. It does, however, bring us precisely to the fact that what you are seeking, "the psychology of the show business", is merely man, in the mass or individually, reacting to his environment. If he is able to achieve success by reasonably fair means and be spoken of pleasantly by most of his fellows, he is called a good citizen and, if he does it in the show business, he is known as a good showman.

The motion picture business, your show business, is after all not to be considered as a domain by itself, special and apart. Its success is in its intimate interweaving with the whole of the fabric of civilization, or what is left of it. There are bright lights on the marquee and there are glamours in your merchandise, but you stand in your job this evening in relation to your business, the public and your world, not very differently from other young men engaged in retailing, up and down the street.

What it takes right now to get along successfully in Wichita Falls is what it takes to go places in the show business.

You are in a live, busy, and I fancy rather prosperous town. I paused there once to change oil and gas-up. The manager of the service station, with an eye on my alien license plates, asked a lot of questions about matters that showed he was intending to widen his horizons and had it in mind to go places—but meanwhile he saw to it that I got a good grease

THE Solution?

A REPORT on the motion picture industry, embracing a program designed to eliminate "abuses" in the business, has been formulated by the Department of Commerce in Washington and presented to the Department of Justice for its immediate consideration.

This report, completed a week ago, is the result of conferences which Department of Commerce officials held with important corporate film and exhibition officials last year, Motion Picture Daily declared Thursday.

At the Department of Justice, unofficial commentators described parts of the report as recommending ideas "revolutionary" in character. No one in either Department would reveal the contents.

Observers were said to believe that the Department of Commerce report may be the beginning of an effort to inaugurate negotiations with the industry to correct abuses and thus satisfy the Government's anti-trust campaign objectives.

Officials of the Department of Justice, however, said that the report has no bearing on the Department's trust suits, the New York "key" case being scheduled to go on trial on May 1. (News of trust suits is on page 62).

While emphasizing that the New York suit definitely is going to trial, Department of Justice officials indicated that the case can be ended without trial if and when the organized industry which is under attack submits to the Government specific proposals satisfying the Government's objectives in the case. The Government also would demand that these proposals be incorporated in a consent decree approved by the federal courts.

Up, Up, Up

UNIVERSAL PICTURES COMPANY, now of Cowdin-Blumberg management, ended the year 1937 on October 30th, with a gross income of $18,150,876 and a net loss of $1,084,998; ended the year 1938, on the same date, with a gross income of $20,190,117 and a net loss of $591,178; ended the year 1939 with a gross income of $23,878,868 and a net profit of $1,153,321. That's the merry tale Universal's stockholders will receive in their mail Friday morning, when the company's annual financial statement will reach them.

Wall Street estimates Paramount's net profit for the year at approximately $4,500,000, or nearly $500,000 higher than the $4,096,000 reported for 1938.

job. He will make out all right—even if it so chances that he stays in Wichita Falls.

Maybe that sounds like another version of that line you quoted: "Work hard and do your job and you will learn." That contains one important error, the "work hard" part. The fellow who has "a hard job" is never any good at it, gets nothing out of it but the wage. More progress is to be had by devising ways of getting the job done painlessly, but done.

YOU say: "All of us want to be great men." That is probably inaccurate, and if true would be a great pity, because it would mean that such a vast majority would be so inevitably destined to disappointment. It is a very dangerous notion to want to be great. I have never known a great man, although I have known some who were said to be great. None of those who enjoyed repute of greatness were persons who set out to be that. Also I have had to write the obituaries of several men, some of them in our show business, who died of broken hearts in the pursuit of greatness.

The nearest to what is called a great man whom I ever knew was a fellow who specialized amazingly in tending strictly to his own business. He was so intensely interested that he gave it all he had, and never knew he was working hard, because he was not. He was in the right job for his capacities. As a showman he would have been a failure—in fact he was. He built a gadget called the motion picture and some people who wanted it worse than he did took it away from him. His lawyers fussed about it, but he was so interested in other things yet to do he hardly noticed it. His name was Edison.

That fellow of course falls into the category of the chemist you mention, who "endeavors to produce some new compound or substance to help him on his way". And that leads you to ask, "What does a showman do to accomplish the same end?" The analogy does not exist. Your chemist is engaged in creation, or exploration. The showman is eternally, inevitably, inescapably involved in exploitation—and that is true whether he works in studio, exchange or theatre.

The showman must always work with people and upon people. He must know about people and must be able to influence their reactions. The final merchandise is nebulous stuff indeed—it is the customer's anticipation that he is going to get his money's worth from a flow of shadows while sitting at so much per sit in one of your orchestra chairs. The customer may come in because he believes the billing, because he likes the theatre, or because you are nice to him, or because he has sore feet.

If you can arrange to get the customer to come in and satisfy him, and do it without cutting the competitor's throat in the booking deal, without bicycling the film, without resort to pictures or devices invasive of the status of your theatre, your industry and the standards of your community, you are getting along toward a success that will stand up and last. It will, I regret to say, possibly in many instances also be necessary to see that none of those things are done to you, either.

No matter where you go in the show business you'll be doing about the same thing—just trying to influence people, to push them into performance, or make them buy.

And there's the great hope of endurance and stability for the show business. It will be a business as long as there are people. It is not such a big business as it brags about being, but it is for many of us the most interesting, because of all there is under the sun the most interesting to us is us, the people.

—Terry Ramsaye

P. S.—Don't bother about trying to be a great showman. They live a life of headaches and die broke. Try to be a good business man in the show business and sleep nights. There are many of them and they are the happiest.—T.R.

Television Troubles

TELEVISION is having a variety of troubles, not only technical and economic, but with programs and the public's sales resistance. This week television, or more specifically Station W2XBS, of NBC, atop the Empire State Building, New York, had its first "censorship" trouble. The station presented, last Sunday afternoon, a British picture which contained scenes and dialogue reminiscent of some American pictures before the Production Code, which self-regulates Hollywood film standards.

This is NBC's story: The film, "School for Husbands," was previewed in the usual manner and approved by their man who selects material for telecasting. A print was delivered to NBC Sunday just before 2:30 P.M. when the program went on the air. After the film began to run through the telecaster, someone from J. H. Hoffberg Co., the distributor, told NBC, "We have done you a favor—we have given you a new print." NBC television officials asked, "Is it a print of the picture as approved by the Hays Office?" It developed that the print then being transmitted by television was not of the same version that was given a Production Code Seal last February, in New York.

If telecasters make many presentations of this type they will learn that "television troubles" have just begun.

Newsreel Debate

DESPITE FERVID pleadings in the English House of Lords on Wednesday, Lord Denman's motion demanding a state censorship on newsreels was withdrawn. The Government, delegating its reply to Lord Dufferin, pleaded the need to safeguard liberty, and asked that neither the newspapers nor the film industry be penalized for individual lapses.

The Government spokesman lacerated the Paramount Newsreel company on its treatment of Miss Unity Mitford's return to England from Germany, and said:

"As an example of sadistic brutality, it would be hard to beat."

Though deplorable, the treatment has seemed to London observers, to be no worse than press treatment of the incident, generally.

On appeal, it was promised in the House that the practicability and advisability of prohibiting further circulation of the newsreel of Miss Mitford's return, would be explored.

Lord Denman categorized the film treatment as a "fake," with objectionable commentary, and cruel to Miss Mitford and her father.

The War's On, Again

HALF-A-DOZEN generals of Allied's army will take to the field Tuesday morning to open the fight for the socalled minorities who would have Congress outlaw the practice of block booking motion pictures, under penalty to the film companies of imprisonment for violation (See Section 5, Part 1, page 14), under the bill (S. 280) that was passed by the Senate last year, and is now before a House interstate commerce subcommittee, as sponsored by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely (Dem., W. Va). and supported by Allied, the Motion Picture Research Council and some others of varying connection with the industry.

Generals and privates of the opposing forces of the industry have been laying the groundwork for their campaign for weeks, from east to west, north to south, but in this stage of the battle, a battle that has been fought for years, Allied is only now for the first time entering into the open. True, its leaders have been formulating strategies in private chamber, as they did last week at a directors' meeting in Washington (see page 16), and now one of the largest concentrations of its executive manpower is to be turned loose for open support of the measure that is daily bringing attack from many sides of production, distribution, exhibition and labor. The forms of attack and the quarters from which they came this week are reported on page 14.

Scene of the firing of Allied's "opening shot" this year will be a luncheon-meeting of Allied's state affiliate in New Haven, in the Hotel Garde in that city; time of the firing, Tuesday, noon; the firers, Colonel Harry Cole, national Allied president, from Dallas, Texas, and Allied generals Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; Sidney Samuelson, Philadelphia; Frank Lyden, New England; Arthur Howard, Boston; Thornton Kelly, Connecticut. The general-in-charge of the Allied Armies, Abram Fern Myers, will not be present; he's laid up with a cold from winter's blasts, in his apartment in Washington.

Fiddlesticks

MR. JAMES (JIMMY) FIDLER, Procter and Gamble's soap-and-shampoo aircaster of tattlings about Hollywood pictures and personalities, has been getting some more attention of late in the prints and elsewhere, in complaint of his film personality gossiping and his bell-ringing picture ratings, the complaints coming from producers and exhibitors alike.

This week's attention is directed to Mr. Fidler's remarks of Tuesday evening during which he made some kind of a crack about the FAME-MOTION PICTURE HERALD annual poll of "Biggest Money Making Stars" being "fixed," or "framed," or "influenced by politics," or something, as a result of which, he said, Deanna Durbin was not among the first ten winners.

We don't know the exact words of Mr. Fidler's bleat, not having listened, and, for reasons that seem strange, the Columbia Broadcasting Company in Hollywood and Mr. Fidler, likewise in Hollywood, both refused, with quite some abruptness, to provide text of the same; also, the New York corporate headquarters and operating home office of Columbia Broadcasting, which presumably controls the type and text of programs identified with its national networks, was unable to supply a copy of the Fidler charges, for the simple reason they didn't have a copy—"he 'airs' from Hollywood," they said.

Miss Durbin only narrowly missed making a place among the first ten stars of 1939, as voted by theatre owners on actual box office performances; but she did rate 12th position, running ahead of 190 other players who received votes; and, in Fame, issued in December, it was noted that Hollywood was wishing, "almost with civicism, that the three players—Crosby, Durbin and Withers—who almost crashed the Top Ten list, but didn't quite, had made the grade."

When Fidler broadcast his guesses as to who or who would not be on the FAME-MOTION PICTURE HERALD list of ten money-making stars, prior to publication of the names of the ten, he had nine of them correct and had Miss Durbin for the other one.

Louis Charninsky Warns Labor That Measure Would Reduce Working Personnel; Virginia MPTO Opposes Bill

Anticipation that the Neely anti-block booking bill soon may reach the attention of the House interstate commerce sub-committee, in whose hands the document rests, has interest approaching boiling point in all branches of the industry—in organized exhibition and otherwise, in production and distribution and in the labor sphere.

Adding to this week's attention to the bill as given by Allied States Association (see page 16) and by various state groups, are expressions in protest of passage, voiced by theatre operators in the field, a petition to the American Federation of Labor to support the attack on the bill by unifying labor's protest, and an invitation by Hollywood to proponents and opponents to debate the matter before talent groups.

Exhibitor Groups Divide

Organized exhibitor ranks in Pennsylvania and New York were split this week over the issue. A group of owners of New York Allied walked out after an organization meeting indorsed passage in Albany.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, who is conducting what is presumably his own fight throughout the country, arrived at Miami Beach, Fla., to petition a meeting of the American Federation of Labor on Monday, to solidify the entire labor front against the proposed measure. The labor organization is in executive session there.

A large labor body, an AFL affiliate, that opposed the Neely Bill two weeks ago, was the New York City Central Trades and Labor Council, representing 350 crafts unions with 600,000 members. In a statement to public and press, Thomas Murtha, its president, called attention to the bill's "destructive features," and a joint statement by Mr. Murtha and the board declared, in part:

"We are going to do everything within our power to kill this bill, which will do great damage to a major American industry but will solve none of the serious problems and difficulties of that industry."

Charninsky Attacks Bill

Louis Charninsky, manager of the Capitol, Mirror and Rialto theatres in Dallas, appeared before the Dallas Central Labor Council last week on the invitation of the council's president, Wallace Reilly, and talked on the evils of the bill. He said that 282,000 employes in the trade would be reduced by half and that one-half of present expenditure would be used for product if the bill passed. Mr. Charninsky said more "sex pictures," instead of fewer, would be made, and cited the fact that William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, is against the bill. The council went on rec-

What the Neely Bill Demands

Do you know that the Neely Bill (S. 280), now pending before the House of Representatives in Congress, as passed by the Senate last summer, makes the following provisions?

Sec. 3 (1) It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more films and to require the exhibitor to lease all such films or permit him to lease none; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more at an aggregate price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which aggregate price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation (a) as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition, or (b) as tends to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any number or numbers thereof, or (c) that the effect of the lease or offer to lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in any other manner or by any other means the effect of which would be to defeat the purpose of this Act.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported in commerce any motion-picture film which is leased, or intended to be leased in violation of subdivision (1) of this section.

Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition any motion-picture film or films over two thousand feet in length unless such distributor shall furnish the exhibitor at or before the time of making such lease or offer to lease an accurate synopsis of the contents of such film. Such synopsis shall be made a part of the lease and shall include (a) a general outline of the story and descriptions of the principal characters, and (b) a statement describing the manner of treatment of dialogs concerning and scenes depicting vice, crime, or suggestive of sexual passion. It is the purpose of this section to make available to the exhibitor sufficient information concerning the type and contents of the film and the manner of treatment of questionable subject matter to enable him to determine whether he wishes to select the film for exhibition and later to determine whether the film is fairly described by the synopsis.

Sec. 5. (1) Every person who violates section 3, or who fails to furnish the synopsis required by section 4, or knowingly makes any false statement in such synopsis, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

(2) The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this Act, and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition, the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition, and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any such proceeding may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not, and subpoenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

ACTORS GUILD HITS NEELY BILL

ord as opposing the bill by unanimous consent.

Karl Hoblitzelle and Robert J. O'Donnell, who conduct the Interstate Circuit throughout the southwest, in a joint statement which they addressed to "fellow-exhibitors" called the bill "the most destructive and oppressive legislation with which this industry has ever been threatened, which will surely ruin every exhibitor in the business, whether large or small, independent or chain. It will eventually lead to the extension of federal supervision over this industry with its red tape, its checks, barriers to conduct free business, and excessive supervisory costs. If this bill passes, there won't be a man in this business who won't be sorry for the day that he shrugged this problem aside as no concern of his or with the feeling that it was the other fellow's fight."

Actors Hit Bill

The Screen Actors Guild came out against the Neely bill Tuesday. In its official publication, the Guild management declared that the Neely bill "would cut motion picture production in half and would disastrously affect industry employment," adding:

"The Screen Actors Guild believes that enactment of the Neely bill, which would destroy methods by which theatres in this country are provided regularly with film necessary to their existence, would inevitably cause the closing of many theatres, curtailment of production and consequent unemployment of actors whom we represent."

"Endless litigation over synopses would follow," said the Guild, declaring, "Here is a plan which would stop production temporarily, keep production in low gear, and which would make good production all but impossible."

Guild Invites Debate

Abram Myers, general counsel for Allied States, and a representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America have been invited to debate the Neely bill at a mass meeting of Screen Writers Guild members on Monday at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood. The guild board ordered the meeting so that the guild as a whole may decide what action to take.

The Screen Directors Guild has delayed action on the Neely bill until the return to Hollywood of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, guild counsel, from Washington.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Darryl Zanuck, head of production, denounced the bill on their arrival in New York last week from Hollywood. Mr. Schenck warned that the passage of the bill probably would result in a serious shortage of product, particularly for the small exhibitor.

Mr. Zanuck termed the bill insane and said it would wreck inestimable harm to the industry at large.

Albany Members Walk Out

After New York Allied's Albany unit—its state president, Max Cohen, was absent—had voted on Monday to support the Neely Bill, six of its members walked out of the state organization, headed by Mitchell Conery, regional leader. They were said to feel the organization's effectiveness had been weakened by its break from the National Allied States Association several months ago.

SCHWARTZ HEADS EXHIBITORS AGAIN

For the seventh year, Ernest Schwartz was elected president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, in that city, last week. Elected vice-president was Albert E. Ptak; secretary, George Erdmann; treasurer, L. G. Baldwin.

The executive board of the Oregon branch of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners met on Monday and Tuesday, at the Heathman Hotel, Portland.

In New Haven, George Wilkinson, Jr., was elected treasurer of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners, succeeding his late father, operator of the Wilkinson Theatre, Wallingford. The new treasurer is also treasurer of the Wallingford Bank and Trust Company.

The others, besides Mr. Conery, were Abe Stone, of Albany, Clarence Dopp and Bob Jenner, of Johnstown and Frankfort; John Gardiner, of Schenectady; and Charles Wilson, of Troy.

Cohen Opposed to Bill

Mr. Cohen is known to be opposed to the Neely Bill. Rumors of a revolt against his guidance of the state Allied against the bill and, consequently, against the National Allied stand, had been heard for several months.

The state Allied's convention may be held at Syracuse in April.

Resignation of six members from the Albany unit of Allied Theatre Owners of New York does not mean disruption or abandonment of the regional unit, according to Edmund Souhami, attorney for the state organization.

Souhami attended a regional meeting in Albany on Monday at which the resignations were submitted after the meeting voted to support the Neely bill, contrary to action at a recent state meeting in Syracuse. Souhami said that the Albany unit still has more than 40 members.

Col. H. A. Cole, Allied States president, in New York this week said that the national organization does not intend to renew efforts to organize an affiliated unit in New York State.

An Albany unit meeting will be held shortly to elect a successor to Mitchell Conery of Ravena, regional vice-president, one of those who resigned.

Virginia MPTO Meets

Opposition to the Neely Bill officially entered the records of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, at the organization's annual convention, last Thursday, in Richmond. Members had heard Harry Brandt, New York exhibitor leader, speak against the bill, and against the appearance of screen stars on the radio.

The MPTO members are expected, in support of their attack against the Neely Bill, to urge all friends to wire Congressmen of their opinion. The unit also pledged support to the fight against stars on the radio, by appointing Morton G. Thalheimer and William S. Wilder to a committee being formed by Mr. Brandt.

All officers were re-elected for another year. These are William F. Crockett, president; Benjamin T. Pitts, vice-president; Harold Wood, secretary; and Sam Bendheim, Jr., treasurer.

New members of the board are Daniel Weinberg, Jeff Hofheimer, John Caldwell, Denver Aleshire, and H. M. Moody.

In Philadelphia two local exhibitor organizations, the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, and Delaware, and the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, split on support of the Neely bill. The United MPTO organization last Friday went on record against the bill and asked members to write their Congressmen. The Allied unit resolved in favor of the bill, in line with the National Allied policy.

The United MPTO re-elected Lewen Pizor, president, George P. Aarons, secretary-counsel, and Morris Spiers treasurer.

Welcome to Zukor and Hicks in Panama

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures, and John W. Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, accompanied by Mrs. Hicks, arrived in Panama over the weekend on the first leg of their general survey of Latin-American condiitons. They were received by the President of Panama, Dr. Augusto Boyd, at the Presidential Palace. Later they were entertained by the American Ambassador to Panama, William Dawson, following which they were received by Major General Van Voorhis, commanding general of the Panama Canal Zone.

E. C. Grainger Holds Cincinnati Meeting

E. C. Grainger, general manager of the Feiber & Shea circuit, and the circuit's managers in the field held a breakfast-meeting at the Netherland-Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati last week. Attending were: Ray C. Hickman, field representative; Frank King, manager of the Midland and Auditorium, Newark; Dan Gilhula, manager of the State of Ohio, Cambridge; Edward J. Hiehle, manager of the Weller, Zanesville; Duke Prince, manager of the Ohio and Strand, Marietta; Tom Alfred, general manager of the Lancaster Amusement Company, Lancaster; Harold Snyder, manager of the Lyric, Lancaster, and Jack Shea, booker of New York.

NATIONAL ALLIED PUSHES NEELY BILL AND SYSTEM OF ARBITRATION

Attitude of Large and Affiliated Circuits Called Big Factor in Outcome; Myers Hints at A. F. of L. "Unholy Alliance"

National Allied States Association directors last Thursday re-elected officers, speeded the campaign in which it is leading so-called minorities in exhibition to push the Neely Bill, set Detroit as the city for the national convention in May or June, discussed the growing influence of labor in the motion picture industry—and urged a voluntary system of arbitration throughout the industry. The directors met in annual session at the Carlton hotel, Washington.

In the meantime, throughout the country, exhibitor organizations, both Allied and non-Allied, were voting opposition or support of the Neely Bill, and the score was about even this week. (See Page 14.)

Calls Large Circuits Factor

Opinion, generally, on the reception Allied efforts to bring about immediate arbitration might receive, indicated in distribution quarters that the answer rested upon the attitude of the large and affiliated circuits. It is these whose holdings and business practices will be affected by any disputes, and their settlement, over present clearance, overbuying, and admission systems—matters which virtually any local arbitration board probably will concern itself with.

The Allied arbitration plan, which was broached last week coincident with the directors' absorption in other matters such as the Neely bill itself, seems in the opinion of observers, to be almost identical to that which the late trade practice code set up, with one exception, the desire of Allied that two independent exhibitors be on each local board, to balance the distributor and affiliated circuit representatives. The directors approved other phases of the code's arbitration system.

The trade practice code was virtually junked, despite much exhibitor sentiment for it, last fall, when Wesley Arnold, United States assistant attorney general, ruled it illegal. It had been months in the making, and its discarding caused much debate among exhibitor organizations. Many of them asked for a retention of its arbitration clauses, and some sought its retention, anyway, in somewhat altered form.

Urge Early Neely Action

At the final session of the Allied directors last Thursday, resolutions were adopted renewing the unit's endorsement of the Neely Bill, and petitioning the House interstate and foreign commerce committee to report the bill out promptly, to have it passed in the current session. In other resolutions the directors asked distributors to ban licenses for screenings of their 16mm pictures in competition with their 35 mm customers; protested the use of screen stars on radio programs; and asked regional units to cooperate with a survey being made on parking problems by Yale University.

The organization previously had criticized distributors' selling terms on outstanding pictures; listened to an attack on present business practices by Abram F. Myers, who expressed faith in the Neely Bill; heard him declare that exhibitor witnesses for the Government, in its New York anti-trust suit, would be protected by the Government; and criticized radio giveaways, among other things. A large part of the session was devoted to a discussion of how the Neely Bill could be aided, on the line of campaign its opponents probably would take, and how to defeat them.

BILL WILL PASS 2 TO 1 IN HOUSE, SAYS COLE

Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied States Association, arriving in New York Monday from the board meeting in Washington, predicted that the Neely bill would be reported on the floor of the House late in the spring and that it would pass by a two-to-one vote.

Should the House interstate and foreign commerce committee decide to forego hearings, Colonel Cole believed that House action would be taken earlier.

Passage of the bill would create "great expansion" in the industry, he said, drawing a parallel with the breaking up of the Motion Picture Patents monopoly and the subsequent period of growth experienced by the industry.

Regarding an arbitration system, Colonel Cole said he believed that a feasible setup could be brought about if the distributors would sit down with independent exhibitor representatives and agree to "fair representation" on the boards for independent exhibitors.

Labor Problems Aired

The labor "threat," whereby a labor dispute thousands of miles away, as in Hollywood studios, may now involve a small exhibitor, was another topic. It was emphasized that Allied was looking into the legality of the theatre closings caused by a labor dispute not involving that theatre, and probably would try to enlist the aid of the Department of Justice.

The board also considered the effect of the expiration of the master pact with the Alexander Film Company, and appointed a special committee, headed by Arthur Howard, to study screen advertising as a special subject. The committee's finding will be reported to the board, and a renewal of the Alexander agreement, which expires March 1st, may be sought. The agreement with Alexander had been in effect since 1935.

The board reelected Colonel Cole president, Mr. Myers chairman and general counsel, and Charles H. Olive secretary. It elected Herman A. Blum financial secretary, Martin G. Smith treasurer, and the executive committee was made to comprise Colonel Cole, W. A. Steffes, Sidney E. Samuelson, Martin G. Smith, Jack Kirsch and M. A. Rosenberg. Ray Branch is to appoint a committee to work out convention details, it was announced.

Attacks Federation's Stand

Mr. Myers' warning to organized labor was a sidelight of the meeting last week. It was based upon the expressed opposition of the American Federation of Labor to the Neely Bill (the C.I.O. favors the bill, it is said); and Mr. Myers said the AFL opposition pointed at what seemed to him "an unholy alliance." He added:

"Certain leaders have succeeded in propelling organized labor into industry politics on the side of the motion picture trust. How this came about can only be surmised . . . but I want to call your attention to the use being made of the unions—not only those connected with the motion picture business, but all affiliated with the AFL—in fighting the Neely Bill."

The American people do not favor such a policy; they, on the whole, favor the Bill, the board chairman proclaimed.

Mr. Myers, departing to other subjects, praised Warner Brothers' "new sales attitude," and "hoped other companies would improve on the Warner formula." Without a code they could easily, he indicated, grant some of the relief they wanted to grant under a code.

Mr. Myers was to issue a statement this week clarifying the board's stand on "excessive" selling prices for "big" films, under an understanding at the meeting last week. At the time, the distributor policies in regard to the recent big pictures, one of which asks a 70 per cent percentage, were assailed, as out of line with fairness in business practices.

In considering the city for its annual convention, which is expected in late May or early June, the directors considered Chicago, Atlantic City, and Detroit, and decided on Detroit. Jack Kirsch, leader of the Illinois Allied, had asked the convention for Chicago.

Steffes Ill

W. A. "Al" Steffes, leader of the Northwest Allied and the "stormy petrel" of exhibitor politics for almost two decades, and a member of the board of directors, was taken ill last Wednesday, in the midst of the annual National Allied States Association directors meeting, and hurried to the Providence Hospital, Washington, where he is expected to be confined for five weeks.

Police To Censor Films Not Bearing Code Seals

The Los Angeles City Council, which by a vote of 10 to 4, ordered preparation of an ordinance giving the Police Commission censorship authority over films and stage plays last week, indicated this week that all pictures having the Production Code Administration seal would not be included in the province of the Commission's powers if the measure is passed.

Opposition to the plan was led by Councilman Earl C. Gay, who said: "This bill is a direct slap at the motion picture industry and if we who govern the city which is the home of such an industry pass such an ordinance, we will find it moving away. New York and San Francisco would welcome such an industry move."

The Cameo theatre, New York, has obtained an injunction restraining the New York State Board of Censors from interfering with the showing of the Hungarian film, "Life on the Hortobagy." A hearing was set for Friday in supreme court.

The Bureau of Police and Fire in Providence, R. I., this week promised reconsideration of its action last week in denying a license to the Playhouse theatre for the presentation of burlesque.

Agents Challenge Board's Election

Challenging the results of the first bargaining agency election it had obtained since its organization, the motion picture division of the Theatrical Agents, Managers and Treasurers Union was granted a hearing on Wednesday, in the New York offices of the New York State Labor Relations Board. Decision was reserved.

The vote in the Endicott circuit, held two weeks ago, went against the union.

The union, composed of "front office" personnel, is endeavoring to organize all houses in the New York area. It announced on Tuesday that it had obtained a contract with the R & M Amusement Corporation, for the Bronx Opera House, setting wage scales, a closed shop, and working hours.

Monopoly Charged

Meanwhile, as the officers of the American Federation of Musicians conferred this week and last, in Miami, preparatory to a national convention to be held later, officials of the Department of Justice in Washington said they had received charges of monopoly against the federation. The complaint source was not disclosed; but it was understood, by observers of the scene, that the charges were made by radio broadcasters.

In Hollywood, the Screen Publicists' Guild and producers were still debating certain clauses of the bargaining contract.

Hollywood producers will insist that studio unions relinquish their ten per cent wage increase, granted over producers' protests last fall, when producers' and labor representatives meet on February 15th, in that area, for a reexamination of the whole studio labor question, according to Joseph M. Schenck.

In Hollywood, the representatives of the studio cameramen, sound men, and projectionists, have reached a tentative agreement on jurisdiction, with Pat Casey, producers' labor contact.

Service Employees Protest

Last week, in the same area, the Building Service Employees International Union, one of the unions which benefited from the general ten per cent wage increase given to most studio unions, went before the National Labor Relations Board local office and filed charges of unfair labor practice by the producers.

Final returns of the Screen Actors' Guild secret balloting on the amendments to the bylaws in which extras will have new rights, were in the unit's offices Monday. Approval was almost unanimous.

In Houston, last week, C.I.O. projectionists lost their court plea for a temporary injunction against servicing of the River Oaks Theatre by A.F.L. projectionists. There will be another hearing, in February on the additional plea for a permanent injunction.

In Omaha, Howard Jackson was elected business agent of the projectionists' local 343, and R. L. McIntyre, president.

In New York, Jean Muir, acting secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists, queried New York State labor leaders on "What is a good union member?"

The guild will begin organizing the San Francisco area on February 20th, it said this week. Election of local officers will be the first move.

Local 306, New York, won a victory this week over the Empire State Operators' Union, when the state labor relations board ruled that the former's agreement with the Arion theatre, Middle Village, Long Island, was valid. Empire had protested the agreement, which requires dismissal of its men, and substitution of Local 306 men.

"GRAPES OF WRATH"

An Editorial Viewpoint

THE motion picture version of "Grapes of Wrath", anxiously looked forward to by advocates of the Left and timorously awaited by others who view with concern the adaptation of material of this sort to the screen, has just opened at the Rivoli theatre, New York City.

Both groups will find in the Darryl Zanuck production grounds for their alternately anticipated anxiousness and apprehensions. The picture is a new and emphatic item of evidence in support of the frequently repeated assertion in these columns that the entertainment motion picture is no place for social, political and economic argument. It is a stark and drab depiction of a group of incidents in human misery, told against a chaotic jumble of philosophic and sociological suggestion and argument.

The suggestion and argument are the creation of John Steinbeck, author of the story. The producer is simply the translator of what, or some of what, he found in the story. That Mr. Zanuck and his collaborators did very well indeed with what they set out to handle is graphically demonstrated throughout the production. The screen narration by Nunnally Johnson is a creditable effort. The directorial genius which John Ford has stamped upon a considerable number of American productions is here again conspicuous. The mistake is not in the execution for screen purposes of the Steinbeck story. It is in its selection in the first place as material suitable for the screen.

The audience import of the picture—inevitably because of the subject matter upon which it was based—becomes a demagogic preachment. If the conditions which the picture tends to present as typical are proportionately true, then the Revolution has been too long delayed. If, on the other hand, the picture depicts an extraordinary, isolated and non-typical condition and tends to persuade an audience that it is typical, then no small libel against the good name of the republic has been committed. One contemplates with little pleasure, indeed, the impression of these United States and our government, of, for and by, which this subject may create in other countries. This dilemma is in no sense an unique creation of this picture. It is the inevitable result of attempting theatrically to deal with problems which the necessities and limitations of the medium render impossible of factual, analytical and faithful treatment. It is this very shortcoming of the medium which makes it so attractive to those who wish to stampede the public emotionally rather than lead it rationally. It is because of this that the propagandists seek so ardently to make the screen their soapbox.

It may well be said that the producer of this subject exerted himself shrewdly in the selection of incidents from the original story and in the treatment of them. Much of the coarseness, vulgarity and all of the filth and obscenity have been chipped away. But it may be wondered why in the first place such an unpromising field of material was prospected. The answer perhaps is a situation of reaction rather than initiative. Pressure has been heavy and unrelenting. Mr. Zanuck, while issuing a series of fine popular entertainments, probably had the term "escapist" hissed so often in his ear that he finally—and we hope reluctantly—decided to give them that which they like loosely to label as "significant". This he has done and well done.

There remain, however, to be measured the consequences to the screen and the consequences to reasoned judgment on those problems—political, social, economic and religious—which the screen play, guided by the heavy and designing hand of John Steinbeck, treats with.

Ticket Brokers Charged With Code Violations

Seven brokers and one theatre manager were brought up on charges this week before the Code Enforcement Authority of the new New York City ticket code in the first hearings held by the authority. No action was taken and details of the charges were not made public.

After the hearing, Gustave A. Gerber, who appeared as attorney for several of the agencies, explained that several violations may have occurred in the fight against the code and before the smaller brokers accepted it.

$206,008 Film Taxes Collected in Ontario

The revenue collected by the Ontario Government from film exchanges and theatres in the last fiscal year was $206,008, according to financial reports submitted in the Provincial Legislature. The Ontario Board of Censors collected $110,370 in fees for the examination of films while the revenue from theatre licenses reached $95,136, both amounts being the largest on record.

Expenditures of the Censorship and Theatres Inspection branch for the 12 months were $33,267, the largest item of which was $26,113 for salaries.

MICHIGAN ASKS U.S. TO HALT CASH AIR GAMES, OHIO REFUSES TO JOIN

Cooperative Theatres Executive Says "Pot o' Gold" Is Competition That Is Costing Theatres $1,000,000 a Week

Horace Heidt's weekly radio "Pot o' Gold" $1,000 cash giveaway for Tums' "tummy-pills," presented to the person sitting at home when his name is called on the broadcast, continues to ride merrily on over the air waves the while showmen ride into disputes over the manner and method of attacking what they call one of the worst forms of competition.

"Insurance" Plan

Abandoning, pro tem, anyway, its plan to start a plan in theatres in large sections of the midwest in counter-attack to offset Tums' prize giveaway, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Ohio, led by P. J. Wood, as secretary, this week took exhibitors to task for their lack of cooperation.

Furthermore, the Ohio ITO declined to support a petition filed by Cooperative Theatres of Michigan with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington to rule such games of "unfair competition" off the air.

Some owners, however, are going in for participating insurance plans, as proposed by Mr. Wood. An owner in the combination, which collects a per seat fee weekly from participating theatres, agrees to pay the $1,000 to any patron who is in his theatre at the time Tums selects the patron as its $1,000 winner—Tums, of course, paying only when the person so selected is at home at the time of the radio drawing. The combination insures the owner for the $1,000.

200,000 Seats Required

"The average exhibitor represents a paradox," said Mr. Wood. "He constantly complains about outside competition, yet refuses to apply an expedient when offered," in commenting on his failure thus far to obtain the required quota of 200,000 seats necessary to put into effect his proposed insurance plan. "Unless we raise $6,000 at three cents per seat as the initial deposit, we will have to abandon the plan."

The plan was discarded by the circuits, according to Mr. Wood, because "of the fear that such a campaign would call attention to the broadcast of people who now do not have any knowledge of it. If this is true, I shed tears for the thinking apparatus of those executives in charge of operation of the affiliated theatres."

Michigan Circuit Acts

The Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan started a campaign to obtain federal intervention to eliminate "Pot o' Gold" and other similar money giveaway radio programs. Thomas McGuire, public relations director, filed a formal protest with the Federal Communications Commission and held that the programs violated Section 316 of the anti-gambling section of the Communications Act. He also wrote, "Any program which does so much harm as this program does to theatre owners is not of public convenience or necessity and should be taken off the air."

Representative Rudolph Tenerowicz called the exhibitors' plight to the attention of Congress, on the instigation of the Michigan owners, inserting scores of letters in the Congressional Record from exhibitors protesting cash air giveaways. In Mr. McGuire's letter to the Congressman, it was charged that Tums' "Pot o' Gold" is costing theatres $1,000,000 in admissions every week it is being broadcast.

The theatre group is attempting to organize a drive among exhibitors to make similar protests. Mr. McGuire wrote Mr. Wood of the ITO of Ohio many other advertisers might adopt a similar type of program as the "Pot o' Gold" broadcast and a great competition would be built up.

Mr. Wood, in his reply, objected to the methods adopted by the Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan, urged that exhibitors "sell" their shows, and added that theatre men conduct "gambling programs" and hence should not resort to the courts over "radio gambling programs."

Join in Opposition

A number of exhibitors in Ohio have banded together to launch their own "Pot o' Gold." Approximately 60 Cleveland subsequent-run theatres on Tuesday began offering a double award. The trustees in charge are P. E. Essick, John D. Kalafat and Harry Greenberger. The Washington circuit, operated by M. B. Horwitz, has its own award system. The Schine circuit with 33 theatres in 17 different Ohio towns also has an independent campaign against the NBC radio show; $1,000 will be awarded to anyone attending a Schine theatre when his or her telephone number is selected by the Tums' program

One independent exhibitor—Ed Ramsey, operator of the Plymouth theatre (220 seats) in Plymouth, Ohio (1,600 population)—has announced that he will match the Tum's $1,000 award if any of his patrons miss winning while attending his theatre.

Meanwhile F. E. Williams, an attorney of law at Saint Louis, urged Mr. Woods to adopt legal means to combat the radio broadcast and gave an opinion supporting the stand of the Michigan group. He wrote: "Instead of fighting one lottery by setting up counter lotteries as you propose to do, I suggest that you make an attempt to go to the root of the matter and invoke the criminal law against the broadcasting of the offering of prizes dependent on chance by the sponsors of the Tums program."

"These lotteries are specifically prohibited by the U. S. Code 1934, Title 18, Section 336. The Radio Commission and the postoffice department have been very careless about letting lotteries through, but this does not mean that the courts and the United States District Attorneys will not enforce the Federal Law when reputable citizens demand such enforcement," he wrote.

Mr. Williams characterized the plan of counter-prizes one that only would institute a "never-ending" fight.

A Founder Passes

EVER more rapidly run the sands for the founders now as the motion picture enters its sixth decade. The passing of Mr. Henry Norton Marvin removes one of the foremost and most distinguished, a person of grace and culture—erudite in a day when erudition was rather rarer than now.

As the dominant member of the K. M. C. D. Syndicate (Koopman, Marvin, Casler, Dickson), from which was derived the American Mutoscope Company, which became the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, Mr. Marvin observed much of the amusement trade and its trends which gave him painful concern.

"I observed," he remarked to your editor one reminiscent day, "that our first release, Joseph Jefferson in his classic role of 'Rip van Winkle,' did not do very well, but when we issued 'Girl Climbing Apple Tree' we had our first hit."

It was Henry Norton Marvin who made a director of an actor known as Lawrence Griffith—D. W. G.—much against that actor's fear he would be a poor director and lose employment. Biograph, with nearly ten years behind it, was even then best of the producers, expanding its capacity with Griffith's promotion.

Mr. Marvin was most important in the technological affairs of the Motion Picture Patents Company, and his impress is deep upon all the archives of the strife ridden years—1896-1914. He was one of the first, if not the first, advocates of self-regulation in motion picture production.

His contribution was concluded many a year ago. Through all his years of application his name appeared in print but rarely. He worked for his industry, his company, and its product and its stockholders with a fidelity which might well have been a more controlling example to his contemporaries and some of his successors. To him the screen owes no little of its better tradition.

Toronto Trade Unit Headed by Taylor

Circuit and independent theatre officials and film distributors have been elected to offices in the Toronto Board of Trade Film Section for 1940. PRODUCERS SPENT $2,470,000 FOR 494 STORIES DURING 1939

Purchases Only 54 Fewer Than in 1938 but 156 Less Than Total Purchased in 1937; Big Drop in Recent Months

Story purchases by Hollywood for 1939 declined six per cent below 1938, with purchases for the year reaching 494, as compared to 546 bought in 1938, and 648 purchased in 1937.

On Average $5,000 a Story

Using the generally accepted average expenditure of $5,000 a story (with many individual purchases running far above or below this figure), Hollywood in 1939 spent approximately $2,470,000 for new screen material as compared to the $2,730,000 spent in 1938 and the $3,240,000 spent in 1937.

Originals purchased in 1939 totaled 307, and of 494 properties acquired, accounting for 60 per cent of the total bought, the remaining 40 per cent being divided into books and magazine stories, accounting for about 30 per cent, while the number of plays bought was 39, slightly less than 10 per cent.

A comparison of the sources of material, excluding original stories, for the last three years follows.

	1937	1938	1939
BOOKS	104	143	101
MAGAZINES	79	57	57
PLAYS	75	30	39

Among the more outstanding purchases made during 1939 were, in January, Victor Hugo's novel "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" purchased by RKO from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which at that time owned screen rights; "Old Maid" a stage play by Zoe Atkins who sold the screen rights to Paramount and from whom Warner Brothers purchased the story as a vehicle for Bette Davis; "The Underpup," a magazine story by I. A. R. Wylie which was bought and produced by Universal starring the new singing star Gloria Jean.

Other Top Purchases

During February MGM bought the Rachel Crothers play "Susan and God"; Paramount purchased the O. Henry short story "The Double Dyed Deceiver"; RKO bought the Robert Sherwood play "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" at a reported price of $275,000 one of the highest prices paid for screen material.

In March Katharine Hepburn acquired the screen rights to Phillip Barry's play, "The Philadelphia Story". This was reputed to be the first instance in which a stage player bought the screen rights to a legitimate play. Meanwhile Paramount bought the rights to Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed" and "The Road to Mandalay." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at this time bought the series of Nick Carter detective stories numbering about 800 books as possible screen material.

Preparing for the 1939-1940 product season various producers in May bought many of the best selling novels and stage plays. Included in these purchases were Robert Sherwood's "Road to Roam," for which screen rights were purchased from Pathe and the Phyllis Bottome novel "The Mortal Storm" both purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer while the George Kaufman-Moss Hart stage play "The American Way" was purchased by Max Gordon for release through RKO. At the same time Twentieth Century-Fox purchased John Steinbeck's novel "The Grapes of Wrath," at a Maurice Maeterlinck's play, as a vehicle for Shirley Temple.

Films Make Stars, Says Roach, So He Builds Both

Producer Tosses War Gloom, Suggests Player Apprenticeships

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

HAL ROACH'S artisans are scoring "1,000,000 B. C." and he says he believes he's got a great picture, in large part because it's fundamentally a motion picture, not any other kind. He hasn't decided yet whether "Of Mice and Men" will whet audience appetite for more of the same but feels that his studio did a good production job on it, is satisfied with the box office news about it. He'll make six pictures for United Artists release in 1940-41 and names five of them familiarly, adds that he intends to keep the sixth commitment open in readiness for that unpredictable production opportunity always so sure to present itself. "Of Mice and Men" was one of those. None of the five pictures named are in the John Steinbeck vein. There is, however, a "Mrs. Topper."

Star or Picture

It is less of his program than of his policy, however, that Hal Roach talks this sunny afternoon in his knotty-pine office, and he tells not merely what this policy is but also how he came by it. It derives from a set of deductions which, he makes you feel, must have been equally evident to any other student of box office looking at the industry scene as long and steadily as he. Then you realize these are few, and that few of these few are as free as he to proceed in pursuit of a policy independently arrived at.

One object on the industry scene to which the Roach eye was attracted the other week was the listing in this publication of the names of the 10 stars who, by the evidence of exhibitors' box office ballots, drew the most persons into theatres. Now, none of these stars are strangers to Hal Roach, nor their records. Mickey Rooney, for instance, was once a Roach employee. He went into the Hardy Family series and the Hardy Family pictures made history and Rooney. Tyrone Power's fame dates from "Lloyds of London."

Four for Stardom

Four players now under contract to Hal Roach are in line for a particular and permanent kind of stardom. One or two more will be. They are not box office dynamite at this writing. They will star in Roach pictures, nevertheless, supported by the strongest players to be had. Named in this connection are Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor, a top half dozen others. This, says Mr. Roach, is how stars are made.

Lon Chaney, Jr., son of a great actor and heir to his talent, is one of the Roach quartet of contractees figured into the Roach plannings. John Mature, whom you'll be seeing in "1,000,000 B.C.," is another. John Hubbard and Carole Landis are on the list. It is the Roach plan to build stars for Roach pictures and select pictures for Roach stars, thus dispensing with the common practice of lending and borrowing talent, the error of diffusing the individuality of product and personnel.

It is not alone upon your list of money making stars, of course, that the Roach policy is based. There is, says he, a definite change of consumer attitude. The day when "who's in it?" was the primary question, and "what is it?" the secondary, is past, according to his summing up, and the questions now are reversed.

There's no provision in the Roach plannings for dire war consequences. He doesn't expect any. There weren't any, he says, in the last war. Overseas populations got preoccupied with martial events temporarily, then returned to the theatres, encouraged by their governments. They're doing the same thing now.

Nor will television, if it comes, bring disaster to the motion picture; on the contrary, "television will be one of the greatest boons the motion picture ever experienced, as a new source of talent." Every telecast, he explains, will be the equivalent of a screen test of everybody in it and with television, no scout need be sent, only a phone call and wired ticket.

Furthermore: "We're a herd species. I've got a projection room in my house as complete and modern as any theatre in town. I have a boy and a girl who can show their friends any picture they want to see. So we all go out to the movies.

Technological Needs

No, the industry hasn't much to worry about, externally, says Mr. Roach. It could do with some changes internally, however, particularly on the technological side. For example, he points out, a good many of the mechanical processes might be progressed with more swiftly in the direction of refinement and simplification; they are unwieldy and prohibitively expensive. And Mr. Roach himself is an investigator in the field of mechanical means to artistic end.

He would like to see some progress made, likewise, toward the accomplishment of third-dimension motion pictures, or reasonably accurate imitation thereof, and toward perfection of a means for obtaining true color.

Hal Roach's first job in the motion picture industry paid him a dollar a day plus carfare and lunch. That was as an extra. When he got to hiring talent instead of being it, he had to pay his players $3 a day. Two of them were Gary Cooper and Janet Gaynor. He and they wanted so badly a chance to "get into pictures" that the wages didn't discourage them. They did all right. He says the world is still full of young folk who feel the same way about it, but they can't get in. There are rules now to protect the talent which got here before the rules were passed, and he thinks that's quite all right, too, but pretty tough on a youngster who hasn't got the price the rules exact.

"If ever an industry needed an apprenticeship this one does," says Mr. Roach. "You've got to get 'em in front of a camera and let 'em do something. It ought to be arranged so that a beginner can and must register for a year's apprenticeship."

Blaze of Showmanship Attention by Distributors and Exhibitors Marks Debuts of Four of Hollywood's Showcase Films

Four new motion pictures from Hollywood, labeled by their respective distributors as being among the top crop of the second half of the season's releases, were sent out this week to exhibitor customers with a blaze of showmanship attention of the "world premiere" spotlight variety, in the following order of their public appearance:

"The Blue Bird," a colored reproduction of Maeterlinck's fantastic play, by Twentieth Century-Fox, opened on Broadway last Friday evening, at the Hollywood theatre. A showman's review appears on page 50.

Review in January 13th issue, page 36.

"The Blue Bird"

The premiere of the Darryl Zanuck production of Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird" was held at the Hollywood theatre on Friday night. Many Twentieth Century-Fox executives and ranking men in other companies, as well as well-known civic figures, attended the opening. A delegation headed by Darryl F. Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors, came from the Coast for the "Blue Bird" and the "Grapes of Wrath" premieres. Others who came from the Coast were Gene Markey, associate producer, and his wife, Hedy Lamarr.

Among those present at the "Blue Bird" opening were S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox; Will H. Hays, Jesse Lasky, Ernst Lubitsch, Barney Balaban, Mr. and Mrs. Colvin Brown, Herman Wobber, Spvros Skouras, Charles Skouras, Edwin L. The Andre Kostelanetz program on February 2nd will be dedicated to "The Blue Bird". Full color advertisements will appear in a number of national magazines. The local advertising at the three premiere cities will run approximately 2,800 lines in each metropolitan newspaper. Special posters, window displays and editions of the Maeterlinck book are other features of the campaign.

"Abe Lincoln"

RKO Radio enlisted all of official and social Washington for its opening of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" Monday night at the RKO Keith in the nation's capital.

Sponsored as a benefit by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington the premiere combined the brilliance of a Hollywood first night with the aura lent by the presence of the President's wife, cabinet members, supreme court justices, senators and congressmen, foreign embassy staffs, and Army and Navy officers. The program girls were debutantes, sub— and post—, and the audience ascended the social ladder from there. Led by the newspaper women, society organizations of the city had been active for weeks in ticket sales and advance publicity counted into the thousands of lines, culminating in a special edition of the Times-Herald distributed as the audience departed after the showing. The house was a sellout at $2.50.

Raymond Massey, star of the picture was introduced from the stage with Ruth Gordon and Mary Howard, who play Ann Rutledge and Mary Todd Lincoln, by Katharine Brooks, president of the club. Also on hand were Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, producers of the film; Robert Sherwood, the author, and John Cromwell, the director.

Arriving celebrities were interviewed over WJSV and a reception given by the club at the Hotel Raleigh following the performance was broadcast over a 47 station NBC Blue hookup. A number of other dinner and cocktail parties preceded and followed the showing of the picture.

RKO executives in attendance included A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern and Canadian sales manager; Nat Levy, eastern district sales manager; J. J.

"WRATH'S" START BREAKS RECORDS

"Grapes of Wrath's" first box office performance on Broadway broke the all time opening record at the 23-year-old Rivoli theatre. After the press preview Tuesday night at the Normandie theatre, the Twentieth Century-Fox picture opened Wednesday morning at the Rivoli, and the theatre temporarily had to stop selling tickets at 10:15 AM, when a second box office was rushed to the lobby to help accommodate the ticket buyers for the second showing. The picture broke all opening day records since the house opened in 1917. It did a gross of $9,500, beating "Modern Times".

BILL BARS UNION DISCRIMINATION

The New York Senate has passed and sent to Governor Herbert Lehman the Perry-Flynn bill prohibiting membership discrimination by labor unions because of race, color or creed. The measure would extend to theatres, music halls, concert halls, circuses and other places of public entertainment and amusement any prohibition against refusing admittance which now applies to hotels and restaurants in the state.

About 1,200 members and friends of the 69th regiment attended the New York dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria In addition to the guests of honor already announced others were Herbert Hoover, Will H. Hays, who also was a speaker, and Governor Herbert H. Lehman. The program was broadcast over WJZ and the Blue network of NBC from 9 to 9:30 P.M. On Thursday stations WNYC, WMCA, WINS and WEVD presented transcribed programs of the dinner ceremonies.

Pat O'Brien and Colonel William J. Donovan, wartime commander of the regiment, appeared over 68 stations of the CBS network on Tuesday night. Other radio tieups with the picture were: WEAF last Friday; WOR on Monday; most of the local stations carry announcements of the arrival of the guests from Hollywood; WNEW on Monday; over the Mutual system on Monday afternoon.

Jack L. Warner, James Cagney and Pat O'Brien were met at the station Monday by officers of the regiment, the band, newspaper men and a large crowd. Wayne Morris and Jeffrey Lynn led a delegation of Hollywood correspondents who came to New York by plane.

Albert S. Howson, director of censorship for Warner Brothers, addressed 400 members of the Woman's Forum Friday at the Roosevelt Hotel on the "Fighting 69th." The organization is comprised of officers of various city Federation Clubs.

Governor Culbert L. Olson accepted an invitation to attend the "Fighting 69th"-Rainbow Division dinner at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles. A number of Los Angeles radio stations plugged the dinner, including WECA, KHJ and KNX.

Warner Brothers have announced that the picture will have 365 simultaneous openings during the week of January 26th. The large number of simultaneous dates has been arranged to take advantage of the Rainbow Division dinners all over the country on January 24th.

"The Fighting 69th" opens at the Strand theatre on Friday, January 26th.

Skouras Convention

Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, and a number of circuit executives, left New York Wednesday to attend the annual conference of division managers opening Monday in Los Angeles. Among those attending will be Charles Skouras, head of Fox West Coast; Bud Lollier and William Leris of that circuit; William Powers, chief film buyer; Ed Zabel, film buyer, and John Healy, assistant to Spyros Skouras.

MAJORS TURN TO PRODUCTION PLANS AND NUMBERS FOR NEXT SEASON

Several Large Companies Announce Same Number as This Year, Despite War; 20th-Fox Fox Aims at More Roadshows

Tangible evidence that Hollywood today stands better off on long-range planning of product and quantities came from virtually every one of the large companies this week —war or no war.

Twentieth Century-Fox said Darryl Zanuck, its production chief, was discussing adoption of protective contractual clauses to halt exhibitors' withdrawing of "worthwhile" pictures before reaching the end of their box office possibilities. The company will have more roadshows, 14 coming up with budgets of $1,000,000 each.

Paramount may have fewer pictures next season, but Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans the same number, around 52, likewise Universal, with 43, and Republic, 52.

Meanwhile the majors' studios in Hollywood continued to strengthen production forces. Warners this week signed Frank Capra, and Universal took on Frank Lloyd.

Zanuck on Fox's Plans

Darryl F. Zanuck, head of Twentieth Century-Fox production, arriving in New York last week to attend the world premiere of "The Blue Bird," said the company may have to resort to protective contractual clauses to halt the practice of withdrawing high bracket pictures from theatres while they are still doing business. He discussed the advisability of stipulating longer playing time in film contracts wherever possible if the domestic market is to compensate for the loss of revenue from abroad and mounting production costs. This, he said, is the opinion of producers on the coast.

Mr. Zanuck said that pictures can be made anywhere, but "good films can be made only in Hollywood," in answering questions concerning New York production possibilities.

More roadshows will come from the company this season and next, Mr. Zanuck said. In this category he mentioned "Lillian Russell," "Brigham Young" and "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"Lillian Russell" will run three hours and 15 minutes and will be given special sales handling at higher than usual percentages. It is budgeted at more than $2,000,000, the largest negative cost in the history of the organization, he said.

Fourteen films on this season's program are budgeted at a million or more, he continued, and next year's budgets will be comparable. "Jesse James" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" were the biggest grossers the company ever had, both doing about the same business.

Mr. Zanuck said that the big films have been given longer playing time by first runs and a number have been played as single bills, citing that "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was played singly in 95 per cent of the country.

Radio contracts of all Twentieth Century-Fox players have been purchased by the company, except that of Don Ameche, he said, adding that while the company opposes the indiscriminate air appearances of its stars, its policy is to make full use of radio to exploit selected films.

Air programs will continue to feature players in highlights of their films unless production schedules prevent. As an example of the policy, he pointed to the "Little Old New York" exploitation on the "Good News" program Thursday night.

GOLDWYN WILL FILM "THE LITTLE FOXES"

Samuel Goldwyn last Saturday bought the film rights to "The Little Foxes," Broadway stage hit by Lillian Hellman. Broadway reports are that the producer paid $100,000. William Wyler will direct. Mr. Goldwyn, however, will first produce "Black Gold".

Mr. Goldwyn last week served two weeks' notice on his studio employees; this, however, was described as routine procedure between production—the studio is now completing "The Westerner." However, all publicity men were pared from the Goldwyn staff, except Jock Lawrence. Distribution of the film is still pending.

Mr. Goldwyn's suit against United Artists, in the name of his producing company, for $54,559 with interest, was transferred last Friday from the New York supreme court to the United States district court in New York City. The sum is claimed as his producer's bonus.

Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman, who arrived in New York at the same time as Mr. Zanuck, said that the war situation in Europe is reducing the company's gross at the rate of $7,500,000 a year. In the last few weeks the domestic gross has improved, he said.

Mr. Schenck said that the producers would not be averse to permitting some of the companies to ask for a reduction when the 10 per cent increase granted studio unions last fall comes up for arbitration February 15th.

Fewer Paramount Films

Production of fewer pictures for the 1940-41 season will be considered by Paramount at home office conferences, Y. Frank Freeman, studio head, said Monday on his arrival in New York from the Coast and New Orleans. Mr. Freeman said that the matter of making fewer pictures next season would be decided in New York this week.

The number of pictures will probably be between 40 and 44. It was 60 to 62 this season.

The studio head was accompanied from New Orleans by E. V. Richards, executive of the Saenger Circuit and member of the Paramount board. Mr. Richards has been asked to sit in at the product conferences, but said that due to pressure of business at his own office his stay in New York would be very brief.

T. Keith Glennan, Paramount studio operations manager, is in New York for the conferences.

Besides his "Hopalong Cassidy" series, Harry Sherman will produce some "high budget" pictures for Paramount next season.

MGM Plans 52

Howard Dietz, director of publicity and advertising for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, returned to New York last week from a three weeks' trip to the studio where he saw new product and planned campaigns.

World premieres of two pictures have been set, "Young Tom Edison" February 11th at Port Huron, Mich., which figured in the inventor's life, and "Northwest Passage" at the Pinney theatre, Boise, Idaho, February 20th.

"Northwest Passage," in color, will get a big campaign, with $150,000 to be spent in national magazine advertising. The picture is the story of Book One, "Rogers' Rangers," of the best-selling novel, and a picture may be made of the second part. Release is scheduled February 23rd.

The exploitation program for "Young Tom Edison," Mr. Dietz said, will be the largest ever devised by MGM.

The story of Edison's life and achievements were found to be so big that it was divided in two films, with Mickey Rooney playing young Edison in the first, which leads into the second, "Edison the Man," in which Spencer Tracy will have the title role. The first film will be nationally released in March, the second in May.

"I Take This Woman" has been remade in part. It features Hedy Lamarr and Spencer Tracy. It will be released February 2nd.

"Broadway Melody of 1940," to be released February 9, he compared to "The Great Ziegfeld."

Mr. Dietz also commented on "Shop Around the Corner," Ernst Lubitsch production; "Congo Maisie," featuring Ann Sothern, and "Strange Cargo," with Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, to be released March 1st.

MGM plans 52 features for next season, the same number as scheduled for the present season's release, said Louis B. Mayer, in charge of production, who arrived Tuesday from the West Coast for a week of conferences at the home office (Picture in Pictorial Section).

Regarding production in New York, Mr. Mayer said: "I will produce anywhere Nicholas M. Schenck wants me too. Certainly, good pictures can be made in the East. They are not necessarily confined to Hollywood. Some of our finest pictures last season came from England."

Mr. Mayer said the company has no plans to produce in New York.

He will see "The World We Make," stage play, which MGM has purchased for a Norma Shearer vehicle, and two or three others which are under consideration for films. MGM also recently purchased "Philadelphia Story," in which Katharine Hepburn is starring.

Universal Plans 43

Universal will schedule 43 features for production next season, the same number as this year, Nate J. Blumberg, president, and William A. Scully, vice-president and distribution head, said this week on their return to New York from a two weeks production conference at the studio.

The company has signed Frank Lloyd, in association with Jack Skirball, to produce top budget productions. They will make six.

Joseph H. Seidelman, Universal vice-president and foreign department head, left New York this week for a six week business trip to Mexico and Central America.

Universal's current schedule consists of 40 productions of its own and three which it was to distribute for Harry Edington. Mr. Edington, after delivering one, was released from his Universal commitments to take charge of production of the higher budget pictures for RKO. Universal expects to replace from another source the other two pictures which Mr. Edington was to have delivered.

Next season Universal plans to produce seven Richard Arlen-Andy Devine pictures, seven westerns and four serials.

On the company's starring list for the new season will be Bing Crosby, Marlene Dietrich, Deanna Durbin, Loretta Young and Gloria Jean, among others.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal board chairman, who participated in the production conferences, returned to New York by plane on Sunday.

Capra in Warner Deal

A deal is expected to be signed this week whereby Frank Capra and Robert Riskin will produce their first independent picture for Warner release, with the Warner company to provide the financing.

The deal applies to one picture only, "Life and Death of John Doe," an original by Richard Connell and Robert Presnell. William Holman, formerly Columbia studio manager, will be associated with Mr. Capra and Mr. Riskin as general manager. Production is to start about the middle of April.

Warners will range their 1940-41 product from a minimum negative cost of $350,000 to $2,500,000, it was said this week by Jack L. Warner, production head, arriving in New York from the coast to attend the preview of "The Fighting 69th."

Increasing of expenditure at the studio, he said, is in accordance with the policy of complete "B" picture elimination so that maximum grosses can be attained. "Exhibitors don't want them, and the public doesn't want them. The easiest thing in the world is to turn out 100 "B" pictures a year. At the Warner studios we are too serious to waste time on them."

The studio, he said, is concentrating on comedy and action, "solid entertainment of a type that made the screen what it is today and what it is intended to be." He estimated that production costs have increased 300 to 400 per cent in the last four years.

The number of historical featurettes on the company's schedule will probably be increased. The program will be set when Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, arrives in Hollywood from New York February 12th.

"Tree of Liberty" Deal

Columbia and Frank Lloyd Productions last Wednesday signed an agreement, providing that the producer-director will make "Tree of Liberty" for the distributor. Mr. Lloyd will make the film before joining Universal under his new contract with that company.

RKO Still Has Welles

Orson Welles will produce, to completion, "Heart of Darkness" for RKO, George Schaefer, company president, said in New York last week, before leaving for Hollywood. Mr. Welles' contract with RKO remains unchanged, he said.

Mr. Schaefer and Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales, left New York for conferences at the studio with Harry Edington, Lee Marcus, Joseph Nolan, and other production chiefs.

Howard Benedict, who launches his first production for the company, "Curtain Call," late this month, also has been assigned to produce "All This And More."

The company has bought "Inside Track"; it is a story by Howard Nostrand.

Helprin and Silverstone Posts

Morris Helprin and Emanuel Silverstone have been appointed American representatives of Gabriel Pascal, British producer for United Artists, in the same capacities in which they now serve Alexander Korda, UA partner and also a British producer. Mr. Helprin will be advertising and publicity head, and Mr. Silverstone in charge of sales.

ROOSEVELT BIDS YOUNG EXECUTIVES TO FILMS

James Roosevelt, head of the newly formed Globe Productions and vice-president of the Goldwyn Studio, speaking at the anniversary banquet of the Portland, Ore., Junior Chamber of Commerce Sunday night, lauded Ted (Theodore) Roosevelt Gamble, named Citizen No. 1 of Portland, saying that in their brief acquaintance he was indeed glad to call him both cousin and friend, and pointed to "Ted's" record as a showman. Mr. Gamble is manager of the Broadway and other J. J. Parker theatres in Oregon.

The son of the President said that the example set by Mr. Gamble should encourage other young Americans to become associated with the theatre and film industry, and predicted a bright future for those who could point to a "job well done."

The Portland visit was the first of a series of meetings with exhibitors planned by Mr. Roosevelt on a good-will tour, described in the HERALD issue of last week.

John Stahl, producer, arrived in New York from the coast, for conferences on a production deal, with Maurice Silverstone, chief executive of United Artists.

United Artists will have more pictures next year than this, Al Margolies, publicity manager, said in New York, after his return from two weeks on the coast. Charles Chaplin's "Production No. 6" is nearing completion, he said.

"Flotsam," Erich Maria Remarque novel, will be the first production of the newly organized David L. Loew-Albert Lewin production company, it was announced last Thursday. Offices are now located on the Selznick-International lot. The story was purchased from MGM. United Artists will release the picture.

Republic Planning 52

Regardless of war or current conditions, as they may be considered, Republic Pictures is understood to be going ahead with a program of 52 features, including 24 westerns and four serials, about the same as this year. M. J. Siegel, production head, returned to the coast after conferences on the 1940-41 program at the New York home offices.

Bernard Vorhaus, formerly a director at the company studios, will return shortly, as a producer, it was said. Vorhaus has been directing "The Courageous Dr. Christian" at RKO.

Rudy Vallee, recently associated with Republic, as associate producer, is to spend three months at the studio to familiarize himself with procedure, before receiving his first assignment from the home office, it was learned this week. "Hit Parade," starring Frances Langford, and possibly Mr. Vallee, will be his first production, and is scheduled to begin in mid-April.

Work at Republic studios on "Dark Command," its "big-budget" picture, will be resumed on February 1st, it is reported. "Lady from New Orleans" is scheduled to start in March. There will be a Bob Seton series of six westerns.

Screencraft Pictures

J. S. Berkson and B. H. Mills, former Republic franchise holders in Albany, Buffalo, and Detroit, has been organized to distribute, nationally through state rights exchanges. It already has obtained "War Angels"; six Tim McCoy westerns; and six Thrill-O-Dramas.

Darneille in New York

George J. Darneille, vice-president of Cartoon Films, Ltd., has joined the staff of General Film Industries, Inc., the New York subsidiary of General Film Company of California.

GN Officers Report Deals to Trustee

Financial deals of Grand National Pictures with Educational Pictures and Arcadia Pictures were reported this week to Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr., by former officers of the company. The transactions under which Educational received 1,100,000 shares of $1.00 par common stock in return for reissue rights and trade names were described by Harold Saxe, GN comptroller; George Blake, secretary and Norman C. Nicholson, general counsel. Educational rights and trade names had a book value of $43,233 but were worth the amount paid, according to the witnesses. On the schedules filed by Grand National the Educational properties were estimated in value at $1,068,922. The estimate was attacked by attorneys for the creditors' committee.

It was also reported at the hearings that Grand National had assumed Educational's debts totaling $235,888.

Another transaction treated was a deal with Arcadia Pictures in which Grand National obtained a $15,000 loan. Also discussed was a $25,000 loan from the National City Bank. Joseph Dannenberg, attorney for the trustee, tried to prove a connection between GN and Arcadia. The fact was brought out that a number of GN directors also served on the Arcadia board.

According to Mr. Nicholson Grand National was not in a position to meet debts as they matured at any time during 1939. Mr. Blake was questioned on two mortgages on Western Studio equipment.

Seven pictures have already been returned to producers and a number of other producers have filed applications for the immediate return of their pictures. E. W. Hammons, head of Grand National, was to be called at a hearing later in the week.

Mr. Hammons this week moved to the Paramount Building, occupying a part of the suite formerly occupied by Educational Pictures. Mr. Hammons is planning to return Educational to operation and is contemplating the resumption of short subject production.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

RKO ORGANIZATION IS COMPLETED; TRUSTEE BOWS OUT TO NEW BOARD

Schaefer Continues at Helm as New Management Files with the Secretary of the State of New York

Precisely seven years to the day since the beginning of its corporate and financial reorganization, the Radio - Keith - Orpheum Corporation, on Friday, along about noon, will emerge from federal court control, when representatives of the court-appointed trustee, the Irving Trust Company, will turn over to the management, in the home office at Rockefeller Center, New York, all assets, securities and documents, on court order.

Proceedings Began Jan. 26, 1933

It was on the morning of Jan. 26, 1933, that the corporation entered into reorganization proceedings, after three years of financial difficulties growing out of the general depression on the outside and a depression-within-a depression within the motion picture industry. The long proceedings of reorganization that followed brought many changes, in ownership, in management, in policy and operations.

The Radio Corporation of America was the owner at the beginning of the reorganization. The Rockefellers entered later as an important creditor, and Floyd Odlum's Atlas Corporation bought a half interest in the company from RCA. The company, too, emerges with George J. Schaefer at its helm, as he has been for some 12 months.

Moving rapidly in recent days, from the countless delays over seven years brought about by the intricacies of legal, corporate and financial remoulding, actions by minorities and whatnot, the new management last week went to Albany to file a statement of designation to do business in New York State for Radio-Keith-Orpheum, which corporation was chartered in Delaware.

The Setup of Shares

The statement of designation submitted to Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State, listed a share setup of $8,000,000 in one dollar shares of common stock and 130,000 of one hundred dollar shares of six per cent preferred. RKO's official agent was Prentice Hall, Inc., of 90 Broad-Street, New York, which filed the papers bearing the corporation's signature as signed by William Mallard, as secretary.

It was last Thursday, in New York, that William Bondy, federal judge, directed Irving Trust Company, reorganization trustee, to turn over to the revamped Radio-Keith-Orpheum all R K O assets in its possession.

In the court order, the trustee was asked to give the assets to the reorganized company on Friday. The order also directed Chemical Bank and Trust Company, Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company and City Bank Farmers Trust Company, trustees of various R K O indentures, to turn over to Irving Trust all collateral securing bonds issued under the indentures.

The new company will pay in full all claims allowed in the reorganization proceedings and also a final $50,000 installment due on the $6,000,000 issue of six per cent gold notes.

Funded Debt Limited

The new company will not be permitted to acquire more than $3,000,000 in funded debt as long as any of the 130,000 $100 preferred shares remain outstanding. Unsecured creditors, with allowed claims totaling $12,222,669, will receive 1,222,669 shares of the new common.

J. C. JENKINS ILL OF HEART ATTACK

"Jaysee" Jenkins, field representative and columnist of Motion Picture Herald, and its predecessors, for thirteen years, was seriously ill this week following a heart attack, in his home town, Neligh, Nebraska.

Mr. Jenkins—John Curtis Jenkins—who on February 28th will be 82 years old, joined the field staff of Quigley Publications thirteen years ago. His homespun observations on independent exhibitors and their problems appeared weekly in successively, Exhibitors Herald, Exhibitors Herald-World and Motion Picture Herald, until illness curtailed his field activities.

A last-minute amendment to Judge Bondy's order of last Thursday authorized the trustee to withhold $64,625 in addition to $20,000 provided in the original order. This sum will be available to the Chemical Bank and Trust Company and its attorneys for allowances to be given them.

Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas Corporation, stated that no other important step remained except the granting of final allowances. In response, Judge Bondy requested attorneys to make their applications "modest" in amount.

In the issuance of the 8,000,000 shares of common stock and 130,000 preferred, the Bankers Trust Company will act as agent. Atlas has picked up 249,272 shares of the new 500,000 share issue. Atlas will pay $645,816, less the underwriting fee of $.25 per share for the stock. RKO will receive about $1,400,000 on the stock issue.

692,000 Atlas Shares

Atlas will hold a total of approximately 692,000 shares, including those held by its subsidiary, the American Company and those held in association with Lehman Brothers. RCA will hold about 673,500 and Rockefeller Center about 663,500. In addition to those holdings, Atlas will have about 53,000 shares of the new RKO preferred which is convertible into common stock and RCA will have about 44,855 shares of the preferred.

The U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission will study and make recommendations on all applications for final allowances in the RKO reorganization proceedings, Marlin Gale, attorney for the S.E.C., said at last Thursday's hearing before Judge Bondy.

Mr. Gale urged Judge Bondy to postpone applications of the Chemical Bank and Trust Co. for a final allowance of $38,125. plus $4,966 expenses, and for its attorneys, Wright, Gordon, Zachry and Parlin for $25,000. The S.E.C. was desirous of studying all applications at one time, he said.

George W. Alger, special master also applied for an allowance. Mr. Alger who has received interim allowances of $34,500 asked for an amount to be fixed by the court. No delay on his application was sought by the S.E.C.

Price, Waterhouse Co. has been allowed $4,800 as compensation for an audit of RKO books for 1938, under an order signed by Judge Bondy.

RKO was incorporated as a holding company Oct. 25, 1928, principally to acquire two amusement holding companies, Keith-Albee Orpheum Corp., a large circuit operator, and F.B.O. Productions Inc. (now RKO Radio Pictures Inc.), a producer and distributor of motion pictures. Subsequently, its producing, distributing and exhibiting facilities were expanded through acquisitions. The company now controls directly the following subsidiaries:

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Pathe News Inc., RKO Proctor Corp., RKO Midwest Corp., RKO Orpheum Corp., RKO Rhode Island Corp., Union Hill Corp. and Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp.

Merrill, Treasurer

It was announced last Friday, from the office of George Schaefer, president, that at the next meeting of the board, W. J. Merrill would be nominated for election to the office of treasurer of RKO. At the board's last meeting, on January 10th, Mr. Merrill was elected a vice-president.

For the last four years, Mr. Merrill has been connected with RKO, serving the last year as assistant to President Schaefer. Previously he had held major executive posts with various large companies, as vice-president, controller and director of Royal Baking Powder; vice-president and treasurer of Great Island Holding Corporation, vice-president and controller of W. and J. Sloane, and others.

He is an alumnus of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and started his business career in the West.

At a meeting of the boards of directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and B. F. Keith Corporation, last Thursday, Malcolm Kingsberg was elected executive vice president. He will continue to serve as vice chairman of the board of both corporations.

The board of directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation has declared a dividend, out of operating surplus, of $1.75 per share on the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1937, payable on April 1, 1940, to the holders of record at the close of business on March 15, 1940.

Heywood Broun Estate Set at About $10,000

Heywood Broun, newspaper columnist, who died December 18th, left an estate estimated at $5,000 in real property and "not over $5,000" in personal property. His will was admitted to probate court in Stamford, Conn., this week. According to the petition, which was executed in New York on November 6, 1936, his widow, Mrs. Constance Madison Broun, and his son by his first marriage, Heywood Hale Broun, are to share in the estate, of which Morris Ernst, New York attorney, was named executor.

Plans for a Heywood Broun Memorial Meeting, to be held February 12th at the Manhattan Center, New York, under the auspices of the Newspaper Guild of New York, were announced this week. Mr. Broun was president of the American Newspaper Guild.

FURTHER DIFFICULTIES FOR FILM SHIPMENTS

Shippers Give Britain's Blockade System Six Weeks' Trial; Orders Divided Among Ships

With the American government demanding the right of freedom from interference with neutral commerce and with the British enforcing an absolute blockade, all film shipments from the United States are meeting further difficulties. Last week the U. S. State Department lodged a strong protest against the practice of holding up United States mail. Great Britain has always made its own rules on inspecting ships—the United States went to war on that back in 1912, but the protests of the State Department have had certain beneficial effects in relaxing blockade restrictions and film are expected to benefit along with other types of shipments.

British System Tested

Massce and Co., New York, principal film shipper to foreign lands, are giving the British "Navicert" system a six week's trial from last December 15th through this month. The "Navicert" is a certificate issued by the British Consul here stating that the shipment is not contraband. In theory a "Navicert" should expedite shipments through the British blockade. The film exporters are seeking to determine if the "Navicert" is worth the $2 which must be paid for each shipment. Consolidation is not permitted. Further, the United States government has stated that it would refuse clearance papers to any ship that made "Navicerts" obligatory for all shipments carried. That would be, the State Department decided, undue interference with United States commerce. If a ship carried cargoes covered 100% by "Navicerts", it should be permitted to pass through inspection with no difficulty.

"Navicerts" at present appear to have little advantage as far as film shipments are concerned according to Massce & Co. because up to now only one film shipment has been held up. This shipment was destined for countries beyond Italy but was delayed by the Italians. The film shippers do not know the reason for the delay, nor does the British Consulate.

The Latest Plan

The latest plan worked out for expediting shipments is that the steamship companies arrange with the British Government so that the ships are allowed to proceed to their ultimate destination and not be held up by the blockade or brought to England. When the destination is reached the British Naval attache at the particular embassy or consulate of that country inspects the cargo and has the Captain set aside whatever part of the cargo which needs careful examination.

The British inspection system, as exercised in the first months of the war, was found not altogether satisfactory even from the British point of view. Many steamers were brought into Gibraltar for inspection. But this being a military post, there are no facilities for storing any contraband that may be found and the delay in making inspections at that port aroused many neutrals, particularly the Italians whose ships were constantly being stopped and delayed by the English.

As far as film shipments are concerned the most difficult country to supply has been France. Only about one ship a month leaves this country for France. Massce & Co. is trying to work out arrangements for reshipping film to that country. Film shipments have not reached pre-war normal but the companies are trying to get as much film as possible shipped to Europe. To obtain greater safety shipments often are being spread over several ships so that if anything happens to one not all the film is lost.

Harold J. McCord, chairman of the Film Editors Section of the Academy Technicians Branch, and Edmund D. Hannan, president of the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, have appointed members representing these organizations to the Joint Committee handling the film editing award selection.

Wanger Sees Screen as Greatest Social Factor

Walter Wanger at his election last week to the presidency of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences said that there are 8,500 creative artists in Hollywood and an 85-million weekly theatre attendance and both have more in common than mere entertainment. "The screen is the greatest social influence, expanding as well as interpreting the American way of living to the whole world," he said.

In speaking of the Academy Mr. Wanger said: "The Academy is the only institution in which actor, director, writer, technician and producer members function as individuals, irrespective of their economic or studio affiliations."

The Academy board, in tribute to Frank Capra, who was drafted as first vice-president after he declined to seek the office of president for the third term, credited him with "divorcing the Academy from economic matters," stressing the cultural.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Rapf Report

Sitting behind the blond wood desk in his office on the third floor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's administration building, Harry Rapf, showman since his start in minstrel shows in Denver, more than a quarter century ago, this week discussed showmanship and its latest manifestation, television.

"Indicative of the change in the entertainment demands of the public," says Mr. Rapf, "are the gains recorded in films, books, radio, all of which have put people seeking entertainment far ahead in their demands. Then, too, the producer today meets the new ideas and concepts not only from external contact, but from the young writers and directors with whom he works, matches experience, creates situations."

Cited as typical was "Forty Little Mothers," work on which is scheduled to be finished within a fortnight. As a teacher in a girls' school, Eddie Cantor has a "drastic change in the type of role to which he has been accustomed," according to Mr. Rapf, producer of the picture. Additionally, "world conditions are so upset today that it becomes next to impossible to plan ahead as to subject matter."

Television? "No more competition than radio. Practically the same basic entertainment as films, the material will have to be written, acted, directed and produced by people familiar with visual entertainment. I see it as coming in to popular acceptance within a decade, possibly only five years," says Mr. Rapf, "as part of motion picture entertainment. It is, after all, the same photographed dramatic phase of entertainment, whether projected through the air or on a screen."

Activity

Print orders for RKO Radio's "Isle of Destiny" and Monogram's "Gentleman from Arizona," combined with an unusual volume of short subjects, are responsible for the current two eight-hour daily shifts on a six-day-a-week basis at the cinecolor plant at Burbank, according to a company report.

This rate is expected to prevail for some time to come. It compares with the former single shift and five day week schedule.

LeRoy, Director

Cameras have started turning on "Waterloo Bridge," first film to engage the talent of Vivien Leigh since her triumph in "Gone With the Wind." Mervyn LeRoy, who'll direct it, says it will have something to do with the present war, but more, by way of background, with the conflict of 1914-18, as its characters grow younger with the technique of flashback and the removal of makeup.

Co-starring will be Robert Taylor, star of the LeRoy produced "Stand Up and Fight." But sitting at his desk, facing a row of inter-office communication buttons formidable as the instrument panel of a Boeing bomber, nerve system of the project, the young man (he's just turned 40) tells of turning away from production, his last and temporary love, to direction, his first.

"Directing," he says, "brings the feeling of something concrete to be handled and worked with. Somehow the end of a picture, the finish of all the work, with which one has been associated as producer, doesn't bring quite that feeling of accomplishment and creation."

No believer in any of the current political "isms," Mr. LeRoy thinks no more of the Hollywood hierarchy which sets the title of producer at the head of the list. And therein lies the precedent.

PRODUCTION RISES SHARPLY

Production took an upward spurt this week, with seven pictures finished and nine started, compared to the four finished and two begun last week. Shooting were 25, with 22 being prepared and 65 edited, against the 23 in the first, 19 in the second and 65 in the third category during the preceding week.

RKO Radio and Twentieth Century-Fox each completed two, "The Primrose Path" and "Irene," and "Dance With the Devil" and the second "Hotel for Women" film. Columbia completed "Blondie on a Budget"; Edward Small, "My Son, My Son," and Warner Brothers, "It All Came True."

Work was started on "The Doctor Takes a Wife," Columbia; "Two Girls on Broadway," an as yet untitled Dr. Kildare picture, and "Edison, the Man," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer; "Rhythm of the Rio Grande," Monogram; "Sailor's Lady," "Earth Bound," and "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Enemy Agent," Universal.

Three short subjects were finished, all at MGM, while Columbia and Warners each started one, these being the only two shooting. Being prepared were eight: three by MGM, two apiece by Warners and Columbia, and one at RKO. Being edited were 14, Columbia and Warners accounting for four apiece, and MGM and RKO for three each.

25% OF "TOP-BRACKET" SALARIES GO TO FILM STARS AND EXECUTIVES

Personnel of Several Companies Omitted from Federal Report of 400 Persons in United States on Payroll at Over $75,000

Motion picture company executives and stars composed nearly one-fourth of the 400 persons receiving $75,000 or more in compensation from any one company in 1938, according to an annual listing made public by the U. S. Treasury Department this week. Salaries of several motion picture companies were omitted from the list and it is expected these names will be published later. Nor do the salaries as listed represent actual income, because of the federal and state income taxes, the federal tax alone taking considerably more than one-half of the highest bracket pay.

Reportable Minimum Now $75,000

The revenue law requires the publishing of salaries over a set figure. Until this year all salaries over $15,000 were listed. Last year Congress raised the reportable minimum to $75,000.

Efforts have been made for years by "big business," including the motion picture, to have the law repealed on the grounds that it serves no useful purpose and gives a distorted picture. The sums published are the gross income before taxes.

The impression has been created in the past in some newspaper tabulations that the salaries published were net, but this year several newspapers carrying the story generally gave figures to indicate the amount of tax that is paid to the government on the high salaries. The federal tax alone on some of the top incomes reported runs higher than 60 per cent, not to mention the state assessments.

An indication of the amount of tax paid on the large incomes is given in two tables accompanying the complete list in the New York Journal-American. The approximate federal tax on $200,000 was listed at $97,000; for $300,000, $164,000; for $400,000, $234,000 and for $500,000 a tax of about $306,000. The figures do not include additional state income taxes, nor do they take into consideration personal deductions and legitimate exemptions.

Several Companies Not Mentioned

General comment was made on the fact that through "some technicality" or some "unexplained" point the salaries of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were not published. Other motion picture companies not listed also include: Warner Brothers Pictures, RKO Radio Pictures, Hal Roach Studios and Universal Pictures.

Among the high salaries of Loew's, Inc., and MGM for 1937 were the following: Louis B. Mayer $1,161,753, Nicholas M. Schenck $489,602, J. Robert Rubin $641,123; Arthur M. Loew $356,074 and A. L. Lichtman $147,000. Among the high salaried MGM stars were Greta Garbo $472,499, William Powell $246,110, Robert Montgomery $243,250, Jeanette MacDonald $238,299, Clark Gable $289,000, Joan Crawford $351,538, and Arlington Brugh (Robert Taylor) $173,352. Hunt Stromberg received $265,500 in 1937.

This week's published list includes only salaries, bonuses and commissions totalling over $75,000 from one company. Dividends are not included. In the case of "free lance" actors, though they make over the set sum, their names are not published if they receive less than $75,000 from each of the companies at which they worked. In recent years studios have also made it a practice to "farm out" some leading players. Further, in some instances stars are listed as receiving a salary from one company and appeared in pictures made by another company. In these cases the salary at the other company or companies was less than the minimum $75,000.

MORE TAXES FROM HOLLYWOOD STARS

The Bureau of Internal Revenue collected more than $2,000,000 additional taxes from Hollywood film stars after a ring of accountants was broken up a few years ago, Elmer Irey, chief of the bureau's intelligence unit, told a House appropriations subcommittee in hearings in Washington.

Mr. Irey said 22 film persons were found "who we believed had a real intent to evade the payment of income taxes," according to news accounts of his testimony. He did not reveal their names.

Claudette Colbert Leads Films

The highest paid film personality was Claudette Colbert, in sixth place, in the Government's tabulation and listed at $301,994. Other motion picture salaries were Warner Baxter, seventh, $279,807; Darryl F. Zanuck, eighth, $265,000; Bing Crosby, ninth, $260,000; S. P. Skouras, tenth, $254,500 and Jack Benny, eleventh, $250,000. The 1937 list was headed by Louis B. Mayer.

The top salaries reported for 1938 were not nearly so high as in 1937, though the general trend was up. The number of persons in the motion picture industry with salaries over $75,000 in 1937 was over 200. Even with additions that probably will be made to the list for 1938, the figure is not expected to be much over one-half of that number.

Peace-It's-Wonderful Department:

Colonel William J. Donovan, war-time leader of the old 69th, and lawyer for RKO, received this week the following letter, on the occasion of the dinner, Wednesday evening, of veterans of the regiment and the first public showing of Warners' "Fighting 69th", at the regimental banquet in New York—the letter coming from Father Devine's Negro "heaven":

> "Mr. William Donovan
> "69th Regiment
> "Waldorf Astoria
> "N. Y. C.
> "To the 'fighting' 69th Regiment
> "Gentlemen:
>
> "With arms outstretched we greet the coming of your brave and sturdy men to our wonderful city and with heads held high we ask, even entreat, that you do something about changing the name of your fine regiment. Our august and Heavenly Father Divine believes Peace to be the most cherished possession of mankind and his flock join him in uniting for a common movement for the establishment of Peace throughout the world forevermore.
> "We ask with pleading voice that you eradicate the blemish from the title by which you are known and adopt a nickname associated with everlasting peace.
>
> "With fervent prayers we hope that you will delete the name 'Fighting 69th' and live in eternal Peace and Happiness with the name 'The Wonderful Peaceful 69th'.
> "King of Grace and Paradise Groom."

United Artists took their young Swedish star, Ingrid Bergman, to cocktails at New York's River Club, the other afternoon, to meet the motion picture press. She's 23, and lovely, an orphan reared in the theatre. And to her River Club guest reporters she told many an anecdote of the theatre in Sweden, one of the best of which was how they had to play "Green Pastures" in Stockholm without any Negroes, because there are none, not one, in all of Sweden.

Miss Bergman, in private life the wife of Dr. Peter A. Lindstrom, young Stockholm physician, arrived in New York from her native Sweden only a few days before appearing at the River House. Stepping down the long gangplank of the Italian Liner Rex, she was seen to have slung over her shoulder a contrivance resembling the papoose-bag of our American Indian. In the bag slept a 15-month-old babe, Pia, named after Peter A., father, Ingrid, mother.

Few, if any, foreign film stars arrive at New York's shores carrying a slumbering infant, or any kind of an infant, on their way to Hollywood. Nor did Ingrid wear makeup, or orchids. Darkening war clouds in Sweden kept Papa Lindstrom from accompanying the mother and babe—he's of age for the militaire.

Only once before did she appear in a Hollywood picture, in Mr. Selznick's "Intermezzo," then back to Sweden she went.

When here before, she saw her "Intermezzo" at New York's great Music Hall. "I remember the Music Hall best," she told the New York Post's Michael Mok, "because it was such a large place for such a small film." They say Pia's mother is like that.

All the fluff and frills and swank and pompous stiffness put on by Metro for the big openings of "Gone With the Wind" in Atlanta and on Broadway pales alongside Manager Dave Murphy's "Wind" opening Friday night at Wilmer & Vincent's State Theatre, Altoona, Pennsylvania. Mr. Murphy even had his two projectionists, Charles Brunner and Harold Zerbie, high up in the balcony booth, hidden from all, wear tuxedos, stiff shirts and black ties for his opening.

On the ground that the birth of a horse is news, and a motion picture of the happy event is uncensorable, Danubia Productions, Inc., obtained a temporary injunction against the New York State Board of Censors.

The restraining order, signed at his home in New York by Supreme Court Justice Phillip McCook, is returnable this week. Meanwhile, the production opened Saturday at the Cameo Theatre, off Times Square.

When censors requested the distributor, a Hungarian firm, to submit a print of the film, they were refused. The Danubia Company contended that "A Horse Is Born" is a news event, and, like a newsreel, is not subject to revision or review. The censors thought differently.

In one sequence of its new "Mexican Spitfire," which appropriately enough stars Lupe (Mexican Spitfire) Velez, RKO has Leon Errol playing the part of Uncle Matt. In another sequence he is Lord Epping. And in a third he is Uncle Matt impersonating Lord Epping. They say that the two-and-a-half parts for Errol were worked out to avoid confusion in the minds of audiences. How they confused Errol only he knows.

Mr. David L. Loew and Mr. Albert Lewin announce as their first project of their new United Artists unit, the production of "Flotsam." Anyone suggesting "Jetsam" as a companion piece on a double will be sent to the racks pronto.

Sonja Henie, Fox Film player, the ice skater, another from Scandinavia, also arrived the other day in New York, fresh from better-than-ever box office triumphs the country over, on the public rinks. She arrived for her annual quarter-of-a-million-dollar, ticket-brokers' holiday and ice carnival at Madison Square Garden. Her entrance brought press quotes, many of them, one inferring that she had never, never, fallen with her skates in her professional career. Sonja probably forgot the day, not so many eons ago, when she tumbled while skating for Fox, in California . . . and suffered a bit of a concussion.

The Federal Communications Commission has commented that it would like to see more local programs in the evening hours. Is it possible they, too, are beginning to tire of Mortimer Snerd?

THERE arrived in Hollywood last week an exhibitor who must have 125 features and 300 short subjects stacked in the vaults of his house by September 27 or face the wrath of an irate community.

He is C. H. Code, who operates the only theatre in Nome, Alaska, and this is his first trip to Hollywood.

Mr. Code, an exhibitor since 1912, must have the films there by September 27, date of the arrival of the last boat for the year, for the harbor is blocked for seven months by ice.

If the film is not there, delivery is impossible and the theatre will have no product for the seven months.

On the first boat from Nome in the Spring, the films are returned to the Seattle film exchanges after unloading new product for the Summer months.

Indications of how Nome residents like their film fare appeared some years ago when his theatre burned to the ground. Promised that a new theatre would be erected in less than two months, some of the residents pitched in to lend a hand in building it.

When it looked as though the promise would not be kept, the rest of the town's inhabitants lent a hand, but threatened that they would tear the whole thing down if it were not completed by the time set.

The exhibitor, however, managed to keep the promise and on opening night the patrons sat on benches, held together by far too few bolts.

Having exhibited Paramount pictures since 1912, he visited that Hollywood studio for the first time this week. He disclosed that he screened Adolph Zukor's first film, "Catherine the Great," in his Alaskan theatre.

Mr. Code is an extraordinary exhibitor. He doesn't have to worry about his programs; he can bill them seven months in advance, provided, of course, the last boat to Nome makes it. He doesn't have to worry about competition.

And he can figure out his grosses for any month in the year ahead of time, for he knows approximately how many persons will be traveling through the community on their way from or to the gold fields or trap lines at any given time.

Speaking of sirens, war-and-air-bomb fearing Scotland had a funny thing happen the other day when a siren recorded in a Hollywood film set the entire audience of an Aberdeen theatre scampering to air raid shelters. Attendants at the door heard the siren, thought it a raid warning, shouted to the audience to hurry to cover.

H. I. Phillips reports that he has arrived safe home again after a trip through "Gone With the Wind." He meant to send some postcards, but forgot, loaded down, as he was, with packages of coffee, rum and medical supplies, six boxes of handkerchiefs, several changes of clothing, both heavy and light underwear, a gun and 20 rounds of ammunition, which he took in case Sherman got out of the picture.

The Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Record had one the other day that might be labeled "Did you ever see a cathedral walking?" In a review of the film, "Hunchback of Notre Dame," a line read: "Charles Laughton is not actually the hero of the movie. The real hero is the Cathedral of Notre Dame."

The Blue Bird

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Super - Shirley Temple

You can uncross your fingers and relax, Ladies and Gentlemen of Show Business, for this is a fantasy of a vitally different order. It is also a Shirley Temple picture of a different order, which is a circumstance of even greater importance. It is, further, as fair and proper a test of both fantasy and Miss Temple as anybody could reasonably ask for, a spectacularly thorough test made on such a scale as only a Darryl Zanuck commonly underwrites and he only when the stakes—in this case the screen career of a four-season box office leader whose option comes up for renewal in the spring—are high.

Mr. Zanuck's screening of Maurice Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird" is extraordinary in many ways. It is extraordinary in its magnitude and in the fineness of its detail. It is superlative in its employment of Technicolor and of music. It is superb in its treatment of the spectacular as commonplace and in its preservation of a simple story throughout a gorgeous telling.

Perhaps more importantly, it is a picture in which Miss Temple is again permitted, after a number of deviations from course, to portray an average sort of little girl doing things and thinking thoughts an average sort of little girl does and thinks, saying things a little girl would say in the words a little girl would use. No Shirley Temple picture in which she was permitted this simple liberty ever encountered public indifference. Her return to the type of assignment in which she established an all-time high for sustained box office popularity is the best motion picture news of the week.

Mr. Zanuck and his picked men, associate producer Gene Markey, director Walter Lang, screen playwright Ernest Pascal, quite manifestly entered upon this production forearmed with the mutual conviction that the man who wrote "The Blue Bird" the first time had done a pretty good job. They didn't rewrite him. Quite manifestly, too, they looked back at the record, the fantasy record and the Temple record, and noted certain consequential errors. They didn't duplicate them. They wound up with a fantasy that would be a fine production without Shirley Temple, and with a Shirley Temple picture that would be as fine if it were not a fantasy.

The story of "The Blue Bird" requires no retelling here. The grandeur of this production is not describable without a projector and screen. The film is a delight to the eye, the ear and the intellect, adult or juvenile, and the manner of its making, the keen professional judgment displayed in every aspect of its composition and in the Zanuck decision to produce it just this way at just this time with just this star, is something to make you Ladies and Gentlemen of Show Business glad you are.

Abe Lincoln in Illinois

(RKO Radio)

Pulitzer Prize Play on Film

There are at least two sound reasons for exploiting this attraction to the potential ticket buyer as a filming of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize stage play of like title. One reason is, of course, that the Pulitzer Prize possesses a box office value which might as well be turned to advantage. A second reason is that the production is, not only in subject matter but in staging, performance, effect, and in the personality of its principal player, very much as and what the stage play was, a circumstance it is well to acquaint the customers with in advance.

The film is the work of Max Gordon, stage producer, and it deals with its subject material in the way stage plays do. Direction by the filmwise and proficient John Cromwell is up to his usual high standard. Mr. Sherwood's screen play follows, although Grover Jones is credited with adaptation, stage rather than film pattern and method. The whole is, perhaps, a shade less like motion picture than like stage play, a different kind of thing, in any case, than motion picture audiences are conditioned by habit to expect. Whether this difference will turn out to be an asset or a handicap is, as always, a question for the box office test to answer.

Mr. Sherwood's Lincoln, as has been made known before now to that sector of the motion picture public which keeps abreast of Broadway stage news, is not the Lincoln of the history books which most of the presently active generations read in their class rooms. Mr. Sherwood's Lincoln is a languid, somewhat indolent fellow, gentle and just but not conspicuously noble, brilliant or assertive, whose friends, enemies and wife kick him upstairs into the presidency. The film version of the man is at sharp variance with the general American conception of him. It is possible that this circumstance may be the source of a controversial discussion which, spreading over the country as the picture goes into circulation, will result in the sale of many more tickets than most Lincoln films have caused to be purchased. Other possibilities are self-evident.

The period in Lincoln's life dealt with by the picture is from boyhood to his leave-taking for Washington to assume the presidency. The self directed study by which he is popularly believed to have equipped himself for the office is not stressed; instead, he is represented as overcoming obstacles by force of pressures externally applied. His wife is presented as a stern, ambitious woman who married him with a firm determination to make him president and persisted in it until she had succeeded. There are dialogue suggestions of coming greatness, musically accentuated, and similar foreshadowings of future events, all achieved within the bounds of literary plausibility.

There are several scenes in which Raymond Massey, whose portrayal of the character as Sherwood saw it is masterly acting, quotes liberally from Lincoln addresses. A notable one shows him in debate with Stephen Douglas, excellently played by Gene Lockhart, and there is one in which he declares, "This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it or the revolutionary right to dismember it or overthrow it." A good many of those attending the Hollywood preview seemed to feel it would have been as well to single out certain other of the innumerable Lincoln remarks of record for emphasized quotation at just this time, or at least to surround this one with a helping of quotations somewhat more nearly akin to the sum of the man's public utterances.

Those present at the preview seemed agreed that the picture is first rate artistically, although different from most screen works structurally. It seemed to be a majority opinion that this departure from groove would prove a box office asset.

Grapes of Wrath

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Movie of a Best Seller

Critics, columnists and conversationalists have managed to let the public know quite a lot about this book by John Steinbeck during the long while it's been a best seller. They have exhausted the adjectival vocabulary in its praise and in its damnation, but writers on both sides of the fence have called it daring, significant and controversial, three words not commonly applied to motion pictures but quite as pertinent to this production as to the book from which it has been derived, for the film is an extremely literal and very nearly complete transcription of the Steinbeck work.

It will be recalled that there was quite a stir a while back when word got around that Darryl Zanuck had purchased the Steinbeck book and intended to make a picture of it. Many said the book was dirty and so not for screen use. Others said it was too controversial. A few said it was too drab, too sad. Mr. Zanuck has made compromise with all of these opinions.

Whether these partial concessions to expressed opinion have produced a "successful screen entertainment" is for exhibition experience to answer. This is by all standards the most sustained exhibition of deplorable circumstances ever recorded by lens. That, incidentally, would be one way to bill the film, a unique and informative way, possibly the best way.

The story starts in the picture where it starts in the book, with "Tom Joad" returning from prison to the Oklahoma farm. The film version follows the book literally from that point to the place where the picture stops taking dialogue principally from the Steinbeck text, skipping some minor incidents and skirting others. The family possessions and personnel are placed aboard a jallopy and the journey to California follows. The grandfather dies and is buried by the roadside. The grandmother dies atop the lumbering vehicle and is smuggled, dead, past the California border. The handbill promising work and good wages is proved a liar, and poverty breaks down the family unit, brings despair, desperation, finally crime, flight and, stopping short of the book, winds up with only "Ma Joad" brave and courageous enough to speak the final keynote line, "We are the people." (Probably sticklers for conformity will object to the point of stopping, and to the keynote, but that is something else again.)

Naturally, indeed inevitably, Mr. Zanuck's film, directed by John Ford in that completely competent way he has of handling outdoor subjects, is a melancholy subject. It has been photographed in the flat, newsreel technique. Similarly, the players wear no more makeup than flood sufferers.

Nunnally Johnson served Mr. Zanuck as associate producer and wrote the screenplay.

Mr. Steinbeck didn't write his book for children and Mr. Zanuck didn't film it for the Saturday afternoon trade. The very fidelity with which he has adhered to his text accounts for inclusion of much that does not fit into the accepted conception of family entertainment.

Chip of the Flying U

(Universal)

Western

A Johnny Mack Brown starring western here combines action and an occasional musical interlude, provided by the Texas Rangers, singing and playing in cowboy regalia. Brown plays "Chip," foreman of the "Flying U" ranch.

Supporting Brown are Bob Baker as "Dusty," Fuzzy Knight in the role of "Weary," Forrest Taylor as "Whitmore," boss of the ranch, and Doris Weston as the boss' sister. Anthony Warde plays "Duncan," the heavy. Ralph Staub directed.

"Chip" is sent to the railroad station to escort the boss' sister to the ranch. They are set upon by highwaymen. "Chip" is accused of faking the holdup for "Peggy's" benefit. He decides to quit his job. While he is in the bank a robbery is staged, the banker slain.

The story takes on additional ramifications at this point. "Duncan," a neighboring rancher, has hidden munitions in an abandoned shack on the "Flying U" ranch and is awaiting the hour to transfer them to a boat. At the same time he is trying to get control of the "Flying U."

Wolf of New York

(Republic)

Criminal Lawyer vs. D. A.

Turning temporarily from western melodramas, Republic's latest venture deals with a criminal lawyer and a crooked Wall Street organization. From an original story by Leslie T. White and Arnold Belgard, with William McCann handling the direction, the film is interestingly unwound.

Edmund Lowe returns to the screen as the criminal lawyer constantly defeating the efforts of the district attorney, played by Jerome Cowan. Rose Hobart handles the feminine romantic lead as secretary to the D. A., and James Stephenson portrays the crooked financier.

Convinced of a young client's innocence, "Christopher Faulkner" (Lowe) retires from the practice of law when the boy is sent to the chair on circumstantial evidence. The culprit confesses. "Faulkner" is persuaded by the Governor to accept the position of district attorney upon the resignation of "Cosgrave" (Cowan). "Faulkner" proves who murdered "Detective Nolan" and reveals the head of the swindling ring.

Spy for a Day

(Two Cities - Paramount)

Espionage Comedy

Mario Zampi, producer of the eminently successful "French Without Tears," is here both producer and director, and, also in the role of a sculptor, moulds the hitherto unexploited personality and mimeographic genius of Duggie Wakefield into a new comedy star. After 70 minutes of his clowning, the discerning critics should be able to tell Zampi that "he has something there." The comedy is funny on its own, but it is the fascination of Wakefield, with a naturally comic face and the mannerisms and quick gestures of a Yorkshire Leprecaun, that will start them talking.

Wakefield plays the role of a rustic farmer who, because he is the double of a German spy, is flown to the Fatherland and all but shot when the British arrive. The film has an occasional tendency to linger and at times to wander around unnecessary corners, but it has richly funny moments. Glimpses of English rusticity are interwoven with war flashes from the library.

Wakefield does not yet rate as a top line star on this side but exhibitors here will have no difficulty in selling him as a comedy bet.

The Proud Valley

(CAPAD-ABFD)

British Mining Drama

There is nothing fanciful about this vivid story of the mining towns of South Wales. It is a realistic, dramatic and human slice of life, photographically re-creating the struggles and the idealism, the tragedies and the pride, of the men and women who live by the coal, or die by the decay of the mines. The production has not only an impassioned human sympathy but a conviction of detail unparallelled in British films devised around the subject. Though Negro Paul Robeson is the ostensible star, the real stars are the miners themselves, and the wives who wait.

The material is not unfamiliar, a story of a closed pit and the efforts of a band of miners to get it opened again. Robeson plays the unselfish miner who gives his life in dynamiting a way to freedom for his imprisoned buddies. He does both with simplicity and charm. His deep voice makes the most of "Deep River" and "Land of Our Fathers." Music in every case plays a dramatic or emotional role.

Robeson has grand support from Edward Chapman as the Welsh miner and choral leader who befriends him, from Rachel Thomas as a miner's wife, and others of a cast which seem to live their roles.

Production values are high and the mining sequences are very well devised and staged.

A trade audience in London was obviously gripped by the film, especially by its dramatic and emotional passages. Robeson's singing, too, was liked. A hearty round of applause at the climax indicated that it had registered.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Stars Look Down

(Grafton - Grand National)

Also of British Mining

The first asset to be recorded to the credit of this adaptation of A. J. Cronin's record selling novel is that it is essentially an English subject, as native in its setting and appeal as the coal mines of Durham or the dialect of "Scupper Flats." Realistic drama such as this starts with a natural disadvantage, facing a film-going public notoriously partial to honey, but the scene and the subject matter are familiar, the drama convincingly natural. The climax, a grim and vivid coal face disaster, is one of the most stirring passages yet to have been woven into a British film. This and the repute of the novel will be selling factors for the British exhibitor. For foreign audiences the subject matter may be a little somber, but it is the real Britain, more convincing and more entertaining than the less inspired melanges of Hollywood.

Cronin's original has been adapted in a "free" manner, toning down the more discursive elements. It is the story of a young pitman who discards political aims and the welfare of his class to take up an academic career. Domestic disaster and disillusion with his own brethren undermine his citadel, and when a grisly mine disaster occurs, due obviously to managerial graft, he gives up his scholastic ambitions and devotes himself to Parliament and the betterment of the miners' lot.

Michael Redgrave with an excellently empassioned performance as "David Fenwick," and Carol Reed with sincere and no less empassioned direction of his subject, give it great human power. There is deep emotional strength in Nancy Price's portrayal as Redgrave's tragic mother. Margaret Lockwood, with a direct simplicity which is her bravest asset, makes "Fenwick's" wife a persuasively natural person. Emlyn Williams creates a credible character.

Shown to a trade audience in London, which was obviously moved by the more dramatic passages. There was a hearty round of applause at the climax. Nancy Price and Emlyn Williams probably rated most highly with the post-screening critics.—A. F.

BIOFF DENIES EVADING TAXES

William Bioff, West Coast studio union leader, pleaded not guilty, in Los Angeles federal court, on Monday, to a federal grand jury indictment, charging income tax evasion in 1936-1937. On February 5th the trial date will be set. He posted bond two weeks ago. On February 15th, he is scheduled to appear before the city's police authorities, on an extradition request to California from Illinois, on charges he failed to complete a 1922 Chicago jail term. He has also posted bond on this charge. The St. Louis projectionists' labor leader, John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of Local 143, is scheduled to stand trial on February 5th, in that city, on charges of extorting money from theatre owners in 1937. He was acquitted recently, after three mis-trials, on an indictment charging extortion of $10,000 from theatre owners in 1936.

Westbrook Pegler, columnist whose syndicate articles and research resurrected the Chicago charges against Bioff, directed attacks this week against other labor leaders, citing criminal records, and racketeering. He said William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor was "passing the buck" by denying responsibility for leadership of AFL subsidiaries.

Crime-Doesn't-Pay Sermon

A variation on the racketeering expose instituted by the Crime Doesn't Pay Series is this revelation of criminal action as practiced by what would be called the very best of people, in smuggling feminine finery and jewelry to evade import duties. The two culprits are the wives of a customs commissioner and a candidate for a mayoralty office. One woman is killed when used as a shield by a mobster, and the other not only is sentenced to a jail term but sees her husband's chances for election blasted. A cast of some reputation and ability has been drafted, and includes Neil Hamilton, Lynne Carver, Gertrude Michael and Victor Varconi.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Jiu Jitsu Experts

(Paramount)

Artful Mayhem

The ancient Japanese art of Jiu Jitsu, or Judo wrestling, as a means of self defence is illustrated in Paramount's latest Sportlight. Narrated by Ted Husing and produced by Jack Eaton, the subject covers fully the various grips and stunning blows that can be delivered by the expert to ward off an assailant, with demonstrations by Professor Kuwashima of the New York Judo School. Some of the Professor's feminine pupils also give an exhibition, and a child tries out several holds on Professor Kuwashima.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Pete Smith and Royal Canadian Mounted

Pete Smith goes a bit soft and sentimental in his latest effort, which concerns a miniature eulogy of the work of the Royal Canadian Mounted forces. Taking three embryonic Mountie candidates, Mr. Smith shows some school scenes of their training in a sequence mixture of comic and serious moments. Camerawork, commentary and comedy are in the high grade entertainment style to be expected of Pete Smith and his specialties.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Frankie Masters and His Orchestra

(Paramount)

Headliner

The personable Frankie Masters and his orchestra are introduced in the latest Headliner of the Paramount series. Taking songs in which the word "heart" appears, the orchestra, aided by the singing of Frankie and Marian Francis, plays "Says My Heart," "Heart and Soul," "Peg O' My Heart," "Hearts and Flowers" and "Key to My Heart." A "Gay 90's" quartet supplies humor with "The Curse of An Aching Heart."—Running time, 11 minutes.

Benchley Human Interest

Robert Benchley, who has been exploring practically everything from doctoring to dark magic, this time becomes a sort of psychologist probing inferiority complex. We follow an individual with a well marked supply of "I.C.," as he comes into contact with such know-it-all gentlemen as a bank clerk, a tailor and a hotel deskman. The incidents are so naturally handled that any audience should have a swell time.—Running time, nine minutes.

Three Dimensional Television in Color Forecast at FCC Hearings

Color and three-dimensional effects in television were predicted by E. W. Engstrom, director of research for the Radio Corporation of America-Victor, on Monday, as the second week of the Federal Communications Commission hearings on proposed new rules for television, opened in Washington. The developments depend upon use of frequencies above 150,000 kilocycles, he added.

The testimony at the hearings has been marked by divergent opinions from independent and large manufacturers and broadcasters, the former urging the commission not to set standards now, nor to allow commercialization, because such might "solidify" and hamper independent progress. Mr. Engstrom, this week, thought that the Radio Manufacturers' Association standards, akin to the proposed new rules, would "remove uncertainties in the minds of manufacturers and the public," and that partial commercialization would provide revenue for further research.

His firm is developing a home television receiver which will throw an image four and one-half by six and one-half feet, Mr. Engstrom said. Thomas F. Joyce, of RCA, predicted sales of 25,000 receivers this year.

Major E. H. Armstrong, experimenter, asked the Commissioners not to allocate television frequencies until the frequency modulation system, which he sponsors, has been studied.

Paramount Pictures is partly financing four television stations, of DuMont, Television Products, and Chicago Theatres, the commission was told this week, in other testimony. The television hearings ended Tuesday.

The commissioners visited several television laboratories over the weekend.

The Columbia Broadcasting System will have a television network, and the Philadelphia transmitter still to be built of station WCAU, will be the first link, Dr. Leon Levy, owner of WCAU, said this week.

U.S. TAX COLLECTIONS FOR '39 SHOW GAINS

Two World's Fairs Called Part Reason for Increase in Federal Admission Intake

A slight increase in federal admission tax collections in 1939 as compared with 1938 which, however, might have been attributable in some part to two world's fairs, was reported this week by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, in Washington.

Preliminary figures compiled by the Bureau placed the 1939 revenue at $19,876,311, against $19,661,336 in 1938, but showed that it failed to catch up with the 1937 return of $20,974,031.

For the final month of 1939, the tax returned a total of $1,974,534, which was under both the November revenue of $2,117,644 and the December, 1938, receipts of $2,020,376.

During the year, monthly revenues ranged from $1,384,721 in April, the lowest point recorded after January, 1938, to $2,117,644 in November, the highest figure after December, 1937, and in six different months was under the corresponding figures for the previous year.

The month-by-month return from the levy, as compared with the corresponding period for 1938, was as follows:

	1939	1938
January	$1,564,134	$1,353,415
February	1,503,127	1,659,640
March	1,606,996	1,773,075
April	1,384,721	1,541,517
May	1,605,987	1,394,650
June	1,491,260	1,624,453
July	1,534,249	1,618,813
August	1,513,468	1,425,062
September	1,852,256	1,668,827
October	1,727,931	1,596,367
November	2,117,644	1,985,127
December	1,974,534	2,020,376

While collections from the country as a whole in December were approximately $143,000 under those of November, the Third New York (Broadway) District, which normally provides something less than one-third of the total, showed a decline of more than $79,000, or well over half of the total drop.

Receipts from the district, the Bureau reported, aggregated $610,099, against $689,425 in November. That theatre attendance declined sharply was evidenced by the box-office collections, which were but $506,793, against $621,571 in November, while collections on free or reduced rate admissions were $5,413, against $7,650, and on tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices nothing was collected, against $355 the preceding month.

A good part of the loss in those items, however, was offset by increases in other taxes, revenue from tickets sold by brokers being $11,172, against $10,025 in November; permanent use or lease of boxes and seats $1,038, against nothing, and admissions to roof gardens and cabarets $85,681, against $49,823, it was shown in the report.

Dembow Returns to Paramount Post

Sam Dembow, Jr., has returned to Paramount as a member of the home office theatre executive staff. Mr. Dembow formerly was in charge of Paramount theatre operations following the resignation of Sam Katz, and prior to that was second in command of Publix Theatres Corporation, the subsidiary which, previous to the decentralization of Paramount theatre operations, had as many as 1,800 theatres within its fold at one time.

Mr. Dembow's theatre experience dates back to 1923 when he became associated with the old Herbert L. Rothschild circuit. He occupied numerous sales posts for William Fox companies from 1913 to 1922, and was Pacific Coast district manager for Samuel Goldwyn in 1922 and 1923.

When the Rothschild circuit was acquired by Famous Players-Lasky, the predecessor to Paramount, Mr. Dembow was in charge of the booking and buying of all attractions for Famous Players-Lasky theatres. With the organization of Publix Theatres he was made executive vice-president and was an officer and director in many of its subsidiaries.

Following the decentralization of Paramount theatre operations he became vice-president of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation in 1933 and resigned late in 1934 to become general manager of National Screen Service. He occupied that post until 1937 when he was placed in charge of Fanchon & Marco theatres, a post which he recently resigned.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, announced Wednesday that Mr. Dembow would join the theatre department beginning Monday, and that the duties relating to film buying and theatre operations presently handled by Leon D. Netter will be divided between Mr. Dembow and Mr. Netter. Corporate and general problems of theatre policy, as well as theatre real estate, will be, as in the past, in charge of Leonard H. Goldenson. M. F. Gowthorpe will continue to be in charge of financial problems relating to the theatres and certain phases of real estate and corporate matters.

Stockholders of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville, Ky., have received a dividend of 75 cents a share, the first dividend paid in nine years. The company operates a circuit in Kentucky and Indiana.

ROONEY AND BETTE DAVIS CROWNED "KING" AND "QUEEN" IN PRESS POLL

Tyrone Power and Sonja Henie, Runners-Up in Balloting Among 22,000,000 Readers of 55 Newspapers; Rankings Given

Mickey Rooney for the second time in less than a month has won national star popularity polls.

He was first named last month in the annual poll conducted by MOTION PICTURE HERALD of exhibitors in the United States and Canada, who were asked to name the 10 players whose pictures drew the greatest number of patrons to their box offices during the motion picture year of September 1, 1938, to September 1, 1939. The second poll, conducted by the New York Daily News in conjunction with 55 other newspapers in the United States and Canada claiming a total circulation of more than 22,000,000 was reported Sunday. This was a "popularity" poll, conducted among newspaper readers, who were asked to vote for the "King and Queen of the Movies."

Mickey Rooney was the winner of both polls while Bette Davis, who was sixth in the Herald poll, but second of the feminine players, was the voting readers' choice for "Queen" in the newspaper poll, which was limited to residents of large cities

The Vote Getters

Actual votes received by the winning team were as follows: Mickey Rooney, 38,290; Bette Davis, 68,723.

The following stars ranked second to tenth:

2. Tyrone Power, 36,114; Sonja Henie, 57,749.
3. Spencer Tracy, 33,813; Judy Garland, 27.941.
4. Clark Gable, 32,381; Priscilla Lane, 27,563.
5. Richard Greene, 26,649; Deanna Durbin, 24,229.
6. Errol Flynn, 26,598; Alice Faye, 23,247.
7. James Stewart, 25,832; Jeannette MacDonald, 22,614.
8. Nelson Eddy, 23,576; Myrna Loy, 16,903.
9. Don Ameche, 21,186; Jean Arthur, 13,157.
10. James Cagney, 13,424; Loretta Young, 10,736.

The Runners-Up

Trailing the ten men leaders were, in the order named: Robert Taylor, Gary Cooper, Gene Autry, Henry Fonda, Charles Boyer, Cary Grant, Robert Donat, Paul Muni, Laurence Olivier, and Bing Crosby.

The feminine stars ranking from eleventh position to twentieth, were in the order named: Shirley Temple, Ginger Rogers, Irene Dunne, Norma Shearer, Vivian Leigh, Hedy LaMarr, Ann Sheridan, Barbara Stanwyck, Rosalind Russell and Olivia de Havilland.

Tyrone Power had led the poll most of the week with latest results appearing daily. Bette Davis started in first place at the opening of the poll and held the lead throughout the week with little competition from any actress. Clark Gable crowned "King" in 1937 made way for "King" Tyrone in 1938 and dropped to fourth position with Priscilla Lane in 1939. Sonja Henie who was second with Clark Gable in 1938 held the same position in the 1939 poll.

Comparatively few votes were received by the leaders in some territories, but the total from all the cities elevated them to their final position. Mickey Rooney was elected "King" in only 10 cities of the 42 listed but at the tabulation of the final votes his were sufficient to bring him the "crown." Meanwhile Bette Davis was voted "Queen" in 27 cities of the 42 listed, guaranteeing her position as "Queen."

CARBON RATIONING SCHEME BRINGS IMMEDIATE BRITISH TRADE PROTEST

Exhibitors, Seasoning Patriotism with Cold Fact, Object to Arbitrary Announcement of Plan, Fear Price Increase

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Faced as good British citizens with rationing of the foods they consume, whether it be bacon, meat or butter, British exhibitors now face the immediate prospect of rationing of the light on their cinema screens. From February 1st, direct result of wartime needs and emergencies, a rationing system operates on all carbons. Not only will there be strict limits to the consumption of carbons used in motion picture theatres, but the companies marketing them will pool their entire resources into one corporate reservoir. Prices too, as have the prices of butter and bacon, go up.

Criticism Is Immediate

Facing this emergency measure British exhibitors, not least patriotic or public minded members of the community, have not hesitated to question whether such a system is necessary, but whether too, it is not intended ultimately to benefit the producer and the distributor rather than the consumer or the community at large.

Towards the close of December and on the initiative of the Ministry of Supply, it was announced that a wartime Pool would be formed by and of all the British manufacturers. It would operate from February 1st, this year. It was announced, too, that a voluntary scheme of rationing would be set up and a means of regulating prices during the national emergency established. The four companies concerned are the leading manufacturers, General Electric, Henrion, Morgan Crucible and Champion. The approval and collaboration of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association was sought and given—through the medium of its officers.

All stocks and resources are to be pooled by the companies, manufacturing resources cohesively organized, packing facilities pooled, and manufacturing programs co-ordinated. By this it is expected to meet all wartime requirements and needs.

Exhibitors for their part are expected to give details not only of their normal consumption needs but of their reserve stocks of the lamps in use, and alternative types or sizes of carbons which could be used in the event of a shortage.

Further Discussion Demanded

Before the CEA General Council had met for its first 1940 session it had developed and formed itself into a virtual refusal to agree to the proposed scheme until the matter was further explored and certain points cleared up. And before the General Council itself had an opportunity to consider the situation, much less to approve the officers' action, the Emergency Executive, in which all peacetime committees are incorporated, set up a special Carbon Committee to approach the manufacturers and put before them the exhibitors' objections and point of view. Not a foot of ground is to be conceded if the Committee and the General Council do not agree.

British exhibitors who have found themselves taxed both indirectly and directly as a result of the War, who have found costs rising in more than one quarter, who pay a minimum average of £8 to £10 a month on carbons, and who are alert against any exploitation of the wartime situation against their interests, take a serious view of the situation.

BRITISH SOLDIERS SEE FILMS WEEKLY

British soldiers in France except when on outpost duty see a motion picture a week. The official British Government body in charge of supplying screen entertainment for the troops in France has a staff of 65 operator-drivers covering the western front with film shows for the army. Each show is composed of a newsreel, short subject and feature.

The generality of objection, however, stands behind the details of opposition to this particular situation. They are not opposed, as normal Britishers, to any scheme of rationing in emergency, being convinced that real rationing means an equal opportunity and an equal supply for all. They are opposed despite the wily investments of one or two, to indiscriminate purchase and to hoarding. They object, none the less, to the indecent haste — their own terms — with which the Pool was brought into being without consultation with the consumers association, the CEA.

Price Increase Feared

With a price increase already foreshadowed and threatened they fear, not unnaturally, that the Pool may be used as a lever to further price increases. The cautious comments of the manufacturers, far from ruling out any such possibility, broadly hints at further price increases. No co-operation will be forthcoming if assurances and guarantees against such a development are not given.

The Pool, which on paper does not intend to apply the ten per cent increase until February 1st assured exhibitors that they would carry out all contractual obligations at the old rates. This, it is suggested, has not been done. Manufacturers, the allegation has it, are holding up supplies meanwhile.

These criticisms might not have been possible if the Exhibitors Association, which is the representative consumer body, had been given a chance to serve on the Carbon Pool. For representation thereon the Committee will fight and fight insistently.

This last criticism, and the criticism of "indecent haste" are those most recurrent in the various CEA branches, from Yorkshire to London, and the West Country to the far North. Massing from all sides into a consolidated front of revolt they eventually formed themselves into the phalanx which at the Emergency Committee meeting set forth to battle. Threats, however polite and courteous, from the manufacturers' side, have had little effect in calming the turbulent waters. The mood of scepticism and rebellion is far too emphatic. As it is, most of the exhibitors have registered with the Pool. Eighty per cent is the figure claimed by the latter. Complaints from the manufacturers that those who don't will be considered to have adequate supplies on hand have only served to sharpen the atmosphere. Many exhibitors have given details of their type of carbon in use and details of their requirements. The majority have not given data regarding stocks and supplies in hand.

Hoarding Charged

From the manufacturers' side of the battle have come allegations of hoarding and potential exploitation by exhibitors. Instances have been quoted of exhibitors purchasing supplies far in excess of their needs. One, it is stated, had six months supplies on hand. Another had offered to buy as many carbons as could be supplied, explaining it was his intention to sell them again at a profit when the shortage arose. Such cases, claim the Pool, are against exhibitor interests and it is to prevent them the Pool exists and would operate a rationing scheme.

Unions Take Quota Stand

Labor unions in the industry, banded together under the Film Industry's Employees' Council, whose plea for the retention of the current Quota Act, with a paternal approval of the Credit Bank scheme, has been reported in Motion Picture Daily, have now issued their statement of attitude in the form of a memorandum. It follows closely the lines of the case submitted to the Films Council. The statement of case is said to voice the views of studio and laboratory technicians of all grades, and theatre employees throughout the industry. It is in direct line in major policy with the case as stated by the Film Production Association, the Employers group.

Contending that there has as yet been no adequate reason advanced for a suspension of the Act they plead that it stand as at present. Measures so far floated are described as possibly suitable as safeguards but not as legislative alternatives. Promises by American interests that no artifical shortage will be created are scouted by suggestions that a product shortage is inevitable, and an unanswerable argument for a higher quota. Arrangements made with foreign interests, it is asked, should be made within the Act, not as a substitute.

The Employees, under the impression that foreign monies frozen here will be employed to finance British production, examine the exchange situation, foresee, in the event of a rise in dollar value, all proceeds from the British market being exported to America. Production here, then, would be crippled. They insist therefore that the export of remittances and the production or financing of films are two separate arrangements entirely unrelated to one another. The main points of the memorandum are as follows:

The cost clauses must remain.

Labour safeguards must be maintained.

The treble quota clauses should be eliminated, because, they say, foreign interests will use these clauses to make a few big films of world market value, instead of a number of small ones.

If any control organization be set up to govern the use of frozen credits labour interests must be represented.

Any advisory committee including employers and employed should be set up to ensure proper control of any credit bank.

The bank should finance or assist, exclusively, British independents.

Only British interests should be represented and British personnel appointed.

Employees and technicians of purely British origin should be employed on films so financed.

Labour safeguards should be insisted upon.

Details of expenditure should be filled in and be open to inspection by the Films Council.

The bank should be available to short film producers as well as those who make features.

$300,000 TO NEW YORK FROM CENSORING FEES

Other Legislative Developments in Nebraska, Delaware and in Other States

by DICK CONNERS
in Albany

New York State's fiscal plan to raise and expend $396,700,000 for the year commencing July 1, 1940, was sent to the legislature in Albany Monday night by Governor Herbert H. Lehman. Retention of all present taxes and a "steepened curve" in personal income tax lines were asked, although present personal exemptions, minimum and maximum rates would be retained under the Lehman budget suggestion.

Governor Lehman's budget estimates $300,000 will be raised through the three mills per foot tax on original film licensed for exhibition by the state censors and was, he said, "predicated upon past behavior". The Motion Picture (Censorship) Division actually collected $298,023 in the 12 months ending June 30, 1939, while a year earlier the revenue was $304,073.83.

Pari-Mutuel Tax

The Governor suggested but one brand new tax, that on pari-mutuel betting, which he estimated would net the state $1,000,000 before June 30th, and an additional $4,000,000 in the next fiscal year. This depends on passage by the legislature of enabling laws to govern the "iron men" machines and probably is figured on retention by the state of four or five per cent of the gross "take".

In this connection, opponents of pari-mutuel, including film exhibitors, located near present or contemplated tracks, are apparently hoping to delay an enabling act until 1941. Even some legislators who supported the pari-mutuel amendment want to examine the situation carefully before setting up covering statutes.

Special taxes continued are in connection with corporate, utilities, franchise, bank organization of corporations, personal income, motion picture, unincorporated business, insurance premiums, inheritance and estates, stock transfer, mortgage, motor vehicle, motor fuel, cigaret, alcoholic beverage, beer and liquor licenses, boxing, racing and tax sales.

Ranking high in importance to exhibitors who fear a sales tax impends in the next year, was the Governor's inferential rejection again of this plan. Appropriation of $85,300,000 was incorporated for unemployment relief, $2,600,000 less than last year due to a decline in relief bond debt service. Of this amount, communities would get back $60,000,000 of this money, as the state pays 40 per cent and localities 60 per cent towards home relief expenditures. The Governor's message mentioned the uncertainty as to actual home relief expenditures, due he said to the lack of definite information on the amount of unemployment which will exist in the next 18 months.

Other New York Legislation

Assemblyman James E. Owens, author of the Sunday exhibition bill allowing petitions for motion pictures in several upstate communities, is co-sponsoring a bill with Senator Pliny Williamson, also of Westchester County, which would amend the village law on repair of public assembly buildings, thus: it would provide that a building inspector or other authorized village officer should report whether such structures, or parts, are dangerous to the public, the local board then to serve notice on the owner of lessee with a bill of particulars; the board then, in event of refusal of owner or lessee to comply, to order survey to be made by inspector or architect; and the board then, after a reasonable period had elapsed, the owner or lessee still refusing to rectify condition, to apply to the state Supreme Court for an order determining the building to be a public nuisance. All expenses incurred in connection with the suit would then be assessed against the land on which the building stands.

Another bill in the legislature, by Daniel Burrows, assemblyman of Harlem, would suspend or revoke licenses of owners or operators of entertainment places in which full and equal admissions were not granted to all persons.

Cohoes, whose common council ordinance banned Sunday films, was scheduled to repeal the measure. The Fabian Regent has been opened, on the indicated procedure.

In New York City, a special joint committee of the local film industry has removed the harmful provisions of the City Planning Commission's proposed zoning law. The committee has succeeded in having the law rewritten several times, and will be heard when date is set for a hearing on establishment of particular zones.

Assemblyman Max Turshen, Brooklyn, on Tuesday introduced a bill to restrict Bingo to bona fide charitable and civic organizations formed five years before license application and under control of the Department of State.

Nebraska Chain Threat

Nebraska circuit theatres are hopeful that a widely circulated petition for placing of a graduated chain store tax bill on the 1940 primary ballot, April 9, will relieve them of taxation threat; for the petition specifically states that such a bill should include only chain stores and filling stations. The legislature, thus, would be without power to include theatres, if the petition succeeds in placing the measure on the ballot, and if the legislature takes up the matter.

Pennsylvania Amusement Tax

An amusement tax, to fill relief coffers, may be enacted if a special session of the Pennsylvania legislature, at Harrisburg, is held.

New Mexico Tax

The state's new admission tax is now effective. It is two cents on each ticket from 16 to 20 cents, and running up to 15 cents on each ticket costing $1.25 and more.

San Francisco Restrictions

San Francisco city supervisors last week referred to a committee, an ordinance prohibiting small frame building theatres.

Wilmington Fire Ordinance

The Wilmington City Council last week passed a modified new fire prevention measure, one provision of which permits standing in theatres between the last row of seats and the foyer wall. The original measure prohibited standing in the rear, entirely. The modified permission for standing provides a maximum of one person for every four square feet.

Warners Sign W. K. Howard

William K. Howard has signed a contract to direct for Warner Brothers. He will report to the studio February 1st.

Warners Paying Off Bank Loans

Warner Brothers paid off $2,000,000 in bank loans in the last three months of 1939, reducing such loans made in the year to $4,000,000, though the amount increased to $9,000,000 by an additional financing of $5,000,000 last December.

The financing was explained as part of the company's refunding operations, and the new money has also considerably improved the company's cash position.

The $5,000,000 loan was negotiated December 15th at 4½ percent interest from the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford. As collateral the company pledged the Fairbanks and Sunset studios on the coast, a California ranch, 15 theatres, two commercial properties and an inter-company note of $200,000.

Although first payments on earlier loans made for debenture refunding were not due until April of this year, Warners paid off $500,000 last October and $1,500,000 in December. Payments are next due in October.

On the new loan the company is to repay $250,000 semi-annually from June 15th to December 15, 1941, and $150,000 semi-annually thereafter until 1954. Any sums in default will bear interest at the rate of six per cent.

The loan may be prepaid on six months' notice with premiums of two per cent in the fifth and sixth years, 1½ per cent in the seventh year and one per cent in the eighth year. The company's properties are placed in trust to secure the loan.

A regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ per share has been declared on the Loew's, Inc., preferred stock. The dividend is payable on February 15th.

The board of directors of Roxy Theatre, Inc., New York, has declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable March 1st, to stockholders of record at the close of business on February 9th.

Autry Personal Appearances

Gene Autry, Republic western star, on Wednesday appeared at the Ft. Myers, Va., Horse Show at the invitation of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. On Thursday he attended the opening of the company's film "South of the Border," in which he is starred, at Wilmer & Vincent's Embassy theatre, Reading, Pa. On Friday he will attend the world premiere of Republic's "Village Barn Dance" at the Village Barn night club in New York. On Sunday Autry will broadcast from Washington on his Columbia Broadcasting System program which originates in Hollywood. Mrs. Roosevelt will be a guest on the program. He will also attend the President's Birthday Ball in Washington on Tuesday.

Club Gives $1,150 for Milk

The Kansas City Variety Club has presented the city's schools with $1,150 to provide milk for undernourished school children. The fund was raised from the recent bowling tournament sponsored by the club and the Kansas City Star. A check for $400 was presented to Kansas City, Kan., schools.

FILMS AND STAGE AIDING HALF-DOZEN CHARITIES

Thompson Assures Hoover 10,000 Theatres Will Help Finns; Other Units Active

Plans were made this week by the motion picture and stage industries to help a number of charities, including "Help Finland Days" for the Finnish Relief Fund; the 1940 "Will Rogers National Theatre Week"; the Federation; "The March of Dimes" and other benefits. While the film industry was completing arrangements for making February 17th-18th "Help Finland Days," the New York stage was having difficulty deciding whether to help the Hoover drive or not—union trouble.

Says 10,000 Theatres Will Help

L. E. Thompson of RKO is chairman of the motion picture division of the Finnish Relief Fund and has assured Mr. Hoover that 10,000 or more independent and circuit theatres would cooperate in the campaign (picture in Pictorial Section). Collections will be taken up in lobbies, wherever possible by girls representing Scandinavian organizations and dressed in Finnish costumes. The money collected, with $500,000 the goal, will be forwarded by the theatre managers to Raymond Sawtell, treasurer of the Finnish Relief Fund.

Mr. Hoover sent telegrams to the heads of exhibitor organizations. According to Vincent G. Hart, former member of the Production Code administration and director of the motion picture division of the Fund, the response from exhibitors has been very encouraging. Some theatres already are donating a portion of the gross on certain nights to the Fund.

Saturday night's performance of "Gone With the Wind" in Washington, where the picture opens at Loew's Palace on Friday, has been taken over by Eleanor Medill Patterson, publisher of the Washington Times-Herald. The tickets are being sold to the highest bidders.

Difference on Stage

Although the motion picture industry's efforts to help Finland have met with cooperation from every group, the New York stage has not yet decided on the matter. One group wants benefit performances for Finland; the other for unemployed American actors and actresses. Those opposed to the benefits used the slogan, "charity begins at home."

Herman Shumlin, producer of "The Male Animal" and "The Little Foxes," and Oscar Sherlin, producer of "Life with Father," Will Geer who plays Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road" and seven of the 22 members of the cast of "The Time of Your Life," came out against the plan to help the Finnish Relief Fund, pointing out that American performers needed assistance.

Helen Hayes, who heads the amusement division of the Fund, agreed that charity began at home but held that it should not end there. "When you get in the habit of helping your fellow-man, you don't stop to ask where he lives," she said. Tallulah Bankhead, star of "The Little Foxes," also came out in favor of benefit performances. Actors Equity wants to be sure that all the union members, as well as the actors, donate their services. Opposition to Finnish relief benefits was laid to "Red cunning."

Meanwhile word came from Stockholm that the script for Greta Garbo's first motion picture is to be auctioned Friday for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund.

AD JOB IS WELL DONE, SAYS DOOB

No retail group in the country is a more consistent newspaper advertiser than the motion picture theatre; without resorting to any of the conventional "public relations" or familiar institutional advertisements, motion pictures are doing an exceptional job of utilizing paid newspaper space to keep burning brightly the flame of friendly public interest. So concludes Oscar Doob, director of advertising and publicity for Loew theatres, who was selected by Editor and Publisher to speak for the industry on motion picture advertising, in its annual roundup of discussion on advertising for its editor and publisher readers.

"There are larger space users among retailers," Mr. Doob concedes, "but none more faithful than theatres. Motion pictures as a local classification rank third or fourth among space users in large cities."

Many first run theatres use from 80,000 to 10,000 lines yearly, each, in each local newspaper.

Mr. Doob chides critics of film ads with the observation that the ads seem to be doing the job, despite charges of the lack of dignity, lack of format, over-exuberance expressed occasionally by ad writers of commercial fields.

Will Rogers Drive April 18th to 25th

Major L. E. Thompson, RKO executive, and chairman of the annual campaign for "Will Rogers National Theatre Week," after conferring with Will H. Hays, this week, has designated the seven-day period beginning Thursday, April 18th, for the observance of the 1940 drive.

Collaborating with Major Thompson this year are the executive heads of the five major circuits, Charles C. Moskowitz, MGM; Joseph Bernhard, Warner Brothers; Leon Netter, Paramount; John J. Cohen, of Allied, New York; and Abram F. Myers, National Allied.

Proceeds from the campaign are used for the maintenance of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, and for kindred philanthropies for the needy of stage and screen; and for the aid of local institutions specializing in the care of handicapped children.

Major Thompson announced that the following general sales managers have accepted appointments on the committee representing the distributing companies: Neil F. Agnew, Paramount; Harry Buckley, United Artists; Edward Golden, Monogram; James R. Grainger, Republic; Ned E. Depinet, RKO; Abe Montague, Columbia; William F. Rodgers, MGM; William A. Scully, Universal; Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers; and Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox.

Harold Rodner, Warner Brothers executive, who heads the production committee, leaves for the coast shortly to supervise the filming of the annual short subject, which is shown in theatres throughout the United States during "Will Rogers National Theatre Week." A. P. Waxman is again director of the campaign for Major Thompson.

As in previous years, Eastman Kodak, DuPont, and Gevaert are cooperating by contributing rawstock for the short. Herman Robbins, president of National Screen, is again lending the services of his company to handle the shipment of the prints.

Infantile Paralysis Drive

Eddie Cantor sponsored an hour radio show over the three networks Saturday night to aid the March of Dimes for the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign, with Keith Morgan national chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's birthday.

For the second year members of the Mississippi Theatre Owners Association are cooperating by running trailers, and a number of theatres are having special Sunday shows (regular Sunday performances are banned by a state law). R. X. Williams, president of the MPTO of Mississippi, is chairman of the theatre section of Mississippi's observance.

New York Fund Drive

Merlin H. Aylesworth, former publisher of the New York World Telegram, has been made head of the professional division of the 1940 campaign of the Greater New York Fund. Mr. Aylesworth will be in charge of campaign activities soliciting funds from 2,500 Manhattan business houses, including accounting, advertising, law, graphic arts, publishing firms, music industries, hospitals and educational institutions. Before his association with the newspaper Mr. Aylesworth was president of National Broadcasting Company. At present he is engaged in the practice of law at 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

Spyros Skouras, theatre executive, has accepted an appointment to the Greater New York Fund Business Council which is a permanent body, organized to work with the board of directors in enlisting the support of business and in bridging the gap between campaigns.

$400,000 for Actors Relief

The Screen Actors Guild Gulf-Oil radio show has earned approximately $400,000 for the Motion Picture Relief Fund, according to the Columbia Broadcasting System. Actors and actresses perform on the air show without charge and the proceeds go to the relief fund. Gulf Oil has renewed for the eighth consecutive year its contract with CBS.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

A Bill of Divorcement

(RKO Radio)

Sacrifice to Insanity

A widely known subject, "A Bill of Divorcement" is based on the Clemence Dane stage play, first produced in London in 1921, which opened in New York the same year with Katharine Cornell in the leading role. Two previous film versions have been made, one in 1922, and another 10 years later, the last named starring Katharine Hepburn. Here Maureen O'Hara plays the role of a girl who sacrifices her marriage in order to provide happiness for her mother and peace of mind for her father.

Learning that there is insanity in her family, the girl gives up her own chances of happiness when her father escapes from a sanitarium on the eve of her mother's re-marriage.

Adolphe Menjou plays the role of the father, a part taken by John Barrymore in the 1932 screen version. He has lately appeared in "That's Right, You're Wrong" and "Housekeeper's Daughter." Miss O'Hara has most recently been seen in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

The part of the mother is taken by Fay Bainter, while that of the man she marries is portrayed by Herbert Marshall. Rounding out the cast are Dame May Whitty, Patric Knowles, C. Aubrey Smith, Ernest Cossart and Lauri Beatty.

Dalton Trumbo wrote the screen play, as he did those of "A Man to Remember" and "Five Came Back." Robert Sisk produced and John Farrow directed, having performed similarly on "Reno," "Full Confession" and "Five Came Back." This is Mr. Sisk's first major production.

Release date: May 3, 1940.

Larry Darmour produced and Lew Collins directed, as they did on the latest Holt picture, "Outside the Three-Mile Limit."

Release date: To be determined.

New Moon

(MGM)

MacDonald and Eddy

Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, together on the screen for the first time since "Sweethearts," here appear against such diverse backgrounds as New Orleans in the 1780's, shipwrecks, and life on a desert island. Miss MacDonald is seen as a Parisian belle who has travelled to America to take over a New Orleans estate left her by an uncle. Mr. Eddy's characterization is that of a political prisoner masquerading as a bond servant.

Comedy is provided by Mary Boland and such other exponents of the art as Buster Keaton and Nat Pendleton.

Based on the Sigmund Romberg operetta, the picture will provide such songs for its principals as 'Lover, Come Back to Me," "One Kiss," "Wanting You," "Softly, As in a Morning Sunrise" and "Stout-Hearted Men," all of which already have received public approval.

Robert Z. Leonard produced. He handled the latest MacDonald picture, "Broadway Serenade," as well as such previous MacDonald-Eddy films as "Maytime" and "Girl of the Golden West." W. S. Van Dyke, II, directed, his most recent picture having been "Another Thin Man."

Little Orvie

(RKO Radio)

Boy Gets Dog

Based on the Booth Tarkington stories which have appeared in both magazine and book form, young Orvie Stone's chief difficulties here are centered around the problem of acquiring a dog, against which are raised stern and forbidding parental objections. But, after a series of maneuvers culminating in an attempt to run away, Little Orvie is allowed to keep his dog, which by this time has presented him with puppies.

The screen play was written by Lynn Root and Frank Fenton, who last collaborated on "The Saint in London," also the last picture made by the producer, William Sistrom. Directing his first film for RKO Radio, Ray McCarey has handled "Goodbye Broadway," "The Devil's Party" and "Love in a Bungalow."

John Sheffield, who portrays the youthful protagonist, has appeared in "Tarzan Finds a Son" and "Babes in Arms," as well as in such stage plays as "On Borrowed Time." Ernest Truex takes the part of the harassed father. He recently has been seen in "Strictly Honorable" and "His Girl Friday." The mother is depicted by Dorothy Tree, who appears in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," the cast also including Ann Todd, Fay Helm and the colored actress, Daisy Mothershed.

Release date: Mar. 1, 1940.

Negro Newsreel Project Starts

Claiming a potential market of 1,000 theatres that play to Negro or mixed audiences comprised mainly of the 15,000,000 Negroes in the United States, the Pioneer National Newsreel company has been formed in Chicago to make and release a newsreel on Negroes and their activities.

Dwight L. Jones is president of the company and promoter. Offices of the concern, which has just finished its first issue, will be in Chicago.

Negro activities of all sorts will be featured in the reel, which will be issued monthly for the first six months and then every fifteen days.

Civic, social, business and athletic events of the Negro race will be featured and the showings should serve to improve their conditions, Mr. Jones said.

Editors of negro newspapers are reported to be supporting the idea and to be planning cooperative promotion. Booker T. Washington II, famous Negro leader has voiced his approval of the plan and a movement is underway to get the support of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President.

Nationwide coverage is eventually sought. Currently shots are being made in Washington, D. C., which concern the "anti-lynching" legislation.

Establishment of the newsreel company was aided by the Herman A. DeVry company in Chicago, which will supervise technical arrangements.

de Rochemont Returns

Richard de Rochemont, managing director of The March of Time, Ltd., arrived in New York Wednesday, aboard the S. S. Manhattan, for conferences with his brother, Louis de Rochemont, producer of March of Time.

COURT HITS U.S. IN SCHINE CASE; MAJORS ATTACK TWO OTHER SUITS

Philadelphia Federal Bench Agrees to Rule February 5th on Protest Against Injunction Granted Theatre

The organized motion picture industry this week was well up as victor or aggressor in anti-trust suit attacks against its distribution members, on three counts:

Federal courts denied the United States Government's petition temporarily to restrain the Schine Circuit in New York from further expansion, pending disposition of its suit against the theatre company and major distributors, and allowed the petition of certain of the distributor defendants for a bill of particulars and "a more definite statement."

Philadelphia federal court agreed to rule on February 5th on the majors' charges of unconstitutionality of an anti-trust suit injunction granted last November to the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J.

Certain major distributor defendants moved for dismissal of an anti-trust action filed by Lenrose Amusement Corporation, of New Jersey.

The "Key" New York Case

Meanwhile, in the New York anti-trust action by the Government against the eight largest companies commonly regarded as the "key case" in the whole structure of anti-trust prosecutions, which now number well over 50, the defendants this week estimated they would have their answers to the Government's interrogatories completed by February 15th. On Monday defense attorneys said preparation of the answers was progressing smoothly, and that no extension of time would be asked.

The federal court, meanwhile, granted a third extension of time for the filing of objections by the Government to the defense interrogatories. The new date is next Tuesday.

Regarding pre-trial examination of company executives by the Government in February, attorneys for five defendants with theatre affiliates rejected a proposal to oppose such examinations.

A sixth defendant, Columbia, on Tuesday vacated the Government's notice that it intended to orally examine Harry Cohn, president; Jack Cohn, vice-president, and A. Montague, general sales manager. The application was to be heard by William Bondy, federal judge, on next Tuesday.

The company's fight against the examining of its officers before trial is based on the allegations that Harry Cohn is a California resident; that the Government did not "particularize the general allegations of the complaint" either by bill of particulars or answers to Government interrogatories; that it already had served written interrogatories on Columbia; and that, therefore, there was no necessity for a pre-trial examination.

The Government notice of examination had called for appearance of the Columbia executives on February 5th, which would have made them the first set of major company officers to be so examined, in the present series.

Schine Wins Point

Having had under advisement voluminous affidavits in the Department of Justice suit against the Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., its affiliates, and eight major distributors, since last September, when the anti-trust action was filed, John Knight, federal judge in Buffalo, last Wednesday filed an 18-page opinion in which he denied the Government's request for a preliminary injunction restraining Schine from expanding its chain during pendency of the suit.

BOSTON TRUST SUIT HEARING CONTINUES

The parade of distributor sales and circuit executives to the witness stand, in the two-year-old Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust action against the majors in Boston, continued this week, with the testimony, on Monday, of Alexander Kearney, assistant manager for the Shea circuit.

Among witnesses last week were Thomas Donaldson, of the MGM Connecticut force; John Dervin, with United Artists, in Boston; Richard Dobbyn, of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres; Maurice Goldstein, Boston city manager for Loew's; John G. Moore, sales manager for Paramount; Albert M. Kane, Paramount Boston branch manager; William Erbb, Paramount district manager; Nathan Furst, Monogram Boston branch manager; William Kelly, Universal Boston branch manager; Thomas H. Bailey, district manager for Twentieth Century Fox; Frank Ross, RKO salesman; and Ross C. Cropper, RKO Boston branch manager.

It was considered a major victory for both Schine and the distributors. Judge Knight also allowed several demands for a bill of particulars and a "more definite statement" submitted by Schine, Paramount and Columbia.

The Government had moved for a preliminary injunction restraining Schine from acquiring or operating additional theatres and from opening its closed houses while trial was pending on charges of restraint and monopoly of pictures.

In answer to 18 affidavits submitted by the Government in support of the motion, 59 counter-affidavits were filed by the defendants.

"As asserted by the defendants," the Judge's opinion read, "the buyer or seller has the right to determine for himself from whom he will buy and to whom he will sell, without running counter to the anti-trust law, and no inference of violation is to be inferred by reason of the fact that through the exercise of such right, the difficulties of a competitor may be increased."

The Government sought by injunction to prevent expansion of the Schine circuit, contending that acquisition of more theatres would render more difficult the task of dissolution of the circuit, if ordered.

The defendants opposed, not only on the ground that a temporary injunction cannot be legally granted, but also on the ground that they have in prospect the purchase of a considerable number of theatres from several individuals and that prevention or postponement of these purchases would result in irreparable injury. They also charged that indirect injury would result to them through decreased opportunities of sale.

"No reason is shown why a trial cannot soon be had," Judge Knight wrote.

Embodied in Schine interests, which operate about 150 theatres in five Eastern states, are Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., Schine Circuit, Inc., Schine Theatrical Company, Inc., Schine Enterprises Corporation, Schine Chain Theatres of Ohio, Schine-Chesapeake Corporation, Chesapeake Theatres Corporation, J. Myer Schine, Louis W. Schine, and John A. May.

Co-defendants are Loew's, Inc., RKO, Universal Pictures Company, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Columbia, Warner Brothers, Vitagraph, Inc., Paramount, and Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.

Judge Knight, in allowing 22 demands in an application by the defendants for a bill of particulars from the Government, granted the defendants 40 days after issuance by the Government of a more definite statement and a bill of particulars, to answer such.

Argue Vineland Decree

After calling "unconstitutional" a temporary injunction against the Warner Theatre circuit and the majors, granted to the Landis Theatre, Vineland, New Jersey, last November in Philadelphia federal court, by Judge William Kirkpatrick, attorneys for the erstwhile defendants last week rested their appeal in the United States court of appeals, and awaited decision by the three judges—John Biggs, Jr., Albert Maris, and William Clark—on February 5th.

The injunction's unconstitutionality is proved by its mandatory, regulatory nature, argued William A. Schnader, former attorney general, representing all the major distributors, and Morris Wolf, counsel for the theatre circuit. The injunction ordered the two Warner theatres, in Vineland, the Globe and Grand, and their management, and the majors from whom they obtained product, to cease "discriminating" against the Landis, which had claimed inability to get proper product.

"The decree is designed to regulate the picture business in Vineland," Mr. Schnader said. "It isn't an injunction. The decision deprives distributors of the right to choose its customers, and, under the Sherman act, the only time when it is not lawful to choose customers, is when they would conspire with one another to hurt another customer."

Mr. Wolf, speaking for the theatre circuit, also took the line of argument that the decree was unconstitutional, and charged that the anti-trust laws permit only injunctive relief, not mandatory. He added that the decree was ambiguous.

Senator Harry Shapiro, attorney for Eugene Mori, owner of the Landis, and the Landis theatre, called the early days of the industry a structure of monopoly, and urged the judges to "destroy that monopoly as the courts did in 1916."

Seek Lenrose Dismissal

Dismissal of the $150,000 anti-trust suit by the Lenrose Amusement Corporation, of Newark, against Twentieth Century-Fox, other majors, and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was expected to be sought in United States district court, New York, on Friday, by Twentieth Century-Fox. The dismissal action was to be instituted on ground that no cause for suit has been shown. The Lenrose corporation, owners of an independent theatre in Newark, had sued for $150,000, alleging conspiracy to deprive it of product. Answers to its complaints have already been filed by RKO, Universal, Loew's, Warner Brothers, Vitagraph, and United Artists.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—Had terrible weather for this one but is a honey of a picture. Everyone liked it. Plenty of action and comedy. Played January 7-9.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

BEWARE SPOOKS!: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—As good as any Joe E. Brown picture. Got the laughs and went over good. Business average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 31-January 2.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—Failed to draw on Christmas. It is a very good picture and satisfied everyone. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 24-25.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—Ran this on a double bill with "Unexpected Father." Both pictures are very good and should be single billed, but when your competitor double bills most of the big pictures, guess I have to do the same. It's one of those shows you can stand in the lobby while your patrons hurry out and tell you what a good show they have just seen. Played January 14-15.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—When a long one like this comes along, I run one show only at 7:40 and ballyhoo the fact that there is only one show. This makes people sit and figure it must be good. At present, I could take any old film and draw a crowd that way (but just once). For a small town we have a large capacity, 750, so two shows does not gain us needed seats. I can give them shorts; there is no movement in and out and we are not pressed for time. The picture itself is practically perfect. It contains everything one looks for in any film. It has had a lot of publicity and if you don't do well with it, you had better consider yourself a failure. As far as I can see, everyone except a few senators liked it and they don't come to my place anyway. The second night held up very well. Many of the customers had seen it before but came again. That is always a good sign. There were two sequences where the sound was not too good. Maybe it was the print. Running time, 129 minutes. Played January 11-12.—W. Varick Nevins, III., Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TRAPPED IN THE SKY: Jack Holt, Katherine DeMille—Here's a show that is my idea of a "sleeper." It's much better than most of Jack Holt's recent pictures. Wish I had known how good it was and I would have advertised it stronger. Not a special but a better than average program picture. Played January 5-6.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valerie Hobson—This was a big disappointment. Has good name to draw with but sends them away not very well satisfied. Hard to understand the lingo and story is not clear. Played December 26-28.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A swell little western that was all too short. Too bad that they have graduated Miss Meredith to program pictures as she is excellent in these Starrett westerns. Running time, 55 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING, THE (reissue): Edward G. Robinson, Jean Arthur—This reissue failed to draw. Running time, 93 minutes. Played December 17-18.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N Y. Rural patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Why can't we get more of these in order to be able to throw the red ink out. All power to Warners. Played December 22-23.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Swell picture. Fair business. Give John Garfield a few words to say and a plot as good as this with Priscilla to back him and you can count on a good show. They're in a class by themselves. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 21-22.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Real good. Cagney popular here. Played it midweek but cool weather was bad for us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Played this on the second half of a dual bill and can truthfully say this picture had all the draw. For its kind, very good. Will stand alone on any date. Nice for Friday-Saturday. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 5-6.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Milton, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Splendid picture; pleased most all patrons. Some thought too much baby. The best of this series. Should do excellent business everywhere. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 1-2.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—A flop at the box office. Pleased few who came. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 5-6.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—A wonderful picture. Bad weather cut attendance but those present enjoyed it even though they wept some. Played January 12-13.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Bucked a snow storm on this one but had a few of the faithful Bette Davis fans out in the blizzard. While not as good as "Dark Victory" the few we had went out satisfied. I believe Bette Davis could go on forever winning "Oscars." Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 14-15.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Milton, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Mickey deserves top honors. Nice business on this picture. Wish we had more Mickey Rooneys in pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canado. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Although this one earned its way, I could not see anything else exceptional about it. The story was pretty sketchy and to my notion the only thing that put it over was the enthusiasm of the youngsters in the cast. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 24-26.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Another good, down to earth entertaining picture which failed miserably at the box office. If people think a picture like this or "Meet Dr. Christian" are not worth going to see, I hate to think of the future in store for this business. Your people will like this one if you can get them in and you won't have to hide when they come out. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 5-6.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart, Bobs Watson—Another fine performance by Robinson with good support from rest of the cast. Lockhart especially good in this one also. Our box office results were not satisfactory, however, which was probably due to the Holiday slump we always experience. Running time, 81 minutes. Played December 29-30.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart, Bobs Watson—Good picture but Robinson is not liked and the picture did not do average business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHASER, THE: Lewis Stone, Ann Morriss, Dennis O'Keefe—I picked up this old one to fill an open date and found it very good entertainment and did a nice business on it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, William Gargan, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan—A fine little picture and did good business for me on an Owl Show. Pleased all patrons. Several complimentary remarks. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 13.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, William Gargan, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan—Good picture which failed to draw, probably due to cold weather. I thought it very good entertainment. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—A truly great comedy that more than held its own through one of the worst blizzards we have had in years. Do not be afraid of it for the best play dates you have to offer. It brings Garbo back into the top flight of acting where she so richly belongs. A swell show. Running time, 112 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Margaret Hamilton, Billie Burke—Excellent production. Swell color. Good music. Did only fair at box office account of Christmas date. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 24-26.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—Good picture with fashion show much too long. Failed to draw. Business poor. Running time, 134 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—A little too long but nobody kicked, so what's the difference? Even the men liked it. Didn't think the picture was built for small towns but who isn't wrong sometimes. You'll be surprised when you play it. It's good. Running time, 134 minutes. Played January 10-11.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Milton, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Monogram

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Anne Nagel—Ran this old Mickey Rooney with Jane Withers in "Boy Friend" and they came out in zero weather and packed the show. The best crowd in months and to top it off everyone liked both pictures. Played January 10-11.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

Paramount

BAR 20 JUSTICE: William Boyd, Russel Hayden, George Hayes—Cassidy series popular here. Autry doesn't do all the business. "Windy" popular. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—A very good picture which failed to do business. It seemed that it was too rough for the ladies and they are the best show customers. Running time, 114 minutes. Played December 3.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—As fine a picture as I have seen in a long time. Akim Taminroff's acting is superbly great. Hats off to Lloyd C. Douglas, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard and Paramount for a great picture. Played January 4-5.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Akim Tamiroff, Carolyn Lee—Lovely! Lovely story, lovely cast, lovely direction and ditto lovelies for continuity, photography, Akim Tamiroff, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee, and, of course, Carroll, MacMurray and Jones. The loveliest entertainment between title and finis strips I've viewed for some spell. Lovely business, too. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 14-15.—Berman Shieldes, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams—For an English picture it was very good. The story was exciting and had many good comments on it. By the way, it did a very, very good second and third day business. Running time, 99 minutes. Played December 28-30.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—Not up to "Arkansas Traveler," but still above the average program picture. The name Bob Burns brings 'em in.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—The Hopalong Series are losing out with us. Hardly pay rental. Think the big action pictures are to blame.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SOULS AT SEA (reissue): Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee, Olympe Bradna—This picture did not do business. Too old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Played late, but Bing always clicks here. Crowd well pleased. Played January 5-5.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Republic

IN OLD CALIENTE: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, George Hayes—This Rogers is going to town. Around here they like him as well as Autry or "Cassidy." The picture is okay. Some catchy songs, and George Hayes doesn't hurt it a bit. Running time, 58 minutes. Played December 22-24.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Edward Ellis, Anita Louise—This picture does not have much draw but is one of those surprise pictures and pleased all the patrons. Has a good story and makes a good midweek picture. Don't be afraid to book this one. Played January 2-4.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Gene Autry is slipping. This picture did very poorly. Running time, 58 minutes. Played December 22-23.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

PRIDE OF THE NAVY: Rochelle Hudson, James Dunn—Played this to a very satisfactory box office on week end. Everybody seemed to like it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DAY THE BOOKIES WEPT, THE: Joe Penner, Betty Grable—Personally, I would not cross the street to see Penner in person, but our patrons turn out to see his pictures, which is the important thing to me. This was a typical Penner performance and the cash customers enjoyed themselves in a big way. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 27-28.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockston, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

FIVE SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

New contributors to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department this week include the following:

HARRY BLUBAUGH, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn.

WILLIAM CLARK, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y.

MELVILLE DANNER, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla.

JOHN STAFFORD, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kans.

In addition, W. H. HARDMAN, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kans., who last reported to these columns in the issue of November 26, 1938, returns to contributing comment on pictures he has run.

IN NAME ONLY: Cary Grant, Carole Lombard, Kay Francis—This is a ladies' picture and the men won't care much for it. Fine performance by the entire cast and Carole Lombard stock took a rise with us as a result of her work in this one. We never do any business on New Year's Day so box office suffered, but can't blame it on the picture. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 31-January 2.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—Family Night. A very pleasing program picture. If this series is continued, should do excellent business with the family trade. Several favorable comments; no (unfavorable) criticism. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 3.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six, S. C. Very small town patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett, Patsy Lee Parsons—Just good down to earth entertainment that any one but a moron will enjoy. Fine performance by an able cast. Little Patsy Lee Parsons just about steals the show and if we don't see a lot of her on the screen in the future, somebody in Hollywood is crazy. It's a swell picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 3-4.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SUED FOR LIBEL: Kent Taylor, Linda Hayes—OK for double bill for bargain night. We have played worse ones. Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 20-21.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—Ran this with "The Hoosier Schoolboy" and they came out in zero weather and packed the show. The best crowd in months and to top it off everyone liked both pictures. Played January 10-11.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore—Just another Chan picture but I believe it had a little more to go on than the past ones. Some good illusions and an added thrill element that helped put it over. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 5-6.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marorie Weaver—Very poor. It was just plain silly. Hope they do better next time. Jane is a favorite here.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—The Jane Withers pictures are OK here. Always draw fine and so far we have no complaint.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

ELSE MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Linda Darnell, Ann Sothern, James Ellison, Elsa Maxwell, Lynn Bari—Pleased. It is comedy, action, and is smart. Fair business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Anita Louise, Bela Lugosi, Patsy Kelly—Just when I had made a resolution never to run another "Ritz Brothers" picture, they come along with this. It's one of those shows that moves so fast you don't dare take time out to even buy a bag of popcorn. Plenty of comedy and suspense. It's so good I'd like to see it again, and Patsy Kelly deserves a few words of praise, too! Played January 12-13.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Richard Dix, Gladys George—Everybody enjoyed the short subjects and News. The rest of the program was rather a waste of time. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 17-18.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Nice picture, good color. Did not draw. Do not know why. Many disappointed because Alice Faye did not sing.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—Played this one very late. Poor print but the crowd liked it fine.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Henry Fonda, Tyrone Power, Nacy Kelly, Randolph Scott—Good. Drew the best business in fourteen months. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 29-30.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—Good picture and good story. Drew fairly well before Christmas.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Very good. Everybody pleased. Should go over in any theatre. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 7-8.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—Very interesting picture. Did fair business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—What a picture. 90 per cent of the patronage like it; 10 per cent did not. Played November 24-25.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Good educational picture. Failed to draw. Tracy excellent as usual. Picture needs extra advertising. Suggest school and church tieup. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 3-5.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Bobs Watson—This production is high grade, powerful entertainment and greatly surpassed the fondest expectations of every individual who seated himself in our auditorium. Although the picture has many touching scenes, it also has its share of comedy, most of which is provided by Henry Fonda, who does a swell job as "Thomas Watson", Bell's bosom pal. However, the individual who again registered with our audience was little Bobs Watson, outstanding in "Boys Town". No veteran of the screen has ever done a better bit of acting, has ever enacted a more touching scene than did Bobs when "Bell", after training the little deaf mute for a long period of time, placed him upon his father's knee and listened to him murmur "f-a-t-h-e-r". To make the scene more touching, the incident occurred on Christmas Eve before a beautifully trimmed tree in the living room of Bob's home. Our one regret is that this truly fine attraction was not done in color. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 13.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—Very good. Drew well and pleased all. Running time, 78 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—Was surprised how they stayed away from this one. Did not blame them. Shirley needs a change. Shirley is OK but give her a different story.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—Not a big picture but should be OK for Friday and Saturday in any spot. We were disappointed in the results at the box office but this was probably due to the Christmas spending spree our people have been on. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 29-30.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—Mixed opinions on this production. While many enjoyed the instrumental numbers, which were wonderful, I can hardly recommend this for a rural audience. However, a very good show. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds. David Niven—Good picture well produced. Did not draw but pleased. Played January 7-9.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—This drew better than I expected. It is high class in every way but I thought maybe it wouldn't get them in. I was fooled, as we had a good turnout. Personally, I enjoyed the film greatly but, if you don't like anything but popular music, this won't suit you. I run six "class" shows a year and advertise them as something different. Although some of my general patronage stay home, it attracts others. "The Mikado" and "The Moonlight Sonata" were the first in this series. I should think the idea would work in other places if you are near a small college where great interest is shown in such a project. Heifetz certainly can play the violin and the story is entertaining. Contact the groups interested in music and the local music teachers. Running time, 101 minutes. Played January 9.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Universal

CODE OF THE STREETS: "Little Tough Guys", Frankie Thomas, Harry Carey—These kinds of shows with "The Little Tough Guys" are well liked and neck and neck with "The Dead End Kids". Business usually above average on this type. However, just received a few complaints that there are too many pictures like this being shown. Played January 5-6.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

EX-CHAMP: Victor McLaglen, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Constance Moore—No business with us but well received by those who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle, Constance Moore—A picture which might be classed as a surprise. Plenty of good music, comedy and beautiful girls. Should do good business in any spot. Played November 26.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—They had a good story to start with but they sure muffed this one. They forgot that people like action and excitement in a gangster picture. Had some walkouts and lots of passes to the western at my other theatre. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 22-23.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore—Excellent action picture. Hope the next of the series pleases as well. These two boys make a good team. Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 9-11.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone—This failed to do business. Opinions were divided.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Nan Grey, Ian Hunter—The most to do about nothing I have ever seen. A great number of walkouts; even the people with passes couldn't stand it. If you have to play it, warn the people that there will be no refunds. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 6.—T. H. McNeill, Gloria Theatre, Ninety Six. S. C. Very small town patronage.

TWO BRIGHT BOYS: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—Not so hot. Pass it if possible or run it on a double bill. The trouble with the picture is the "woodenness" of the acting. Just another programmer. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier. Ind. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Ran this on a double bill with "Golden Boy". Both pictures are very good and should be single billed but when your competitor double bills most of the big pictures, guess I have to do the same. Played January 14-16.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Pleased about 50 per cent of those who saw it. The story was fair but they depended on "Love Affair's" popularity to carry it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 7-8.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

WITNESS VANISHES, THE: Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie—The picture is full of "Henglish" accent to make matters worse. If you cannot skip it, we suggest to pay and forget. Running time, 66 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, William Holden, Jane Bryan, Humphrey Bogart—Very good action picture which will please the men. Business was only fair, probably due to cold weather. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion — Somewhat of a turkey in my opinion but still the usual Saturday draw. Should be the second half of a double bill. This horse knows a few tricks but it still takes more than a horse to get them in. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 12-13.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Milton, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Should have been named "Flappers Delight" or something. The color was gorgeous but the average audience likes some story to go with it. Most of the customers were well on their way toward their New Year's celebration so it kind of sneaked by without too many kicks. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

State Rights

FEUD OF THE WEST: Hoot Gibson—Good western, spoiled by poor print with too many patches. Running time, 57 minutes. Played December 15-16.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALL AMERICAN BLONDES: Andy Clyde—Good basketball comedy. Audience liked it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ANDY CLYDE GETS SPRING CHICKEN: Andy Clyde—Plenty of laughs in this slapstick with Andy Clyde. Very good for those who like their comedies. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BOWS AND ARROWS: Howard Hill—One of the best sport shorts I have had the pleasure of showing. Running time, 10 minutes.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ELIAS HOWE: Fools Who Made History, No. 1—Entertaining. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JAI ALAI: Special Sport Thrills—An interesting description of the fast and strenuous sport of Latin America which has invaded this country. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAN MADE ISLAND: Columbia Tours—A very interesting and colorful trip around Treasure Island, locale of the West Coast World's Fair. Well worth booking. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NIGHT SHIRT BANDIT: Charley Chase—Better than average comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NOTHING BUT PLEASURE: Buster Keaton—Very good comedy. Good for any day and clean. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION: Inside Washington, No. 1—Here is a series that is really good. Very interesting and if you can get a tieup with the schools you really will help yourself and the children. Excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEACHER'S PEST: Broadway Comedies—Just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE SAPPY PEOPLE: Three Stooges—Good old slapstick comedy that kept audience in uproar. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Blubaugh, Ritz Theatre, Mapleton, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE HOME: Music Hall vanities—Our audience was very disappointed in this one and stated that the only interesting part was the song which was not too well sung by Nick Lucas. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: Three Stooges—A very silly comedy but it kept the adults laughing and the kids so excited I'm afraid I'll have to repair several seats. Run it on a Friday and Saturday or some night when you show to lots of kiddies.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Col. Farming and mining patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—A plug for the MGM feature, "Thunder Afloat", very obviously, but it is very well done and covers a subject that is of interest to everyone right now. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

CAPTAIN SPANKY'S SHOWBOAT: Our Gang Comedies—The general public likes these comedies and Metro has something here. There are too many cartoons and the public likes something like the Gang. Why don't Metro let Darla Hood loose on her singing. She certainly can sing for a child.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

DAD FOR A DAY: Our Gang—Always good. We never leave any of these on the shelf. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF WASHINGTON STATE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—FitzPatrick is seeing the sights of our own country now and I'll put them up against any he has filmed elsewhere. The scenic beauty of Mt. Rainier had them gasping. No kidding, though, it is dandy. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SKI BIRDS: Pete Smith Specialties—An Excellent short on skiing that is so different that it is refreshing. Do not miss it. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SKI BIRDS: Pete Smith Specialties—Don't remember ever having seen a lemon in this series. In fact, with the exception of their musicals, I think MGM has a very fine line of short subjects. Running time, eight minutes.—H Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT THE TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—The best musical we have had in some time.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

Reminded me of "March of Time". Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ACT YOUR AGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Typical Kennedy comedy with Edgar winding up at the bottom of the heap and father-in-law in the king row. Lots of laughs in this one. Running time, 18 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: Battle Fleets of England—This is entitled "Battle Fleets of England" and, if advertised, will bring business. Otherwise, "March of Time" doesn't mean anything here. Running time, 19 minutes.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE, NO. 5: Crisis in the Pacific—This is always a good series for me. This does a good job of reminding all of us that the Chinese War is still in progress in spite of the fact that another one has attracted all the attention lately. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewa, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 7

Bluebook School question No. 7 was: "(A) What detailed information is necessary before sound equipment can be operated with safety? Also why is it essential that projectionists thoroughly understand all details of the projection room wiring? (B) State reasons why all projection room wiring should be thoroughly well charted, and all circuits, switches and fuses labeled with a tag upon which is plainly written all details concerning it.

J. R. Prater answers thus: "The following detailed information is essentially necessary before sound equipment can be operated with assurance of maximum efficiency and that maximum excellence in results placed before audiences will occur:

"Lubrication: The projectionist must know every point where lubrication is required, what type of lubricant, how much and how often it should be used.

"Switches: He must know the location and purpose of every switch, what circuit or circuits each controls, and the order in which these switches should be closed in starting and opened in shutting down the equipment.

"Meter indications: He must know the correct normal reading of every meter in the projection room, what abnormal readings indicate, and what may be done to correct such conditions. Wherever possible each meter reading should be observed immediately upon turning on the apparatus, and once or more times after the equipment has warmed up.

"Controls: He must know where to find and how to adjust or operate all controls for regulating current, sound volume, making changeovers between projectors, changing to emergency equipment, etc.

"Threading the projectors: He must know exactly how the film should pass through the entire projector, where loops should be left, and exactly how large they should be.

"General information: In addition to the above, the projectionist must know all of the small details pertaining to the individual equipment and installation. For instance, how to adjust exciter lamps, take care of power supplies such as batteries, transformers, rectifiers, motor-generators, etc.; how to regulate sound volume in the auditorium as nearly as possible by observing monitor volume, or by other means how to recognize abnormal conditions throughout the system, where fuses, spare parts, records and reference data are kept, and so on for every small detail necessary to the proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the complete installation.

"Wiring: It is highly essential that projectionists understand, or have immediately available, all details of wiring of the installation they undertake to handle. This is true because at any time it may be necessary to replace a burned-out fuse, make tests, or do some other thing in which one or more circuits may be involved. This may (and usually does) occur either while sound stoppage impends, or while an audience waits anxiously (and impatiently) for sound to be resumed. In either case, there is no time to trace circuits or explore through one or more cabinets. The real projectionist is equipped with all such information in advance; he must be, if his employer can have assurance that he may be depended upon not only to keep the show going continuously, with maximum results.

"(B) For several reasons all projection room circuits, switches, fuses, etc., should be thoroughly charted, and every item of same labeled with a tag, the same plainly inscribed with all details concerning it.

"It is impossible to say at what hour or even moment a relief man wholly unfamiliar with the room and its wiring may have to take full charge, possibly while a show is running. Even when the projectionist is on vacation or enjoying his weekly day off, it is wholly unfair to expect a relief man to keep the show going at maximum efficiency without any means for guidance when something goes wrong in the circuits or sound equipments, as may well happen. It is, in fact, practically impossible for the regular projectionist to remember all details of all circuits without the aid of proper identification charts and tags. He may think he does, but in time of stress may forget and do something that will cause no end of trouble and delay.

"There is no good reason why every switch, every circuit, meter dial, terminal strip, fuse block, control panel, etc., should not be plainly marked with all information a strange projectionist might need if and when he is called in to take charge.

"Any man who thinks his job is made more secure by keeping details of the installation as secret as possible is very narrow-minded; also, he may justly be suspected of trying to cover up a considerable lack of real knowledge and high class ability."

To this I might add that by careful work, a complete job of labeling circuits and appurtenances thereto, may be done without creating any unsightliness. However, it is important that the labeling be perfectly legible.

Question No. 11

(A) From what three sources are sound currents obtained in a projection room?

(B) Explain the action of a "lens tube".

(C) What illumination does a photocell receive, and what does the photocell "see"?

(D) How does the photocell "see" frequency?

Edwin Carewe, Director, Dead

Edwin Carewe, 56, film director, was found dead Monday, presumably the victim of a heart ailment, in the home of Winston Platt, a nephew, in Hollywood. His most recent film venture was in organizing a company to make educational and religious films.

Mr. Carewe, whose real name was Jay Fox, was born in Gainesville, Tex. He was one-fourth Chickasaw Indian and received his first education in Indian schools, later studying law in the Universities of Missouri and Texas. He was strongly attracted to the theatre, however, and gave up his studies to join a traveling stock company.

Fourteen years' work brought him parts in New York productions and ultimately a chance to try his hand as stage manager and director. In 1914, he took a chance on the growing motion picture industry and joined the old Lubin company, first as a producer of travelogues and later as a director. Not long afterward he directed pictures for the original Metro company and for First National, becoming an independent producer in 1919. He worked for a time in the old Fort Lee, N. J., studios before transferring to Hollywood.

Among the pictures he directed were "Ramona," "Resurrection," "The Spoilers," "The Bad Man," 'Revenge," "Mighty Lak' a Rose," "Evangeline" and "Girl of the Golden West."

After 1930, he made a series of silent versions of American pictures, intended for the foreign market.

In 1932, he was defendant in an income tax action in which the federal government charged that his salary was $344,795 in 1928 and $150,081 in 1929.

Mr. Carewe was married four times, twice to Mary Akin, former screen actress. They were divorced in 1928 but remarried after 18 months.

Warner Suit Started

The suit of Sylvia Cowane against Warner Brothers has been discontinued and settled out of court. Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the Ohio Tax Commission, at Columbus, challenging authority to exempt film rentals from sales tax, and seeking to enforce collection of the impost from the inception of the law, have been granted a 15-day extension for the filing of answer.

Brulatour, Inc., and Jules Brulatour was discontinued in New York supreme court this week.

The plaintiffs seek to restrain the defendants from publishing a monthly magazine, Information Please, on the ground that it unfairly competes with the radio program.

Loew's Action Settled

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

HOW "SUBSEQUENTS" CAN PROFIT

It would take quite an issue—and that wouldn't be a bad idea—to enumerate the subsequent-run members who regularly turn in a job of exploitation on an attraction after the first-runs. It would take another issue—and that might even be a better idea—to list the devices and procedures used by the subsequents in getting their proper share of the takings.

As the Round Table pages numerously testify, members in other than the premiere spots time and again hit on some fat selling angle that has not been covered in the opening campaign. That often is a matter of individual showmanship as it is often a matter of timeliness in tieing in with spot happenings.

What might aptly be termed "promotional continuity" in advancing advertising momentum created by the first-run, is another proven method. Not necessarily new, but evidently profitable, it is currently explained by Charley Doctor, of the downtown second-run Dominion, in Vancouver, B. C.

"Pick out one slogan, one line, one angle, one song, or one highlight by which the feature is known and play that up," Doctor advises. "We don't try to sell the picture, or promote in the usual sense of the first-runs. We merely try to revive public memory of what they have heard and seen about the picture in the original promotion. That makes our newspaper copy, and any special stunts, fairly simple and straightforward."

Whatever method he fancies for getting the business, the subsequent manager who heeds the ever-swelling cry for bigger grosses knows there is a plenitude of boxoffice ammunition to hand. Obviously, the lad with eyes and ears open to cash in on the exploitation "hits and errors" of the first-runs is in a very advantageous spot to advance his personal fortunes.

TAKES IT WHERE HE FINDS IT

Bulking importantly among contributions in recent weeks, have been hard-hitting exploitations on behalf of the M-G-M short, "Drunk Driving." It appears that few promotional outlets were ignored in the public relations job of calling wide attention to this compelling subject.

The length of a picture does not necessarily measure its promotional potentialities. The smart showman, taking his exploitation where he finds it, often finds more important sources in the units that make up his added program.

Voting for the 1939 Quigley Silver and Bronze Grand Awards is slated for Tuesday, January 30, at the Hotel Astor, in New York. The Judging Committee, comprising leading industry executives, by majority vote will select the winners from among entrants with outstanding records of Quarter-Master Plaques, Quarter-Master Medals, and Quarter-Master Citations earned in the four quarters of the year.

Presentation of the Grand Awards this year will again take place in Hollywood. The winners will be honored with a week of especial entertainments arranged by Motion Picture Herald.

Results of the Grand Awards Judging will be published in the issue of February 3.

WHY ROUND TABLERS WIN

In every exploitation contest sponsored by distributors, Round Tablers invariably take down fat chunks of the prize money. Of the $4,000 offered by Columbia on "Angels Have Wings", $3,100 of it was won by Round Tablers. Of the 13 winners, 10 are active contributors to this department.

That members always win is not because they are contest-minded so much as they are competition-conditioned. The boys are used to competition. They thrive on it, whether battling brother managers for prizes or opposition entertainment for business.

To the distributor, the exploitation contest is aimed to induce extra effort in the field. For the Round Tabler, the prize competition acts as a showcase to emphasize the high quality of day-in-and-day-out showmanship the theatreman carries in stock.

For "Gone With the Wind" 'phone reservations at Loew's State, Cleveland, Milt Harris promoted a special line to the theatre, the number being Scarlett 1111. And now our Gert wants to know what number the Cleveland girls dial to get Rhett Butler.

Unusual attention was afforded James Cagney and "The Fighting 69th" in a stunt worked out between Charles Smakwitz, Warner Circuit district manager in Albany, and Dick Conners, Motion Picture Herald correspondent. Tie-in was based on the fact that Cagney graduated from grammar school in New York with George Toporcer, new manager of the Albany baseball club.

A welcome-to-Albany dinner for Toporcer was held in the Elks Club, with Conners as chairman. The program, put on by Warners', included a cut of the graduation picture showing Toporcer and Cagney together, and contained greetings to the "two grammar school kids who made good in their own chosen vocation".

Males Vs. Nurses In Diaper Contest On 'Child Is Born'

Mere men who profess knowledge on how to diaper babies have been showing their stuff in contests arranged for "Child Is Born," the latest to be reported from Philadelphia on the date at Warners Stanton, arranged by Manager Hollander with a hand from Al Zimbalist and reported here by divisional ad head, Ev Callow.

The Philly lineup broadcast over KYW had students of University of Pennsylvania on one side with city's prettiest nurses on the other. Award was a Geraldine Fitzgerald cup—won by the men, and presented by the city's oldest great-grandmother. All residents who became fathers during the picture's playdate were guests at the broadcast and at the theatre. The new "poppas" took part in the radio program, describing their emotions on becoming parents.

Diaper services were tied in to banner their trucks with theatre copy and to distribute heralds with packages. Milk and bread distributors cooperated similarly, securing heralds to bottles and packages with rubber bands. Drug stores were promoted for posters carrying scene shots and hooking the title to various pharmaceutical aids. For organizational cooperation, special showing was held for local motion picture forum and representatives of the city's women's federation.

Waugh Features Star Contest

On "Child Is Born" at the Warner, Memphis, Howard Waugh tied in the date to a newspaper contest in which photos of present day stars when they were very young, were run and readers asked to identify them. Each photo was accompanied with a four-line rhyme cued to aid entrants. Five photos were run, one each day, rules requiring that the five be with identifications mailed together, plus a 50-word note about any one of the five chosen telling just what qualities of the chosen star entrant fancied and how the star became poular. Cash and guest ticket prizes were awarded.

Nine-Merchant Promotion Sells Date for Johnson

Special sets of small cards, each containing one letter of the title, were used in a contest on "Ninotchka" by Bill Johnson for the date at the Opera House, Millinocket, Me. Nine different stores each distributed one set, cards placed in all outgoing packages. Customers were advised to keep the cards, with guest tickets to those collecting entire set that spelled out the title. One of the letters was limited to 25 to keep the pass distribution under control.

Johnson tied in with local weekly for a limerick contest, guest tickets or subscriptions to paper given for the best last lines, the snapper being that the line had to rhyme with the title. For street Saturday night shoppers, Bill had small packages of spice made up and imprinted with tiein copy to the effect that envelope was full of spice as was the picture.

"Drunk Driving" Campaigns Enlist Aid of City Heads

Proclamation formulated by John Burhorn and Jack Albertson, for a Drive Safely week in Indiana Harbor and East Chicago, both in Indiana, was the leadoff in the campaign created by the theatremen for the joint showing of "Drunk Driving" at the Indiana and Voge theatres. Proclamation was signed and published by the Mayor, and East Chicago Safety Council falling in line as did the local insurance boards. Full page ads on the date were paid for by insurance companies and publicity was plentiful.

Traffic judges tied in by displaying posters in court and a series of window displays selling safety were promoted. Arrangements were made with the schools to accommodate students at lower admission, with special tickets printed and distributed at the schools. Bannered wrecks towed by trouble-cars were found effective for street ballyhoo.

Brown Holds Special Screening

Campaign for "Drunk Driving" at the Irvin, Bloomington, Ill., was inaugurated by Gil Brown, Public Great States city manager, with a screening followed by an open discussion before insurance heads, civic officials, P.T.A., better films council, judges and newspaper editors. Result was an appropriation of $600 by the state farm insurance companies to exploit the short, most of it going for a smash double truck with the title bannered across the two pages in giant letters. Budget also allowed for special showings to high school and university students.

Announcements were made for the date in most every local church and permission granted Brown to place bannered wrecks on all four corners of the court house lawn. Topping the drive, says Gil, was a special morning screening for insurance employees at which time the Round Tabler made a talk plugging the theatre's holiday gift books. A number of sales were made as a result.

Swedish Royalty Attends Special "Chips" Screening

In the midst of nearby war alarms, promotionally minded showmen in Sweden vigorously continue to ply their trade, as indicated by the job of work done by W. Fuchs, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicist, in Stockholm, for the date on "Mr. Chips" at the Rigoletto, leading off with an invitation performance attended by Swedish royalty and cabinet members. Also on hand were American and English ministers, school heads and leading authors. Comprehensive newspaper publicity resulted.

Among the stunts that took hold, was a small sign hung inside the doors to hundreds of local stores. Copy read: "Goodbye, Mr. Chips. Welcome Back." Special ads adapted from a recent MGM trade ad showing the baby at the telephone, were used four weeks ahead in dailies and weeklies. Copy read: "Papa is not at home. He is at the Rigoletto seeing," etc. The same made into cards, was also placed in windows of well situated shops.

Serialization Planted in Papers

Newspaper tieins included a 12-chapter serialization published locally and also in 60 papers throughout the country. Special articles were forwarded to an added 300. Daily that ran serial, in advance sponsored a "do you remember any Mr. Chips," contest. Unusual tiein was one made with a language course company, wherein scenes from the picture were run in ads as a tiein for courses offered in English.

AWARDS COMMENT FROM THE FIELD

W. C. RICORD

Manager, Grauman's Egyptian
Los Angeles, Cal.

I like to set a goal for myself and the stiffer the competition I have, the better I like it. Out here in Hollywood one has to practically double-sell a picture as we find the public knows more about the picture before it leaves the studio than we managers do. We pick one picture a week and do everything possible to put over a campaign on the picture picked. While, naturally, we repeat ourselves, we try to go in for unusual displays. I always watch the pages of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD for additional ideas. We keep what we call a scrap-book of every idea used by theatres all over the country. Some of these ideas are re-used by individual theatre managers along with their own ideas.

First I would like to say that this Quigley business is like a dog after he gets his first taste of blood; he doesn't stop but keeps trying to excel his last job of advertising.

Personally I think it gives one something to work for as I know Famous Players Canadian Corp. of Toronto head office always acknowledges any of the Awards that are won by any of their managers and publicity men.

This in itself encourages a person and, therefore, by getting results such as winning a quarterly citation, you must naturally be helping the box office; especially if you have a small budget and stretch it a long way.

JOE RUDDICK

I should like to note that the lobby on "Kentucky," which garnered a Quarter-Master Citation quite some time ago, was further rewarded with second place bonus money in a contest within National Theatres on this picture.

In the words of somebody or other, "Effort will eventually be rewarded." That eventuality would seem to be in sight at least, I shouldn't want to underestimate the 1939 Quigley Competitions' help in moving it a little closer.

I believe your Quigley Awards continue to be a fine method of stimulating box office showmanship, and I am sure they do their share in bringing recognition to many outstanding jobs which are done by the managers in the fields. Without question the idea behind Quigley Awards for managerial self-expression is sound and commendable.

The forgotten man "the Manager"—the heart of the show business—who contributes his exploitation talents for review before the Awards Committee—Profits! Perhaps, not immediately by promotion, salary raise or bonus but surely in self-confidence, pride and accomplishment. Eventually the bosses, distributors and producers must recognize efforts which bring more bread and butter at the box office.

Hence, the Quigley Awards Must Go On!

SAYS ROUND TABLE WARS AGAINST INERTIA

Naturally I am delighted to have been asked to serve again as a judge and naturally I accept.

I can only reiterate my effusions of the past years. My enthusiasm for the general good accomplished within the industry by the Quigley Awards has not been dimmed one iota. I maintain, as I always have, that only through the vigorous war against inertia that is waged by the Round Table will the fullest possibility of showmanship come to the fore.

I think the Quigley Awards are a big asset to the motion picture industry. They bring out the best ideas and endeavors on the part of the exploitation staff in each theatre and thereby bring the advertising of the motion picture industry to a higher standard.

I think the Quigley Publications are doing good work in continuing these awards, and also the discussions of the Managers' Round Table. This brings about the meeting of minds from different parts of the country to the advantage of every theatre manager.

RALPH E. PHILLIPS

There is no doubt that the Quigley Awards have made the box offices click—every showman primarily thinks of the box-office, but with the awards there lies a competitive spirit that makes us all give more serious thought to each individual promotion. Sure, the Boss likes to see his boys win—and good showmanship will win for the individual too. My fortnighters and Quartermaster awards have not hurt me, thanks.

Hartford Critic Explains "Stream-Line" Reviewing

Breaks Down Picture Treatment Into Four Divisions

by JULIAN B. TUTHILL
Theatre Editor
Hartford Daily Times

When a motion picture editor sets himself up as a critic of public taste and cinema art —he is assuming a vast responsibility.

Motion pictures are so different from the legitimate drama that the usual measuring-sticks of critical approval or disapproval cannot be employed. A group of actors appearing on a stage gives a different performance for each audience . . . and success or failure may be measured in terms of a single evening.

Motion pictures, produced on identical reels of celluloid, give essentially the same performance for every audience, friendly or unfriendly, sophisticated or provincial.

A movie actor, therefore, must shade his portrayal to please the greatest number of people if he is to achieve the maximum of success expected under his contract. Under the present system of motion picture distribution, there is no such thing as a really successful "class" picture. Films calculated to appeal only to certain types of audiences cannot be expected to produce sufficient revenue to pay their freight, no matter how much some of the more mature moviegoers might wish that they could.

Arbitrary Conventions Removed

Aside from a few fundamentals (more often the responsibility of the continuity editor or the cameraman than that of the performer) there are few standards upon which a film critic can place an accurate evaluation.

After several years of experimentation and observation in what might be considered a typical theatrical community, The Hartford Times has evolved a new streamline system for covering motion pictures that gets away from the arbitrary conventions of theatrical reviewing.

Realizing that the movie-going public is made up of men and women in all walks of life, with a wide variety of tastes and foibles, the review of each picture is broken down into four divisions, including (1) a general lead, (2) a paragraph or two about the story, (3) an evaluation of the work of the leading players and (4) a statement based on audience reaction in the theatre.

Finds Reviewing Simplified

An effort is made to write the reviews in a conversational style, much in the manner one neighbor might use in telling another about the picture in the theatre around the corner. If the audience reaction differs vastly from that of the reviewer a notation of that fact may be made. The paragraphs dealing with the story are carefully prepared to give enough of a synopsis so that a person might determine whether or not he or she would like the picture, but the final outcome of the situations involved is usually not divulged.

Several months of experience with this "streamlined" reviewing system reveals a softening effect on the usual critical opinion of the reviewer. An inferior picture still suffers its just fate, and a particularly good one gains its proper reward; but the intelligence of the patron who disagrees with the critic is no longer insulted.

Film critics in other cities, whose attention has been called to the new system, have shown an interest and have wondered if it makes the task of reviewing more complicated. Actually, the reverse is true. It is easier to write a review if one takes it in four easy doses. It also takes less space to say the same thing, which is an important factor in these days of advancing newsprint costs.

City's Culture Recognized

Hartford is a community widely recognized as a city of unusual cultural integrity. It has annual performances by the Metropolitan Opera, the Ballet Russe, all the great concert artists and many of the successful Broadway plays in its luxurious 3,300-seat Bushnell Memorial Auditorium.

The Avery Memorial, comfortably seating 300, serves as a home for three experienced "little Theatre" groups. Here, too, a number of intimate recitals and ballet premieres have been held, including Gertrude Stein's celebrated "Four Saints in Three Acts."

Contrary to public belief, however, Hartford is not "snooty" in its tastes. Motion pictures fare about the same in Hartford as they do in neighboring manufacturing communities.

The Hartford Times, which goes into 95 per cent of the homes in the area each day, is read by people of every standard of intelligence. Its theatre page is the most complete in Connecticut. By covering all events, not only locally but on Broadway and in Boston, in the same streamlined style the readers develop their own technique for interpreting the reviews in their own individual language. That could not be done if comment were arbitrarily devised to please one faction or another.

By making the theatre page a show in itself, designed to entertain the general public just as Hollywood films are produced for the multitudes, a large number of consistent readers has been regimented and the messages contained in the paid advertisements are thus assured community-wide attention rather than the interest of a mere handful who might agree with highly personalized comment written for the benefit of only a fraction of the public.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lambert's "Smith" Marquee

To sell his opening on "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Round Tabler Stanley Lambert at the Rialto in Racine, Wisc., planted giant cutout figures of James Stewart and Jean Parker atop his marquee. Visible from blocks distance, playdates and title were conspicuously placed at base.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Page

(1) In order that there would be no box-office apprehensions as to the entertainment calibre of the newest "Judge Hardy," the Oscar Doob forces explained the reason for the necessary switch from the Capitol, where this series is shown, to the circuit's Criterion, a few streets away on Broadway. Explanatory box topped everything else for especial attention. Size: 135 lines on 2 col.

(2) To build up the unusual story of "Mice and Men" for the date at Warners' Aldine, Philadelphia, Ev Callow followed through by using this 125 lines on 2 col., a preliminary announcement of coming ads, with strong teaser copy predominating. Deference to the author's draw was indicated in his billing over the cast and also in book reproduction. Prone figure of Fields aimed to identify her character in the picture.

(3) Campaign set by John Wright and James Dunn, is here illustrated in the 140 lines on 3 col., for "Grapes of Wrath," at the New York Rivoli, one of a series of nine layouts carrying the original work of Thomas Benton, famed American artist, especially engaged by Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, Twentieth Century-Fox, to illustrate the picture's advertising in the tempo of the widely-read novel. Each of five of the layouts carry head drawings of the lead characters as conceived by the artist with a group action scene dominating the biggest spread of the campaign, a five column on 150 lines.

(4) An indication of the value placed upon motion picture players as an attention-attractor in merchandising advertising, is this high-power promotion secured by Jerry Zigmond, for "Four Daughters" at the RKO Newman, Kansas City. The 140 lines on 4 col., was dominated by the players in bridal costume and the two lines of tiein heading, all against a benday background in keeping with the theme. Theatre credits were carried next to store name for quick identification.

(5) Stressing the current bill at the New York Paramount as a "sweetheart show," the campaign was trademarked with the heart background, in this instance used similarly for "Remember the Night" and stage show. Held together by the center type panel, the 150 lines on 3 col., proved among the most effective layouts used recently in this situation.

(6) Realizing that the new Garbo character as depicted in "Ninotchka" needed some special selling in his far-north Canadian mining town, Sid Scott, Capitol, Sudbury, Ontario, Can., struck upon the idea of having one of the most best known locals endorse the picture as illustrated. Result was record grosses for this star, says Scott.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.
